A GLOSSARY

THE WORKS

WILLIAM SHAKESPEARE

THE REV. ALEXANDER DYCE

LONDON
BICKERS & SON, LEICESTER SQUARE 1880

NOTICE.

DYCE'S valuable Glossary to the Works of William Shakespeare being, equally with "Clarke's Concordance to Shakespeare," one of the books which should be possessed by every student of the Works of the Poet, the publishers have no hesitation in producing a new edition. As it originally formed a part of Dyce's Shakespeare, 9 vols., the volumes and pages quoted refer to that book, but this in nowise affects its use for any other edition.

BICKERS & SON.

Nov. 1880.

PREFACE.

THE present volume contains a great variety of illustration, being a Glossary of uncommon words, of less uncommon words in their different significations, of passages which convey an obscure or doubtful sense, of proverbial expressions, of cant phrases, of manners and customs, of games and sports, of dresses and weapons, &c., and of numerous allusions with which only archæologists and antiquaries are supposed to be familiar.

Among the difficulties incident to a glossarist not the least is that of determining the nicer shades of meaning in which many words are used; and very probably some philologers may think that I have occasionally made distinctions where none in fact exist, and sometimes confounded what ought to have been kept distinct. Nor do I feel sure that sundry other things will not be objected to, and perhaps with justice, in such a mass of omnigenous matter as the following pages comprise.

In availing myself of the comments of my predecessors from Theobald downwards, I have throughout acknowledged my obligations whenever they were at all important; which I rather mention because of late it has been too much the fashion to borrow largely and verbatim from the notes of the Variorum Shakespeare, and yet to conceal the debt.

NOTE.

[BESIDES the additions Mr. Dyce had made to his Glossary in the revised copy of his Shakespeare, from which this edition is printed, some further, though slight, insertions were discovered upon a set of loose sheets after a considerable portion of the present volume was worked off. The entries which were found too late to be incorporated in the text are given here, and those which followed p. 254 appear in their proper place in the body of the Glossary.]

p. 47, after line 31, insert :

p. 47, after line 33, insert :

"This explanation [Ritson's] misses the peculiar force of the epithet bottled, which is exactly equivalent to bunch-backed, and like it emphasizes Richard's deformity. 'That bottled spider,' therefore, literally means that humped or hunched venomous creature. The term bottled is still provincially applied to the big, large-bodied, round-backed spider, that in the summer and autumn spreads its web across open spaces in the hedges, 'obvious to vagrant flies.' What, also, has escaped the commentators, the word bottle was used with this precise signification for a hunch or hump in Shakespeare's own day. In a popular work published a few years before he came to London, and with which he was familiar, we find 'bottles of flesh' given as a synonym for great wens in the throat—the Italian word gozzuti being glossed in the margin as follows: 'men in the mountaynes with great bottles of flesh under their chin through the drinking of snow water.' We still retain this meaning of the word in a number of phrases and epithets, such as bottlenose, a big or bunchy nose; bottlehead, provincial for great, thick, or blockhead; and, not to multiply examples, in the bluebottle fly, which is literally the bunchy or unwieldy blue fly." The Edinburgh Review, July 1868, p. 66.

~~NOTE~~

p. 118, after line 13, insert :

(According to Fortiguerra, when Astolfo died ;

" non fu posto in una buca,
Ma con incenso, mirra, ed elisire Fu imbalsamato, acciò 'mi riconduca
' Interò in Francia, e di nero cipresso
' Fero una cassa, e sel portaro appresso."

Ricciardetto, c. xix. st. 82.)

p. 121, line 25, add :

Compare, too ;

" Gripe. But I am sure she loues not him.

Will. Nay, I dare take it on my death she loues him."

Wily Begvilde, sig. c verso, ed. 1606.

p. 154, after line 35, insert :

(" Che quella grotta e quel gran precipizio
Non era cosa vera, ma apparente

Ma le donzelle e il fortunato ospizio Fantastico non era certamente."

Fortiguerra's Ricciardetto, c. xxi. st. 76.)

p. 227, line 28, before virginal insert virginals or.

p. 227, line 36, add : and see virginals—The.

p. 254, after line 13, insert :

(Compare Peele's Edward I.;

" Edward, my king, my lord, and lover dear,
Full little dost thou wot how this retreat,
As with a sword, hath slain poor Mortimer."

GLOSSARY TO SHAKESPEARE.

A.

a, frequently omitted in exclamations: What fool is she, that knows, &c. i. 268; What dish o' poison has she dressed him! iii. 357; Cassius, what night is this! vi. 627; what thing is it that I never Did see man die! vii. 709.

abate, to lower, to depress, to cast down in spirit: as most Abated captives, vi. 199 (see note 162, vi. 262).

abate, to contract, to cut short: Abate thy hours, ii. 303.

abate, to blunt (equivalent to rebate): Abate the edge of traitors, v. 454 (see note 131, v. 478; to which note add, from Browne's Britannia's Pastorals,

"With plaints which might abate a Tyrants knife."

Book 1, Song 4, p. 87, ed. 1625 and from Milton's Paradise Regained,

"To slacken virtue, and abate her edge." Book ii. 455);

Which once in him abated, iv. 318.

abate, to take away, to except: Abate throw at novum ("Except or put the chance of the dice out of the question," MALONE; and see novum), ii. 226.

Abcee-book—An, an A-B-C-book, a primer, which sometimes included a catechism, iv. 10.

("To learne the Horne-booke and the Abcee through."

Wither's Abuses Stript and Whipt,—Inconstancy, sig. p 2, ed. 1618.)

abominable, ii. 208: The old mode of spelling abominable: it appears to have been going out of use in the time of Shakespeare, who here ridicules it.

abhor, yea, from my soul Refuse you for my judge—I utterly, v. 520:

"These are not mere words of passion, but technical terms in the canon law. Detestor and Recuso. The former, in the language of canonists, signifies no more than—I protest against" (BLACKSTONE): "The words are Holinshed's; '—and therefore openly protested that she did utterly abhor, refuse, and forsake such a judge'" (MALONE).

abide, to sojourn, to tarry awhile: and yet it will no more but abide, iii. 465; abide within, vii. 35.

abide, to answer for, to be accountable for, to stand the consequences of: let no man abide this deed, But we the doers, vi. 649; some will dear abide it, vi. 658.

abjects—The queen's, "means 'the most servile of her subjects'" (MASON), v. 354.

able, "to qualify or uphold" (WARBURTON), "to warrant or answer for" (Nares's Gloss.): I'll able 'em, vii. 326.

abode, to forebode, to portend: aboded, v. 487; aboding, v. 317.

abodements, forebodements, omens, v. 301.

abortive pride, "pride that has had birth too soon, pride issuing before its time" (JOHNSON), v. 166.

abridgment have you for this evening?—What, ii. 313; look, where my abridgment comes, vii. 142: In the first of these passages abridgment means a dramatic performance, and in the second it is applied to the players, as being, I presume, the persons who represent an abridgment: "By abridgment our author may mean a dramatic performance, which crowds the events of years into a few hours. . . . It may be worth while, however, to observe, that in the North the word abatement had the same meaning as diversion or amusement. So, in the Prologue to the 5th Book of G. Douglas's version of the Æneid, abrook, to brook, to endure, v. 139.

absent time—To take advantage of the, To take advantage of the time of the king's absence, iv. 137.

absolute, highly accomplished, perfect: contends in skill With absolute Marina, viii. 45.

absolute, determined: Be absolute for death, i. 477.

absolute, positive, certain: I'm absolute 'twas very Cloten, vii. 698.

abuse, deception: This is a strange abuse, i. 512; My strange and self-abuse, vii. 42.

abuse, to deceive, to impose upon: I'm mightily abus'd ("I am strangely imposed on by appearances, I am in a strange mist of uncertainty," JOHNSON), vii. 331; The Moor's abus'd by some most villanous knave, vii. 448; You are a great deal abused in too bold a persuasion, vii. 646; Abuses me to damn me, vii. 147.

abysm, abyss, i. 179; vii. 561; viii. 405.

accept and peremptory answer—Pass our, iv. 501: "Deliver our acceptance of these articles,—the opinion which we shall form upon them, and our peremptory answer to each particular" (MALONE): "Pass our acceptance of what we approve, and pass a peremptory answer to the rest" (TOLLET): See note 167, iv. 533.

accite, to call, to summon: we will accite . . . all our state, iv. 393; He by the senate is accited home, vi. 284; what accites (moves, impels) your most worshipful thought to think so? iv. 335.

accommodated—Better, iv. 356 (twice); Accommodated!—it comes of accommodo, iv. 357; Accommodated; that is . . . accommodated . . . thought to be accommodated, ibid.: Accommodate, which Bardolph so ludicrously attempts to define, was a fashionable word in Shakespeare's days, and often introduced with great impropriety: Jonson, as well as our poet, ridicules the use of it.

accomplish'd with the number of thy hours, "when he was of thy age" (MALONE), iv. 127.

accordingly valiant, conformably, proportionably, valiant, iii. 240.

account, accounted: account no sin, viii. 6.

accuse, an accusation: false accuse, v. 146.

Acheron, ii. 301; vi. 333; vii. 43: It is not a little amusing to find Malone almost persuaded by a Mr. Plumptre that, in the last of the passages just referred to, the poet was thinking of "Ekron" in Scripture. Did these matter-of-fact commentators suppose that Shakespeare himself, had they been able to call him up from the dead, could have told them "all about it"? Not he;—no more than Fairfax, who, in his translation of the Gerusalemme (published before Macbeth was produced), has made Ismeno frequent "the shores of Acheron," without any warrant from Tasso;

"A Christian once, Macon he now adores, Nor could he quite his wonted faith forsake,
But in his wicked arts both oft implores Helpe from the Lord and aide from Pluto blake;
He, from deepe caues by Acherons darke shores (Where circles vaine and spels he vs'd to make),
T' aduise his king in these extremes is come; Achitophell so counsell'd Absalome."

B. ii. st. 2.

The original has merely

"Ed or dalle spelonche, ove lontano Dal volgo esercitar suol l' arti ignote, Vien," &c.:

For instances how loosely the name Acheron is used by our early poets, see, in Sylvester's Du Bartas, ed. 1641, The Second Day of the First Week, p. 15, The Vocation, pp. 149, 155, and The Fathers, p. 162; also Hubert's Edward the Second, p. 161, ed. 1629.

aches, make thee roar—Fill all thy bones with, i. 188; Aches contract and starve your supple joints, vi. 514 ; Their fears of hostile strokes, their aches, losses, vi. 571 : In the above lines aches is a dissyllable, according to the usage of the poets of Shakespeare's days and of those of a much later period (Boswell adduces an instance of this pronunciation from Swift ; and here is one from Blackmore, "Cripples, with aches and with age oppress, Crawl on their crutches to the grave for rest."

Eliza, 1705, Book ix. p. 249).

Achilles' spear, Is able with the change to kill and cure,—Like to, v. 190 : Telephus having been wounded by Achilles, could be cured only by the rust scraped from the spear which had caused the wound : the particulars of his story (related with some variations) may be found in the mythological writers.

("Così od' io che soleva la lancia
D' Achille, e del suo padre, esser cagione Prima di trista, e poi di buona mancia.")

Dante, Inferno, C. xxxi. 4.

"And fell in speche of Telephus the king,
And of Achilles for his queinte spere,
For he coude with it bothe hele and dere," &c.

Chaucer, The Squires Tale, v. 10552, ed. Tyrwhitt.

Tasso has

"Ahi crudo Amor ! oh' egualmente n' ancide L' assenzio e 'l mel che tu fra noi dispensi ;
E d' ogni tempo egualmente mortali Vengon da te le medicine e i mali."

Gerus. C. iv. 92 ;

which Fairfax chooses to render thus,

"Cupids deepe riners haue their shallow fordes ;
His griefes bring ioyes, his losses recompences ;
He breeds the sore, and cures vs of the paine : Achilles' lance that wounds and heales againe.") acknown on't—Be not you, Do not you confess to any knowledge of the matter, be not acquainted with it, vii. 425.

aconitum, aconite, monkshood or wolf's-bane, iv. 378.

acquittance, to acquit : Your mere enforcement shall acquittance me, v. 415.

acture, explained by Malone as "synonymous with action," viii. 444.

Adam—And called, ii. 81. An allusion to one of the three noted outlaws, famous for their skill in archery, who figure in the spirited and picturesque ballad entitled Adam Bel, Clym of the Cloughe, and Wylliam of Cloudesle : see it in Ritson's one-volume collection, Anc. Pop. Poetry, and in Percy's Rel. of A. E. Poetry, vol. i. p. 154, ed. 1794.

Adam Cupid, vi. 409 : see note 39, vi. 481.

Adam was a gardener, v. 172 : An allusion most probably to the old rhyme, "When Adam delv'd, and Eve span," &c. adamant, the magnet, the loadstone : hard-hearted adamant, ii. 279 ; As iron to adamant, vi. 52.

addiction, inclination : to what sport and revels his addiction leads him, vii. 403.

addiction, the being addicted or given to : Since his addiction was to courses vain, iv. 423.

addition, title, mark of distinction : Bull-bearing Milo his addition yield, vi. 42 ; his addition shall be humble, vi. 50 ; A great addition earned in thy death, vi. 76 ; Bear Th' addition nobly ever, vi. 157 ; In which addition, hail, vii. 11 ; whereby he does receive Particular addition, vii. 34 ; with swinish phrase Soil our addition ("disparage us by using, as characteristic of us, terms that imply or impute swinish properties, that fix a swinish addition or title to our names" (CALDECOTT), vii. 120 ; the least syllable of thy addition, vii. 279 ; no addition, nor my wish, vii. 435 ; the addition Whose want even kills me, vii. 439 ; they are devils' additions, i. 372 ; Where great additions swell's, iii. 233 ; hath robbed many beasts of their particular additions ("their peculiar and characteristic qualities or denominations," MALONE), vi. 9 ; all th' additions to a king, vii. 253.

address, to prepare, to make ready : address me to my appointment, i. 392 ; he does address himself unto, iii. 254 ; address yourself to entertain them, iii. 467 ; address thee instantly, v. 194 ; Let us address to tend on Hector's heels, vi. 71 ; address Itself to motion, vii. 114 ; Were all address'd to meet you, ii. 177 ; the Prologue is address'd, ii. 315 ; have I address'd me, ii. 374 ; Address'd a mighty power, iii. 76 ; Our navy is address'd, iv. 376 ; for the march are we address'd, iv. 456 ; He is address'd, vi. 647 ; address'd them Again to sleep, vii. 23 ; Even in your armours, as you are address'd, viii. 29 ; address'd to answer his desire, viii. 333.

admiral, the chief ship of a fleet (if not that which carried the admiral) : thou art our admiral, iv. 259 ; Th' Antoniad, the Egyptian admiral, vii. 551.

admittance, fashion : of great admittance (admitted into the best company,—of high fashion), i. 370 ; of Venetian admittance, i. 382.

Adonis' gardens, That one day bloom'd, and fruitful were the next, v. 21 : "The proverb alluded to seems always to have been used in a bad sense, for things which make a fair show for a few days, and then wither away : but the [unknown] author of this play, desirous of making a show of his learning, without considering its propriety, has made the Dauphin apply it as an encomium. There is a very good account of it in Erasmus's Adagia" (BLAKEWAY).

advance this jewel, "prefer it, raise it to honour by 'wearing it'" (JOHNSON), vi. 520.

advancement—His own disorders Deserv'd much less, vii. 289 : "Certainly means, that Kent's disorders had entitled him even to a post of less honour than the stocks" (STEEVENS).

adversaries do in law—As, iii. 128 : Here by adversaries we are to understand the counsel of adversaries.

adversity !—Well said, vi. 81 : see note 147, vi. 124.

advertise—To one that can my part in him, "To one who is himself already sufficiently conversant with the nature and duties of my office" (MALONE), i. 446.

advertisement, admonition, moral instruction : my griefs cry louder than advertisement, ii. 129.

advertising and holy to your business, "attentive and faithful to," &c. (JOHNSON), i. 517.

advice, consideration : with more advice, . . . without advice, i. 285 ; after more advice, i. 519 ; upon more advice, ii. 407 ; upon advice, iii. 117 ; vi. 294 ; lack advice, iii. 248 ; upon good advice, iv. 119 ; on our more advice, iv. 439 (see note 40, iv. 515) ; with advice and silent secrecy, v. 135 ; Out of your best advice, vii. 640.

advise, equivalent to persuade : Signior Leonato, let the friar advise you, ii. 124.

advise, followed by you, thee, &c., to consider : Advise you what you say, iii. 382 ; bid thy master well advise himself, iv. 463 ; Advise thee, Aaron, what is to be done, vi. 330 ; Advise yourself, vii. 275.

advised, deliberate : advisèd watch, ii. 349 ; advis'd respect, iv. 55 ; advisèd purpose, iv. 117.

advised, aware, cautious, circumspect, considerate : mad or well-advis'd (in possession of reflection and reason), ii. 21 ; I am advisèd what I say ("I am not going to speak precipitately or rashly, but on reflection and consideration," STEEVENS), ii. 48 ; And were you well advis'd ("acting with sufficient deliberation," STEEVENS) ? ii. 223 ; therefore be advis'd, ii. 359 ; Be well advis'd, iv. 29 ; You were advis'd his flesh was capable, &c. iv. 319 ; Th' advisèd head, iv. 429 ; Are ye advis'd ? v. 129 ; bid me be advisèd how I tread, v. 140 ; livery of advisèd age, v. 194 ; being well advis'd, v. 371 ; bade me be advis'd, v. 383 ; any well-advisèd friend, v. 439 ; general, be advis'd, vii. 382 ; O, be advis'd, viii. 259.

aery, the nest, also the young brood in the nest, of an eagle, hawk, or other bird of prey, iv. 68 ; v. 370.

aery of children, little eyases, that cry out on the top of question—An, vii. 140 : "Shakespeare here alludes to the encouragement at that time given to some 'eyry' or nest of children, or 'eyases' (young hawks) [see eyases], who spoke in a high tone of voice. There were several companies of young performers about this date engaged in acting, but chiefly the Children of Paul's and the Children of the Revels, who, it seems, were highly applauded, to the injury of the companies of adult performers. From an early date the choir-boys of St. Paul's, Westminster, Windsor, and the Chapel Royal, had been occasionally so employed, and performed at Court" (COLLIER).

Æsop fable, &c.—Let, v. 314: "The Prince calls Richard, for his crookedness, Æsop," &c. (JOHNSON).

affect, to love ("To affect (love), Diligo." Coles's Lat. & Engl. Dict.): a lady . . . whom I affect, i. 293; Dost thou affect her? ii. 82; I do affect the very ground, ii. 175; If you affect him, iii. 128; she did affect me, iii. 355; Sir John affects thy wife, i. 362; since he affects her most, v. 81; And may, for aught thou know'st, affected be, vi. 298.

affect the letter, affect, practise alliteration, ii. 194.

affection, imagination, or "the disposition of the mind when strongly affected or possessed by a particular idea" (MALONE): Affection! thy intention stabs the centre, xi. 424.

affection, sympathy: affection, Master of passion, ii. 396.

affectioned, affected, iii. 350.

affects, affections: shifts to strange affects, i. 477; every man with his affects is born, ii. 167; to banish their affects with him, iv. 121; the young affects In me defunct, vii. 391 (see note 24, vii. 474).

affeer'd, (a law-term) confirmed, established, vii. 54.

affin'd, joined by affinity, vi. 17; Whether I in any just term am affin'd To love the Moor ("Do I stand within any such terms of propinquity or relation to the Moor, as that it is my duty to love him?" JOHNSON), vii. 376; If partially affin'd, or leagu'd in office (Here affin'd "means 'related by nearness of office'," STEEVENS), vii. 409.

affront, a meeting face to face, a hostile encounter: That gave th' affront with them, vii. 714.

affront, to meet, to encounter: Affront his eye, iii. 492; Affront Ophelia, vii. 148; Your preparation can affront no less Than what you hear of ("Your forces are able to face such an army as we hear the enemy will bring against us," JOHNSON), vii. 708; That my integrity and truth to you Might be affronted with the match and weight Of such a winnow'd purity in love ("I wish my integrity might be met and matched with such equality and force of pure unmingled love," JOHNSON), vi. 51.

affy, to betroth, v. 167; For daring to affy a mighty lord, v. 167; We be affied, iii. 166.

affy, to trust, to confide: so I do affy In thy uprightness, vi. 284.

afore me, equivalent to God afore me, viii. 22.

agate very vilely cut—If low, an, ii. 104; I was never manned with an agate ("had an agate for my man," JOHNSON; was waited on by an agate) till now, iv. 321: Allusions to the small figures cut in agate for rings, for ornaments to be worn in the hat, &c.

agaz'd, struck with amazement, aghast, v. 8.

age with this indignity—Nor wrong mine, vi. 283: Here age means "my seniority in point of age. Tanora, in a subsequent passage [p. 292], speaks of him as a very young man" (BOSWELL).

Agenor—The daughter of, iii. 118: "Europa, for whose sake Jupiter transformed himself into a bull" (STEEVENS): and see note 31, iii. 185.

aggravate his style, add to his titles, i. 372.

aglet-baby—An, iii. 123: "A small image or head cut on the tag of a point or lace. That such figures were sometimes appended to them, Dr. Warburton has proved by a passage in Mezeray, the French historian:—portant meme sur les aiguillettes [points] des petites tetes de mort!" (MALONE). See the next article.

aglets, viii. 162: "Were worn," says Sir F. Madden, "by both sexes; by the men chiefly as tags to their laces or points (aiguillettes), which were made either square or pointed, plain or in the form of acorns, or with small heads cut at the end, or topped with a diamond or ruby . . . They were worn also by ladies, as pendants or ornaments in their head-dress . . . Junius is therefore evidently mistaken in explaining aglet by spangle, into which error Archdeacon Nares has also partly fallen." Note on Privy Purse Expenses of the Princess Mary, p. 205: but Coles gives both "An Aglet (tag of a point), Æramentum ligulæ," and "An Aglet (a little plate of metal), Bractea, Bracteola." (Spenser, describing Belphoebe, tells us that she "was yplad, for heat of scorching aire,

All in a silken camus lilly whight, Purled upon with many a folded plight,
Which all above besprinkled was throughout With golden aygulets, that glistred bright, Like twinkling starres." Faerie Queene, B. ii. C. iii. st. 26.)

agnize, to acknowledge, to avow, vii. 390.

a-good, in good earnest, heartily, i. 315.

a-hold, a-hold—Lay her, i. 176: To lay a ship a-hold is explained, to bring her to lie as near the wind as possible,—to make her hold to the wind, and keep clear of land. (While this sheet was passing through the press, I received a note from Mr Bolton Corney in which he says that in the present passage a-hold ought to be "a-hull," and quotes from Smith's Sea-Grammar, 1627, p. 40, "If the storm grow so great that she [the ship] cannot bear it, then hull; which is to bear no sail:" but qy. ?)

aim, guess, conjecture: my jealous aim, i. 292; What you would work me to, I have some aim, vi. 621; where the aim reports, vii. 384.

aim, to guess, to conjecture: they aim at it, vii. 179; my discovery be not aimed at, i. 292; I aim'd so near, vi. 394.

aim, to aim at: I aim thee, ii. 27 (so Milton, "missing what I aim'd," Paradise Regained, B. iv. 208).

aim—Cry, an expression borrowed from archery: All my neighbours shall cry aim, i. 379; to cry aim To these ill-tuned repetitions, iv. 18; Cried I aim? i. 374: "To cry aim! . . . was to encourage, to give aim was to direct; and in these distinct and appropriate senses the words perpetually occur. There was no such officer as aim-cryer . . . the business of encouragement being abandoned to such of the spectators as chose to interfere; to that of direction, indeed, there was a special person appointed. Those who cried aim! stood by the archers; he who gave it, was stationed near the butts, and pointed out, after every discharge, how wide, or how short, the arrow fell of the mark." Gifford's note on Massinger's Works, vol. ii. p. 28, ed. 1813.

aim—Give, an expression borrowed from archery; see the preceding article: gentle people, give me aim awhile, vi. 353 (see note 169, vi. 379); Behold her that gave aim to all thy paths, i. 322.

airy devil hovers in the sky—Some, iv. 38: Here, in defence of the epithet airy, the commentators cite from Burton's Anatomy of Melancholy, "Aerial spirits or devils are such as keep quarter most part in the aire, cause many tempests, thunder and lightnings, tear oakes, fire steeples, houses, strike men and beasts, make it rain stones," &c. Part i. sect. 2, p. 46, ed. 1660; and from Nash's Pierce Pennilesse his Supplication to the Diuell, "The spirits of the aire wil mix themselves with thunder and lightning, and so infect the clime where they raise any tempest, that suddenly great mortalitie shall ensue of the inhabitants," &c. Sig. H 3, ed. 1595: but see note 68, iv. 87.

Ajax is half made of Hector's blood—This, vi. 74: "Ajax and Hector were cousin-germans" (MALONE): see mongrel beef-witted, &c.

Ajax is their fool, vii. 281: "i.e. a fool to them. These rogues and cowards talk in such a boasting strain, that if we were to credit their account of themselves, Ajax would appear a person of no prowess when compared with them" (MALONE).

Ajax, That slew himself, &c.—The Greeks upon advice did bury, vi.

*294: "This passage alone would sufficiently convince me that the play before us was the work of one who was conversant with the Greek tragedies in their original language. We have here a plain allusion to the Ajax of Sophocles, of which no translation was extant in the time of Shakespeare. In that piece Agamemnon consents at last to allow Ajax the rites of sepulture, and Ulysses is the pleader whose arguments prevail in favour of his remains" (STEEVENS).

Ajax—Your lion, that holds his pole-axe sitting on a close-stool, will be given to, ii. 227: "This alludes to the arms given, in the old history of The Nine Worthies, to 'Alexander, the which did beare geules, a lion or seiante in a chayer, holding a battle-ax argent.' Leigh's Accidence of Armory, 1597, p. 23" (TOLLER): Here, of course, is a quibble, Ajax (a jakes).

Al'ce, a provincial abbreviation of Alice, iii. 113 ("So 'Alice' is pronounced in many places of Beaumont and Fletcher's Monsieur Thomas, as is evident from the metre," WALKER).

alder-liefest, dearest of all, v. 110 ("Alder is a corrupted, or at least modified, form of the original English genitive plural aller or allre; it is that strengthened by the interposition of a supporting d (a common expedient)," CRAIK; liefest is the superlative of lief, which means "dear:" "The A. S. form for this would be allra leofests." Latham's ed. of Johnson's Dict.).

ale, alehouse: go to the ale with a Christian, i. 287. (Here ale has been explained to mean the rural festival so named, though the words in the preceding speech of the present speaker, go with me to the ale-house, distinctly prove that explanation to be wrong.)

Aleppo gone, master o' the Tiger—Her husband's to, vii. 8: Sir W. C. Trevelyan observed to Mr. Collier that "in Hakluyt's 'Voyages,' 1589 and 1599, are printed several letters and journals of a voyage to Aleppo in the ship Tiger of London: it took place in 1583."

aleven, eleven, ii. 363: see note 23, ii. 419.

("The Lorde hath suffered vs full longe,

And spared hath his rodde,—

What peace hath bene vs now among Aleuen yeares, praysed be God!") a-life, as my life, excessively, iii. 473.

alive—Well, to our work, vi. 672: "This must mean, apparently let us proceed to our living business, to that which concerns the living, not the dead" (CRAIK): the context proves that it can have no other meaning.

all, applied to two persons: good-morrow to you all, my lords, iv. 353; as all you know, v. 134.

all amort, dejected, dispirited (Fr. à la mort), iii. 160; v. 46.

all at once—And, iii. 52; iv. 423; v. 304: see note 108, iii. 91.

all hid, all hid, an old infant play, ii. 199: I think it plain that Biron means the game well known as hide-and-seek, though the following article in Cotgrave's Fr. and Engl. Dict. has been adduced to show that he possibly means blind-man's-buff; "Olignemasset. The childish play called Hodman blind [i. e. blind-man's-buff], Harrie-racket, or are you all hid." all to, all good wishes to; All to you, vi. 522; And all to all, vii. 41.

all to-naught, all to-topple. See to.

All-hallown summer, iv. 214: "i. e. late summer; All-hallows meaning All-Saints, which festival is the first of November." Nares's Gloss.: "Shakespeare's allusion is designed to ridicule an old man with youthful passions" (STEEVENS).

alliance!—Good Lord, for, "Good Lord, how many alliances are forming! Every one is likely to be married but me" (BOSWELL), ii. 93.

allicholy, a blunder of Mrs. Quickly for melancholy, i. 359.

alligant, a blunder of Mrs. Quickly for elegant, i. 367.

all-obeying breath—His, His "breath which all obey; obeying for obeyed" (MALONE), vii. 559.

allow, to approve: That will allow me very worth his service, iii. 330; Of this allow, iii. 461; I for aye allow, iv. 170; do allow them well, iv. 371; allow us as we prove, vi. 50; if your sweet sway Allow obedience, vii. 289; did his words allow, viii. 340; my good allow, viii. 405; generally allow'd, i. 370; Not ours, or not allow'd, v. 494; her allowing husband, iii. 426.

allow, to license, to privilege: go, you are allow'd (you are "a privileged scoffer," JOHNSON; "you are a licensed fool, a common jest-er," WARBURTON), ii. 224; there is no slander in an allowed fool, iii. 337; Allow'd ("confirmed," SINGER) with absolute power, vi. 570.

allow the wind, "stand to the leeward of me" (STEEVENS), iii. 275.

allowance, approbation: Give him allowance as the worthier man, vi. 26; A stirring dwarf we do allowance give, vi. 40; the censure of the which one must, in your allowance, o'erweigh, &c., vii. 153; put it on By your allowance, vii. 269; If this be known to you, and your allowance ("done with your approbation," MALONE), vii. 378.

allowance—Of very expert and approv'd, vii. 396: "Expert and approv'd allowance is put for allow'd and approv'd expertness" (STEEVENS).

all-thing, every way: And all-thing unbecoming, vii. 31.

alms-drink—They have made him drink, vii. 533: "A phrase, amongst good fellows, to signify that liquor of another's share which his companion drinks to ease him" (WARBURTON).

along by him—Go, Go along “by his house, make that your way home” (MALONE), vi. 636: The enemy, marching along by them, “through the country of the people between this and Philippi” (CRAIK), vi. 672.

Althæa dreamed, &c., iv. 336: “Shakespeare has confounded Althæa’s firebrand with Hecuba’s. The firebrand of Althæa was real; but Hecuba, when she was big with Paris, dreamed that she was delivered of a firebrand that consumed the kingdom” (JOHNSON): But Mr. Knight suggests that here “the page may be attempting a joke out of his half-knowledge” (a joke!); and a more recent commentator very gravely tells us, “It is not Shakespeare, but (most appropriately and characteristically,—a boy who has picked up a smattering of knowledge) the page, who trips,” &c.

Althæa burn’d Unto the prince’s heart of Calydon—As did the fatal brand, v. 115: the prince of Calydon is Meleager: “According to the fable, Meleager’s life was to continue only so long as a certain firebrand should last. His mother Althæa having thrown it into the fire, he expired in great torments” (MALONE).

Amaimon, i. 372; iv. 241: The name of a demon: “Randle Holme, in his Academy of Armory and Blazon, B. ii. ch. 1, informs us that ‘Amaymon is the chief whose dominion is on the north part of the infernal gulph’” (STEEVENS): “Amaimon, King of the East, was one of the principal devils who might be bound or restrained from doing hurt from the third hour till noon, and from the ninth hour till evening. See Scot’s Discovery of Witchcraft, B. xv. ch. 3 [p. 393, ed. 1584]” (DOUCE).

amaze, to confound, to perplex: You do amaze her, i. 416; You amaze me, ladies, iii. 11; Lest your retirement do amaze your friends, iv. 283; It would amaze the proudest of you all, v. 66; I am amaz’d, and know not what to say, ii. 301; I was amaz’d Under the tide, iv. 53; I am amaz’d, methinks, iv. 61; thou art amaz’d, iv. 171; Stand not amaz’d, vi. 430; I am amaz’d with matter (variety of business), vii. 708; amazing thunder, iv. 115.

Amen!—Come, i. 204: “Compare Captain Smith’s Accidence, or the Path-way to Experience, 4to, Lond. 1626, p. 30, ‘Who saies Amen, one and all, for a dram of the bottle’” (HALLIWELL).

ames-ace, both aces,—the lowest throw upon the dice, iii. 232.

amiable siege—An, “A siege of love” (MALONE), i. 371.

amiss, misfortune, “evil impending or catastrophe” (CALDECOTT): prologue to some great amiss, vii. 180.

amiss, fault: salving thy amiss, viii. 366; urge not my amiss, viii. 424.

amort. See all amort.

anatomy, a skeleton: A mere anatomy, ii. 49; that fell anatomy, iv. 42; this anatomy, viii. 195.

anatomy, a body: I'll eat the rest of the anatomy, iii. 366; In what vile part of this anatomy, vi. 489.

anchor, an anchorite, vii. 159.

ancient, a standard-bearer, an ensign-bearer (now called an ensign): Ancient Pistol, iv. 342, 343, 434, 435; good ancient, iv. 344; vii. 397; his Moorship's ancient, vii. 376; Ancient, conduct them, vii. 387; to be saved before the ancient, vii. 406; Othello's ancient, vii. 456; consists of ancients, iv. 268.

ancient, a standard: an old faced ancient ("an old standard mended with a different colour," STEEVENS), iv. 268: and see face.

and, used redundantly, as it occasionally is in old ballads: When that I was and a little tiny boy, iii. 395; He that has and a little tiny wit, vii. 296.

andirons, vii. 668: "The andirons were the ornamental irons on each side of the hearth in old houses, which were accompanied with small rests for the end of the logs. The latter [rests] were sometimes called dogs, but the term andirons, frequently included both," &c. (HALLIWELL).

Andren, v. 484: see note 3, v. 573.

Andrew—My wealthy, ii. 346: the name of a ship: the conjecture that it was derived from the naval hero Andrea Doria is not a probable one.

angel—An ancient, iii. 157: see note 129, iii. 196.

angel of the air, bird of the air, viii. 122 (Angel in this sense is a Grecism,—ἄγγελος, i.e. messenger, being applied to birds of augury: our early writers frequently use the word as equivalent to "bird;" so in Massinger and Dekker's Virgin-Martyr the Roman eagle is called "the Roman angel," Massinger's Works, vol. i. p. 36, ed. Gifford, 1813).

angel, a gold coin, which at its highest value was worth ten shillings: not I for an angel, ii. 97; This bottle makes an angel, iv. 267; your ill angel is light ("The Lord Chief Justice calls Falstaff the Prince's ill angel or genius; which Falstaff turns off by saying, an ill angel (meaning the coin called an angel) is light," THEOBALD), iv. 324; he hath a legion of angels (with a quibble), i. 324; twenty angels, i. 367; the angels that you sent for, ii. 37; his fair angels, iv. 28; Impriſon'd angels, iv. 39: and see stamp about their necks, &c.

angels' faces—Ye've, v. 529: An allusion to the saying attributed to St. Augustine, "Non Angli, sed Angeli."

angle, a corner: In an odd angle of the isle, i. 184.

a-night, in the night, by night, iii. 26.

anon, anon, equivalent to the modern "coming," iv. 223, 233, 349, &c.

answer in the effect of your reputation, "answer in a manner suitable to your character" (JOHNSON), iv. 332.

answer must be made—My, "I shall be called to account, and must answer as for seditious words" (JOHNSON), vi. 629.

answer, retaliation : whose answer would be death, vii. 709 ; great the answer be Britons must take, vii. 714.

Antenor, vi. 14, 46, 53, &c. : "Very few particulars respecting this Trojan are preserved by Homer. But, as Professor Heyne, in his Seventh Excursus to the First Æneid, observes ; 'Fuit Antenor inter eos, in quorum rebus ornandis ii maxime scriptores laborarunt, qui narrationes Homericas novis commentis de suo onerarunt ; non aliter ac si delectatio a mere fabulosis et temere effusis figmentis proficisceretur'" (STEEVENS).

anthropophaginian, a cannibal, i. 404.

Antonaid—The, the name of Cleopatra's ship, vii. 551.

antres, caves, caverns, vii. 387.

ape—The famous. See unpeg the basket, &c. ape, in the corner of his jaw, &c.—Like an, vii. 175 : see note 107, vii. 233.

apoplex, apoplexy, iv. 380.

appaid, satisfied, contented, viii. 313.

apparent, heir-apparent, next claimant : he's apparent to my heart, iii. 425 ; as apparent to the crown, v. 259.

apparent, plain, evident : apparent foul-play, iv. 52 ; apparent prodigies, vi. 636.

apparition of an armed Head rises—An, vii. 47 ; An apparition of a bloody Child rises, vii. 48 ; An apparition of a Child crowned, with a tree in his hand, rises, ibid. : "The armed head represents symbolically Macbeth's head cut off and brought to Malcolm by Macduff. The bloody child is Macduff untimely ripped from his mother's womb. The child with a crown on his head, and a bough in his hand, is the royal Malcolm, who ordered his soldiers to hew them down [each] a bough and bear it before them to Dunsinane" (UPRON,—whose explanation is at least very ingenious) : I may add here a remark of the truly learned Lobeck ; "Mortuorum capita fatidica jam multo ante Bafometum et illud galeatum phantasma, quod in fabula Shakspeariana introducitur, memorat Phlegon, Mirab. iii. 50, &c." Aglaophamus, p. 236 (note).

appeal the duke, iv. 105 ; appeal each other of high treason, iv. 106 ; appeals me, iv. 118: "Appeal, v.a. This word appears to have been formerly used with much latitude; and sometimes in such a way that it is not easy to find out what those who used it precisely meant by it. But according to its most ancient signification, it implies a reference by name to a charge or accusation, and an offer, or challenge, to support such charge by the ordeal of single combat. And something of this, its primary sense, may still be described in all its various applications. Thus, an appeal from one person to another, to judge and decide; or from an inferior to a superior court, is to transfer the challenge from such as are deemed incompetent to accept it, to those who may be competent: and, as 'a summons to answer a charge,' it is nearly equivalent to an actual challenge. 'And likewise there were many Southland men that appelled others in Barrace to fight before the King to the dead, for certain crimes of lese majesty.' Pitcottie, p. 234. Here the word clearly means challenge; as in the preceding page the laird of Drumlanerick and the laird of Barrice are said to have provoked (which also means challenge[d]) others in Barrace to fight to death, '.... but being appealed (challenged) by the Lord Clifford, an Englishman, to fight with him in singular combat.' Hist. of Scotland, f. 365.

'hast thou sounded him, If he appeal (charge or accuse, and challenge) the duke on ancient malice?' Richard II. i. 1.

'Against the Duke of Hereford that appeals me.' Id. i. 3."

Boucher's Glossary of Arch. and Prov. Words.

apperil, peril, vi. 516.

apple-John, a sort of apple, called in French deux-années or deux-ans, because it will keep two years, and considered to be in perfection when shrivelled and withered, iv. 258, 340; apple-Johns, iv. 340 (twice). ("Apple-John, John-Apple. We retain the name, but whether we mean the same variety of fruit which was so called in Shakespeare's time, it is not possible to ascertain. Probably we do not. In 2d pt. Hen. IV. Prince Hal certainly meant a large round apple, apt to shrivel and wither by long keeping, like his fat companion. This is not particularly characteristic of our John-apple." Forby's Vocab. of East Anglia.)

apply, to apply oneself to, or, rather (see notes in the Var. Shak.), to ply: Virtue, and that part of philosophy Will I apply, iii. 114.

of laughter, vi. 596; the argument of the play, vii. 157; Have you heard the argument? vii. 159; the argument of your praise, vii. 255.

Ariachne, vi. 88: see note 154, vi. 126.

arm, to take in one's arms: come, arm him vii. 707; Arm your prize, viii. 206 (where Mason explains arm "take by the arm").

arm-gaunt, vii. 512: see note 36, vii. 603.

aroint thee, witch! vii. 8; aroint thee, witch, aroint thee! vii. 302:

That Aroint thee is equivalent to "Away!" "Begone!" seems to be agreed, though its etymology is quite uncertain: "Rynt ye; By your leave, stand handsomely. As, Rynt you, Witch, quoth Besse Locket to her mother. Proverb, Cheshire." Ray's North Country Words, p. 52, ed. 1768: "The word [aroint] is still in common use in Cheshire; and what is remarkable is, that, according to Ray, it is still coupled with a witch, as 'rynt you, witch, quoth Besse Locket to her mother,' which is given as a Cheshire proverb; but which, as the term sounded in my ears when I once heard it pronounced, I should not have hesitated to spell aroint. I have also seen it spelled, and by a Cheshire man of good information, runt: nor is it at all unlikely that it is the same exclamation which in Lancashire is pronounced and spelled arequet, as equivalent to get out or away with thee. But it is most common in the middle parts of Cheshire; and there used, chiefly by milkmaids when milking. When a cow happens to stand improperly, in a dirty place, or with one of her sides so near a wall, a fence, a tree, or another cow, that the milker cannot readily come at the udder, or to her neck, to tie her up in her boose, or stall,—in such cases, the milkmaid, whilst she pushes the animal to a more convenient place, seldom fails to exclaim, 'Aroint thee, lovey (or bonny), aroint thee:' using a coarser and harsher epithet, should the cow not move at the first bidding." Boucher's Glossary of Arch. and Prov. Words: "A lady well acquainted with the dialect of Cheshire informed me that it [Aroint] is still in use there. For example, if the cow presses too close to the maid who is milking her, she will give the animal a push, saying at the same time 'Roint thee!' by which she means 'stand off.' To this the cow is so well used, that even the word is often sufficient." Nares's Gloss.: "Rynt thee is an expression used by milkmaids to a cow when she has been milked, to bid her get out of the way. Ash calls it local." Wilbraham's Attempt at a Gloss. of some Words used in Cheshire: In Hearne's Ectypa Varia, &c., 1737, is a print representing the Saviour harrowing hell, in which Satan is blowing a horn, with the words "Out, out, arongt" over his head, perhaps to express the sounds of the horn. (Hunter, in his New Illustr. of Shakespeare, vol. ii. p. 166, has cited an example of "araunte thee" from a passage of a book about Perkin Warbeck, with which he became acquainted through the medium of The Monthly Mirror:

but undoubtedly no such book exists; the title and passage of it given in The M. M. are forgeries, and I should have said very clumsy ones, had they not deceived so experienced an antiquary as my old friend Joseph Hunter.).

Arthur's show: see Dagonet, &c.

article—A soul of great, vii. 203: Here Johnson would understand of great article to mean "of large comprehension, of many contents;" while Caldecott explains it "of great account or value."

articulate, to enter into articles: with whom we may articulate, vi. 157.

articulate, to exhibit in articles: These things, indeed, you have articulated, iv. 276.

artificial, ingenious, artful: like two artificial gods, ii. 297.

Ascanius did, &c.—As, v. 155; see note 103, v. 215.

Asher-house, my Lord of Winchester's, v. 538: "Shakespeare forgot that Wolsey was himself Bishop of Winchester, unless he meant to say, you must confine yourself to that house which you possess as Bishop of Winchester. Asher [the old form of Esher], near Hampton-Court, was one of the houses belonging to that bishoprick" (MALONE): "Fox, Bishop of Winchester, died Sept. 14, 1528, and Wolsey held this see in commendam. Esher therefore was his own house" (REED).

assurance of a dower in marriage—To pass, iii. 159: "To pass assurance means to make a conveyance or deed. Deeds are by law-writers called 'The common assurances of the realm,' because thereby each man's property is assured to him. So, in a subsequent scene of this act, 'they are busied about a counterfeit assurance' [iii. 167]" (MALONE).

assurance in that—Seek out, vii. 195: "A quibble is intended. Deeds, which are usually written on parchment, are called the common assurances of the kingdom" (MALONE).

assured, affianced, ii. 29; iv. 27.

Atalanta's better part, iii. 40: Here the meaning of better part (a common enough expression, and used by Shakespeare in two other places—"my better part of man," Macbeth, act v. sc. 8—"My spirit is thine, the better part of me," Sonnet LXXIV.) has been much disputed: "Cannot Atalanta's better part mean her virtue or virgin chastity? . . . Pliny's Natural History, b. xxxv. c. iii. mentions the portraits of Atalanta and Helen, utraqus excellentissima forma, sed altera ut virgo; that is 'both of them for beauty incomparable, and yet a man may discern the one [Atalanta] of them to be a maiden, for her modest and chaste countenance,' as Dr. P. Holland translated the passage" (TOLLET): "I suppose Atalanta's better part is her wit, i. e. the swiftness of her mind" (FARMER): "After all, I believe that 'Atalanta's better part' means only the best part about her, such as was most commended" (STEEVENS): "Atalanta's better part was not her modesty, nor her heels, nor her wit, as critics have variously conjectured, but simply her spiritual part" (STAUNTON—in a note on Macbeth, act v. sc. 8): Mr. Grant White's explanation of the lady's better part I had rather refer to than quote.

at hand, quoth pickpurse, iv. 225: a proverbial expression.

babes hath judgment shown—So holy writ in, iii. 226: "The allusion is to St. Matthew's Gospel, xi. 25: 'I thank thee, O Father, Lord of heaven and earth, because thou hast hid these things from the wise and prudent, and hast revealed them unto babes.' See also 1 Cor. i. 27" (MALONE).

baby, a doll: The baby of a girl, vii. 41.

baccare, iii. 130: A cant exclamation of doubtful etymology, signifying "Go back." (Compare, among numerous passages that might be cited, one of John Heywood's three epigrams upon it;

"Backare, quoth Mortimer to his sow: Went that sow backe at that bidding, trow you?"

Workes, sig. p 2, ed. 1598.)

back'd—Upon his eagle, Seated upon the back of his eagle, vii. 734.

badge of fame to slander's livery—A, viii. 317: "In our author's time the servants of the nobility all wore silver badges on their liveries, on which the arms of their masters were engraved" (MALONE).

baffle, to treat ignominiously, to use contemptuously ("Baffle . . . was originally a punishment of infamy, inflicted on recreant knights, one part of which was hanging them up by the heels. In French baffouer or baffoler." Nares's Gloss.) : I will baffle Sir Toby, iii. 358; baffle me, iv. 212; how have they baffled thee! iii. 395; baffled here, iv. 109; shall good news be baffled? iv. 396.

Bajazet's mute, iii. 257: The allusion in this passage (where the original reads "mule") has not yet been explained.

ban, to curse, v. 140, 161 (twice) ; viii. 329, 463 ; banning, v. 70 ; viii. 250.

Banbury cheese—You, i. 349 : An allusion to the thinness of Slander,—Banbury cheese being a cream cheese, which was proverbially thin ("The same thought occurs in Jack Drum's Entertainment, 1601 : 'Put off your cloathes, and you are like a Banbury cheese,—nothing but paring'," STEEVENS).

band, a bond : arrested on a band, ii. 35 (in what immediately follows these words Dromio quibbles on band in the sense of "bond," and band "a band for the neck") ; that breaks his band, ii. 36 ; thy oath and band, iv. 105 ; as my furthest band Shall pass, vii. 539 ; cancels all bands, iv. 257 ; die in bands, v. 240 ; with all bands of law, vii. 109.

ban-dogs, properly band-dogs, so called because on account of their fierceness they required to be bound or chained, and used more particularly for baiting bears ; considered by Pennant as mastiffs, and by Gifford as "large dogs of the mastiff kind"), v. 125.

bank'd their towns, iv. 67 : Means most probably "sailed past their towns on the banks of the river," rather than "thrown up entrenchments before their towns ;" compare the old play, The Troublesome Raigne of Iohn, &c. (see iv. 3) ;

"Your city, Rochester, with great applause,
By some diuine instinct laid armes aside ;
And from the hollow holes of Thamesis Eccho apace repli'd, Vive le Roy.
From thence along the wanton rowling glade
To Troynouant, your faire metropolis, With lucke came Lewis," &c.

Sec. Part, sig. 1 4 verso, ed. 1622 :—

But Mr. Staunton sees here an allusion to card-playing, and (from the context) would understand bank'd their towns to mean "won their towns, put them in bank or rest."

banquet, what we now call a dessert,—a slight refection, consisting of cakes, sweetmeats, and fruit, and generally served in a room to which the guests removed after dinner : My banquet is to close our stomachs up, After our great good cheer, iii. 174 (A passage overlooked by Nares when he said, "Banquet is often used by Shakespeare, and there seems always to signify a feast, as it does now." Gloss.) ; Servants, with a banquet, vii. 532. *

banquet ere they rested—Should find a running, v. 500; besides the running banquet of two beadles, v. 569: On the first of these passages Steevens observes; "A running banquet, literally speaking, is a hasty refreshment, as set in opposition to a regular and protracted meal. The former is the object of this rakish peer; the latter perhaps he would have relinquished to those of more permanent desires:" and Malone; "A running banquet seems to have meant a hasty banquet. 'Queen Margaret and Prince Edward (says Habington in his History of King Edward IV.), though by the Earle recalled, found their fate and the winds so adverse that they could not land in England to taste this running banquet to which fortune had invited them.' The hasty banquet, that was in Lord Sands's thoughts, is too obvious to require explanation:" on the second passage Steevens remarks; "A banquet, in ancient language, did not [generally] signify either dinner or supper, but the dessert after each of them. . . . To the confinement therefore of these rioters a whipping was to be the dessert."

bar and royal interview—Unto this, "To this barrier, to this place of congress, &c." (JOHNSON), iv. 499.

Barbason, i. 372; iv. 436: The name of a demon: he would seem to be the same as "Marbas, alias Barbas," who, as Scot informs us, "is a great president, and appeareth in the forme of a mightie lion; but at the commandement of a coniuror commeth vp in the likenes of a man, and answereth fullie as touching anie thing which is hidden or secret," &c. The Discoverie of Witchcraft, &c. p. 378, ed. 1584.

barbed steeds, steeds equipped with military trappings and ornaments, iv. 151; v. 351 (Cotgrave has "Bardé: Barbed or trapped as a great horse." Fr. and Engl. Dict.: Barbed is said to be a corruption of barded).

barbermonger, "a fop who deals much with barbers, to adjust his hair and beard" (MASON), vii. 279.

barber's chair, that fits all buttocks—Like a, a proverbial simile, iii. 228: Ray gives "Like a barber's chair, fit for every buttock." Proverbs, p. 51, ed. 1768.

bare Christian—Which is much in a, i. 298: "Launce is quibbling on. Bare has two senses; mere and naked. Launce uses it in both, and opposes the naked female to the water-spaniel covered with hairs of remarkable thickness" (STEEVENS).

baring of my beard—The, The shaving of my beard, iii. 257.

barley-break, viii. 189 : "It was played by six people (three of each sex), who were coupled by lot. A piece of ground was then chosen, and divided into three compartments, of which the middle one was called hell. It was the object of the couple* condemned to this division, to catch the others, who advanced from the two extremities ; in which case a change of situation took place, and hell was filled by the couple who were excluded by preoccupation from the other places : in this 'catching,' however, there was some difficulty, as, by the regulations of the game, the middle couple were not to separate before they had succeeded, while the others might break hands whenever they found themselves hard pressed. When all had been taken in turn, the last couple was said to be in hell, and the game ended : " Such is Gifford's description of the old English manner of playing the game, note on Massinger's Works, vol. i. p. 104, ed. 1813 : on the Scottish mode of playing it (which is very different), see Jamieson's Etymol. Dict. of the Scot. Lang. in "Barla-breikis, Barley-bracks."

barn, a child : Mercy on's, a barn ; a very pretty barn! iii. 459 ; he shall lack no barns (with a quibble), ii. 114 ; barns are blessings, iii. 216.

barnacles, i. 225 : "Caliban's barnacle is the clakis or tree-geese" (DOUCE) : "Barnacle. A multivalve shell-fish [lepas anatifera, Linn.] growing on a flexible stem, and adhering to loose timber, bottoms of ships, &c. ; anciently supposed to turn into a Solan goose ; possibly because the name was the same. . . . Sometimes the barnacles were supposed to grow on trees, and thence to drop into the sea, and become geese ; as in Drayton's account of Furness, Polyolb. Song 27, p. 1190 [p. 136, ed. 1622]. From this fable Linnæus has formed his trivial name anatifera, Goose or Duckling-bearing. See Donovan's British Shells, Plate 7, where is a good description of the real animal, and an excellent specimen of the fabulous account from Gerard's Herbal." Nares's Gloss.

Barrabas, ii. 402 : This name was, I believe, invariably made short in the second syllable by the poetical writers of Shakespeare's days. (In Marlowe's Jew of Malta, "Barräbas" occurs many times : and compare Taylor ;

* "These are the brood of Barrabas, and these Can rob, and be let loose againe at ease."

A Thiefe, p. 120,—Workes, 1630 :

Bartholomew boar-pig, iv. 347: "The practice of roasting pigs [for sale] at Bartholomew Fair continued until the beginning of the last century, if not later," &c. (REED).

Basan—The hill of, vii. 560: From Psalm lxxviii. 15.

base,—prison-base, or prison-bars,—a rustic game: I bid the base for Proteus (with a quibble—"I challenge an encounter on behalf of Proteus"), i. 269; lads more like to run The country base, vii. 713; To bid the wind a base he now prepares, viii. 249: "There is," says Strutt, "a rustic game called base or bars, and in some places prisoner's bars; and as the success of this pastime depends upon the agility of the candidates and their skill in running, I think it may properly enough be introduced here. It was much practised in former times, and some vestiges of the game are still remaining in many parts of the kingdom. The first mention of this sport that I have met with, occurs in the Proclamations at the head of the parliamentary proceedings, early in the reign of Edward the Third, where it is spoken of as a childish amusement, and prohibited to be played in the avenues of the palace at Westminster, during the sessions of Parliament, because of the interruption it occasioned to the members and others in passing to and fro as their business required. It is also spoken of by Shakespear as a game practised by the boys [see the second of the passages above cited]. It was, however, most assuredly played by the men, and especially in Cheshire and other adjoining counties, where formerly it seems to have been in high repute. The performance of this pastime requires two parties of equal number, each of them having a base or home, as it is usually called, to themselves, at the distance of about twenty or thirty yards. The players then on either side taking hold of hands, extend themselves in length, and opposite to each other, as far as they conveniently can, always remembering that one of them must touch the base; when any one of them quits the hand of his fellow and runs into the field, which is called giving the chase, he is immediately followed by one of his opponents; he again is followed by a second from the former side, and he by a second opponent; and so on alternately, until as many are out as choose to run, every one pursuing the man he first followed, and no other; and if he overtake him near enough to touch him, his party claims one toward their game, and both return home. [Note. It is to be observed, that every person on either side who touches another during the chase, claims one for his party, and when many are out, it frequently happens that many are touched.] They then run forth again and again in like manner, until the number is completed that decides the victory; this number is optional, and I am told rarely exceeds twenty.

About thirty years back I saw a grand match at base played in the fields behind Montague-house [Note. Now better known by the name of the British Museum] by twelve gentlemen of Cheshire against twelve of Derbyshire, for a considerable sum of money, which afforded much entertainment to the spectators. In Essex they play this game with the addition of two prisons, which are stakes driven into the ground, parallel with the home boundaries, and about thirty yards from them; and every person who is touched on either side in the chase is sent to one or other of these prisons, where he must remain till the conclusion of the game, if not delivered previously by one of his associates, and this can only be accomplished by touching him, which is a difficult task, requiring the performance of the most skilful players, because the prison belonging to either party is always much nearer to the base of their opponents than to their own; and if the person sent to relieve his confederate be touched by an antagonist before he reaches him, he also becomes a prisoner, and stands in equal need of deliverance. The addition of the prisons occasions a considerable degree of variety in the pastime, and is frequently productive of much pleasantry." Sports and Pastimes, &c. p. 71, sec. ed.

base is the slave that pays, iv. 437 : "This appears to have been a proverbial expression (Compare, in Heywood's Fair Maid of the West, "My motto shall be, Base is the man that paies." Second Part, sig. L 2, ed. 1631).

base court, basse-cour, Fr., iv. 152.

baseness—Forced, iii. 445 : "Leontes had ordered Antigonus to take up the bastard; Paulina forbids him to touch the Princess under that appellation. Forced is false, uttered with violence to truth" (JOHNSON),—a passage, in which Walker (see note 50, iii. 513) would make what appears to me an improper alteration.

bases—A pair of, viii. 24 : "Bases, plural noun. A kind of embroidered mantle, which hung down from the middle to about the knees, or lower, worn by knights on horseback." Nares's Gloss. (where the word is illustrated by various quotations) : In the list of apparel of the Lord Admiral's players, taken 1598, we find, "Item, ij payer of basses, j white, j blew, of sasnet [sic]." Malone's Shakespeare (by Boswell), vol. iii. p. 316.

Basilisco-like—Knight, knight, good mother,—iv. 11 : "Falconbridge's words here carry a concealed piece of satire on [rather, allude to] a stupid drama of that age, printed in 1599, and called Soliman and Perseda. In this piece there is the character of a bragging cowardly knight, called Basilisco. His pretension to valour is so blown and seen through, that Piston, a buffoon-servant in the play, jumps upon his back, and will not disengage him till he makes Basilisco swear upon his dudgeon dagger to the contents, and in the terms, he dictates to him; as, for instance;

Bas. 'O, I swear, I swear.

Bas. I, the aforesaid Basilisco,—knight, good fellow, knight, knight,— Pist. Knave, good fellow, knave, knave,—'

So that, 'tis clear, our poet is sneering at this play [?]; and makes Philip, when his mother calls him knave, throw off that reproach by humorously laying claim to his new dignity of knighthood, as Basilisco arrogantly insists on his title of knight in the passage above quoted" (THEOBALD): The Tragedie of Soliman and Perseda. Wherein is laide open, Loues constancie, Fortunes inconstancie, and Deaths Triumphs, 1599, though a wretched production, was once very popular: it has been attributed to Kyd.

basilisk, an imaginary creature (called also cockatrice), supposed to kill by its very look: sighted like the basilisk, iii. 432; come, basilisk, And kill the innocent gazer with thy sight, v. 154; I'll slay more gazers than the basilisk, v. 280; It is a basilisk unto mine eye, vii. 669; Their chiefest prospect murdering basilisks, v. 161; Would they were basilisks, to strike thee dead! v. 360.

basilisk, a huge piece of ordnance, carrying a ball of very great weight: Of basilisks, of cannon, culverin, iv. 230; The fatal balls of murdering basilisks, iv. 499: but in the second of these passages there is a double allusion,—to pieces of ordnance, and to the fabulous creatures named basilisks; see the preceding article.

bass my trespass—Did, "told it me in a rough bass sound" (JOHNSON), "served as the bass in a concert, to proclaim my trespass in the loudest and fullest tone" (HEATH), i. 217.

basta, enough (Italian and Spanish), iii. 119.

bastard, whom the oracle Hath doubtfully pronounc'd, &c.—A, vi. 553: Alluding to the story of Œdipus.

bastard—Drink brown and white, i. 484; Score a pint of bastard, iv. 233; your brown bastard is your only drink, iv. 234: Bastard was sweetish wine (approaching to the muscadel wine in flavour, and perhaps made from a bastard species of muscadine grape), which was brought from some of the countries bordering the Mediterranean. There were two sorts, white and brown: see Henderson's History of Ancient and Modern Wines, pp. 290-1.

bat, a large stick, a cudgel, viii. 441; bats, vi. 136, 139.

bat-fowling, i. 197: Is described as follows in Markham's Hunter's Prevention: or, The whole Arte of Fowling by Water and Land, &c. "Next to the Trammel, I thinke meete to proceed to Batte-fowling, which is likewise a nighty [sic] taking of all sorts of great and small Birdes which rest not on the earth, but on Shrubbes, tal Bushes, Hathorne trees, and other trees, and may fitly and most conueniently be vsed in all woody, rough, and bushy countries, but not in the champaine. For the manner of bat-fowling, it may be vsed either with nettes or without nettes. If you vse it without nettes (which indeede is the most common of the two), you shall then proceede in this manner. First, there shall be one to cary the cresset of fire (as was shewed for the Lowbell), then a certaine number, as two, three, or foure (according to the greatnesse of your company); and these shall haue poales bound with dry round wispes of hay, straw, or such like stuffe, or else bound with pieces of linkes or hurdes dipt in pitch, rosen, grease, or any such like matter that will blaze. Then another company shal be armed with long poales, very rough and bushy at the vpper endes, of which the willow, byrche, or long hazell are best; but indeed according as the country will afford, so you must be content to take. Thus being prepared, and comming into the bushy or rough ground where the haunts of birds are, you shall then first kindle some of your fiers, as halfe or a third part, according as your prouision is, and then with your other bushy and rough poales you shall beat the bushes, trees, and haunts of the birds, to enforce them to rise; which done, you shall see the birds, which are raysed, to flye and play about the lights and flames of the fier; for it is their nature, through their amazednesse and affright at the strangenes of the lightt and the extreame darknesse round about it, not to depart from it, but, as it were, almost to scorch their wings in the same; so that those which haue the rough bushye poales may (at their pleasures) beat them down with the same, and so take them. Thus you may spend as much of the night as is darke, for longer is not conuenient; and doubtlesse you shall finde much pastime and take great store of birds; and in this you shall obserue all the obseruations formerly treated of in the Lowbell; especially that of silence, vntill your lights be kindled, but then you may vse your pleasure, for the noyse and the light when they are heard and seene afarre of, they make the birds sit the faster and surer. The byrdes which are commonly taken by this labour or exercise are, for the most part, the rookes, ringdones, blackebirdes, throistles, feldyfares, linnets, bulfinches, and all other byrdes whatsoeuer that pearch or sit vpon small boughes or bushes. This exercise, as it may be vsed in these rough, woody, and bushie places, so it may also be vsed alongst quikset hedges or any other hedges or places where there is any shelter for byrdes to pearch in." p. 98, ed. 1621. (A simpler mode of bat-fowling, by means of a large clap-net and a lantern, and called bird-batting, is noticed in Fielding's Joseph Andrews, B. ii. ch. 10.)

bate, strife, contention: breeds no bate with telling of discreet stories ("if it be recollected with what sort of companions he [Pointz] was likely to associate, Falstaff's meaning will appear to be, that he excites no censure for telling them modest stories, or, in plain bate, to flutter, to flap the wings (a term in falconry : "Bate, Bateing or Bateth, is when the Hawk Matteredeth with her Wings either from Pearch or Fist, as it were striving to get away ; also it is taken for her striving with her Prey, and not forsaking it till it be overcome." R. Holme's Academy of Armory and Blazon (Terms of Art used in Falconry, &c.), B. ii. c. xi. p. 238) : these kites That bate, iii. 155 ; 'tis a hooded valour ; and when it appears, it will bate (in which passage is a quibble between bate, the term of falconry, and bate, i. e. abate, fall off, dwindle), iv. 466 ; Bated (used, it would seem, for Bating) like eagles, iv. 266 ; Hood my unmann'd blood, bating in my cheeks, vi. 433 (see hood, &c.).

bate, to abate, to diminish, to lessen ; To bate me a full year, i. 184 ; bate one breath of her accustomed crossness, ii. 100 ; the main flood bate his usual height, ii. 396 ; I will not bate thee a scruple, iii. 236 ; bate me some, iv. 402 ; bate thy rage, iv. 451 ; you bate too much of your own merits, vi. 521 ; Who bates mine honour, vi. 536 ; With bated breath, ii. 356 ; like a bated and retired flood, iv. 71 ; no leisure bated ("without any abatoment or intermission of time," MALONE), vii. 201.

bate, to grow less : do I not bate? iv. 258.

bate, to except : Bate, I beseech you, widow Dido, i. 195 ; Those bated that inherit but the fall, &c. iii. 222.

bate, to blunt : which shall bate his scythe's keen edge, ii. 163 (see the third sense of abate).

bate-breeding, apt to cause strife or contention, viii. 261.

batlet, a bat for beating clothes in washing, iii. 26.

batten, "To batten (grow fat), pinguesco" (Coles's Lat. and Eng. Dict.), vi. 206 ; vii. 168.

bauble, the licensed Fool's or Jester's "official sceptre or bauble, which was a short stick ornamented at the end with a figure of a fool's head, or sometimes with that of a doll or puppet" (DOUCE) : gives his wife my bauble, iii. 271 ; An idiot holds his bauble for a god, vi. 340 ("There cannot be a doubt that Aaron refers to that sort of bauble or sceptre which was usually carried in the hand by natural idiots and allowed jesters, and by which, it may be supposed, they would sometimes swear. The resemblance which it bore to an image or idol suggested the poet's comparison," DOUCE) ; hide his bauble in a hole, vi. 420.

Bavian—The, The Baboon (the word is also written Babian and Babion), viii. 163, 164, 167 (twice) : Here [in the third of the above passages] are not [as Steevens supposed] two fools described. The construction is, 'next comes the fool, i. e. the Bavian fool, &c.' . . . The tricks of the Bavian, his tumbling and barking like a dog . . . were peculiar to the morris-dance described in the Two Noble Kinsmen, which has some other characters that seem to have been introduced for stage-effect, and not to have belonged to the genuine morris" (DOUCE). ● bavin wits, flashing wits, iv. 255 (Bavin is "a faggot of brushwood;" but the word, as here, is sometimes used adjectively;

"I onely burne the bauen heath of youth."

Jacke Drum's Entertainment, sig. A 3 verso, ed. 1616).

bawbling, trifling, insignificant, contemptible, iii. 386.

bawcock, a burlesque term of endearment, said to be derived from the French beau coq, iii. 370, 424; iv. 451, 470.

bay—After three-pence a, i. 463: "Bay, a principal compartment or division in the architectural arrangement of a building, marked either by the buttresses or pilasters on the walls, by the disposition of the main ribs of the vaulting of the interior, by the main arches and pillars, the principals of the roof, or by any other leading features that separate it into corresponding portions." Parker's Concise Glossary of Architecture: and see note 40, i. 527.

bay curtal: see curtal—Bay.

Baynard's Castle, v. 408 (twice): Baynard's Castle, on the banks of the Thames, immediately below St. Paul's, was originally a fortress built by "Baynard, a nobleman that came in with the Conqueror . . . I find that, in the year 1428, the 7th of Henry VI., a great fire was at Baynard's-Castle, and that Humphrey Duke of Gloucester built it new. By his death and attainder in the year 1446 it came to the hands of Henry VI., and from him to Richard Duke of York, of whom we read, that in the year 1457 he lodged there as in his own house." Stowe's Survey, vol. i. pp. 64, 66, ed. 1754: Baynard's Castle was destroyed in the Great Fire, 1666. It still gives a name to a ward,—Castle Baynard Ward.

bay-trees in our country all are wither'd—The, iv. 140: This (which Shakespeare found in Holihshed) was reckoned a prognostic of evil both in ancient and in more modern times.

bay-windows, iii. 381: "Bay-window, a window forming a bay or recess in a room, and projecting outwards from the wall either in a rectangular, polygonal, or semicircular form, often called a bow-window," &c. Parker's Concise Glossary of Architecture.

beadsman, one who prays for the welfare of another,—a prayerman, i. 263; beadsmen, iv. 145. ("Bead, says Tooke, in the A. S. Beade, oratio, something prayed—because one was dropped down a string every time a prayer was said, and thereby marked upon the string the number of times prayed." Richardson's Dict.) beak—Now on the, i. 183: "The beak was a strong pointed body at the head of the ancient galleys: it is used here for the forecaskle or the boltsprit" (JOHNSON).

bear, to carry, to gain, to win: It must not bear my daughter, vi. 511; with more facile question bear it, vii. 384.

bear a brain, "have a perfect remembrance or recollection" (REED), vi. 398.

bear hard, "to have an unfavourable opinion of" (STEEVENS), "to bear a grudge" (CRAIK): Cæsar doth bear me hard, vi. 625; Caius Ligarius doth bear Cæsar hard, vi. 636; if you bear me hard, vi. 651.

bear in hand, to keep in expectation, to flatter one's hopes, to amuse with false pretences: bear her in hand, ii. 126; she bears me fair in hand, iii. 155; bear a gentleman in hand, iv. 321; Bore many gentlemen . . . in hand, i. 455; Your daughter, whom she bore in hand to love (whom she insidiously led to believe that she loved), vii. 722; How you were borne in hand, vii. 33; Was falsely borne in hand, vii. 133.

bearing-cloth, the cloth or mantle which usually covered the child when it was carried to the font, iii. 460; v. 15.

bears—Call hither to the stake my two brave, v. 191: "The Nevils, Earls of Warwick, had a bear and ragged staff for their cognizance" (SIR J. HAWKINS): see, a little farther on, the speech of Warwick, "Now, by my father's badge," &c.

bears [betray'd] with glasses, vi. 636: "Bears are reported to have been surprised by means of a mirror, which they would gaze on, affording their pursuers an opportunity of taking the surer aim" (STEEVENS).

bear-ward, the keeper of a bear, i. 86; v. 191, 193.

bear-whelp—Unlick'd: see unlick'd, &c.

beat on, to be busy on, to hammer on: Do not infest your mind with beating on The strangeness, &c. i. 233; thine eyes and thoughts Beat on a crown, v. 128; Whereon his brains still beating, vii. 152; this her mind beats upon, viii. 191.

beautified Ophelia—The most, vii. 134; "beautified" is a vile phrase, ibid.: By beautified (which, however, "vile a phrase," is common enough in our early writers) I believe that Hamlet means "beautiful," and not "accomplished," as it is explained by Caldecott.

beauty—Be called thieves of the day's, iv. 210: "There is, I have no doubt, a pun on the word beauty, which in the western counties is pronounced nearly in the same manner as booty. See King Henry VI. Part iii. [act i. sc. 4]; 'So triumph thieves upon their conquer'd booty'" (MALONE).

beaver on—With his, iv. 266; through a rusty beaver peeps, iv. 478; I cleft his beaver, v. 235; is my beaver easier, v. 443; in a gold beaver, vi. 24; his beaver up, vii. 114; their beavers down, iv. 366:

"The beaver of a helmet is frequently used by writers, improperly enough, to express the helmet itself. It is in reality the lower part of it, adapted to the purpose of giving the wearer [by raising it up] an opportunity of taking breath when oppressed with heat, or, without putting off the helmet, of taking his repast" (DOUCE).

become, to adorn, to set-off, to grace: become disloyalty, ii. 25; become the field, iv. 63; become hard-favour'd death, v. 64; vilest things become themselves in her, vii. 522; becomes the ground, iii. 42; Whether the horse by him became his deed, viii. 442.

become you well to worship shadows—Since your falsehood shall, i. 309: "It is simply 'since your falsehood shall adapt or render you fit to worship shadows.' Become here answers to the Latin convenire, and is used according to its genuine Saxon meaning" (DOUCE).

becomed, for becoming: what becomed love I might, vi. 453.

becoming, an adorning, the power of setting-off: Whence hast thou this becoming of things ill, viii. 424.

becoming—So fill'd and so, iii. 457: see note 75, iii. 517.

becomings—My, What becomes me, vii. 507.

bedfellow—The man that was his, iv. 438: "This unseemly custom [of men sleeping together] continued common till the middle of the last century, if not later" (MALONE).

Bedlam—Tom o'; the Bedlam; Bedlam beggars: see Tom o' Bedlam, &c.

beg us—You cannot, ii. 225: Costard means, "We are not fools:" "To beg a person for a fool; to apply to be his guardian. In the old common law was a writ de idiota inquirendo, under which, if a man was legally proved an idiot, the profits of his lands and the custody of his person might be granted by the king to any subject. See Blackstone, B. i. ch. 8, § 18. Such a person, when this grant was asked, was said to be begged for a fool; which that learned judge regarded as being still a common expression. See his note, loc. cit." Nares's Gloss.: "Frequent allusions to this practice occur in the old comedies. In illustration of it Mr. Ritson has given a curious story, which, as it is mutilated in the authority which he has used [Cabinet of Mirth, 1674], is here subjoined from a more original source, a collection of tales, &c., compiled about the time of Charles the First, preserved among the Harleian Mss. in the British Museum, No. 6395. 'The Lord North begg'd old Bladwell for a foole (though he could neyer prove him so), and having him in his custodie as a lunaticke, he carried him to a gentleman's house, one day, that was his neighbour. The L. North and the gentleman retir'd awhile to private discourse, and left Bladwell in the dining roome, which was hung with a faire hanging. Bladwell walking up and downe, and viewing the imagerie, spyed a foole at last in the hanging; and without delay drawes his knife, flyes at the foole, outts him cleane out, and layes him on the floore. My L. and the gentl. coming in againe, and finding the tapestrie thus defac'd, he ask'd Bladwell what he meant by such a rude uncivill act: he answered, Sr., be content, I have rather done you a courtesie than a wrong, for if ever my L. N. had seene the foole there, he would have begg'd him, and so you might have lost your whole suite.' The same story, but without the parties' names, is related in Fuller's Holy State, p. 182" (DOUCE).

beldam, a grandmother: the old beldam earth, iv. 247 (where, in the next line but one, is Our grandam earth, as synonymous); To show the beldam daughters of her daughter, viii. 314; Old men and beldams (old women), iv. 55.

beldam, used as a term of contempt,—a hag: Beldam, I think we watch'd you, v. 126; beldams as you are, vii. 43.

be-lee'd and calm'd, vii. 376: “I have been informed that one vessel is said to be in the lee of another when it is so placed that the wind is intercepted from it. Iago's meaning therefore is, that Cassio had got the wind of him, and be-calm'd him from going on. To be-calm (as I learn from Falconer's Marine Dictionary) is likewise to obstruct the current of the wind in its passage to a ship, by any contiguous object” (STEEVENS).

Bell, book, and candle shall not drive me back, iv. 39: “In the solemn form of excommunication used in the Romish Church, the bell was tolled, the book of offices for the purpose used, and three candles extinguished with certain ceremonies.” Nares's Gloss. (So Dekker; besmirch, to be-smut, vii. 116 ; besmirch'd, iv. 482 : see smirch.

besonian, iv. 396 ; besonians, v. 168 : The Italian origin of the word besonian (see post) shows that it properly means "a needy fellow, a beggar ;" but it was also used in the sense of "a raw or needy soldier ;" and eventually it became a term of reproach,—"a knave, a scoundrel" ("Bisogno, need, want. Also a fresh needy soldier . . . Bisognoso, needy, necessitous." Florio's Ital. and Engl. Dict. : "Bisogne . . . a filthy knave, or clowne ; a raskall, bisonian, base humored scoundrell." Cotgrave's Fr. and Engl. Dict. For the following illustrations of the word I am indebted to Mr. Bolton Corney ; "Their order is [in Spain], where the warres are present, to supplie their regiments, being in action, with the garrisons out of all his dominions and prouinces before they dislodge, besonios supply[ing] their places, raw men, as wee tearme them. By these meanes hee traines his besonios, and furniaeth his armie with trained souldiers." A brief discourse of Warre, by Sir Roger Williams, 1590, 4to, p. 11: "Bisognio or Bisonnio, a Spanish or Italian word, and is, as we terme it, a raw souldier, unexpert in his weapon, and other military points." The theorike and practike of moderne warres, by Robert Barret, 1598, folio, sig. Y 4: "Bisoños, Voyes Visoños . . . Visoño, nouveau soldat, apprenty." Tesoro de las dos lenguas Francesa y Española, por Cesar Oudin, 1607, 4to: "Bisoño, el soldado nueuo en la milicia, es nõbre casual y moderno," &c. Tesoro de la lengua Castellana, o Española, por D. Sebastian de Cobarruias, 1611, sig. s 2 verso: Cobarruias or Covarruvias gives us twenty-five lines on this word: he states that some Spanish soldiers in Italy learned the word Visoño, and were accustomed to ask alms, saying Visoño pan, Visoño carne, &c., and were thence called Visoños; which circumstance is alluded to by one of their dramatists, Torres Naharro).

Beaumont and Fletcher's King and No King, act iv. sc. 8.

"The wife of the said Peter then said, to abide upon it, I thinke that my husband will neuer mend," &c. Potts's Discoverie of Witches in the Countie of Lancaster, 1613, sig. r 4.)

bigamy—Loath'd, v. 414: "Bigamy, by a canon of the council of Lyons, A.D. 1274 (adopted in England by a statute in 4 Edw. I.), was made unlawful and infamous. It differed from polygamy or having two wives at once; as it consisted in either marrying two virgins successively, or once marrying a widow" (BLACKSTONE). (Fielding, in his Amelia, applies the term bigamy to marrying two wives successively; vol. ii. p. 240, vol. iii. p. 19, ed. 1752.)

biggen, iv. 381: "A cap, quof, or dress for the head, formerly worn by men, but now limited, I believe, almost entirely to some particular cap or bonnet for young children . . . Caps or coifs were probably first called beguins or biggins, from their resemblance to the caps or head-dress worn by those Societies of young women who were called Beguines in France, and who led a middle kind of life between the secular and religious, made no vows, but maintained themselves by the work of their own hands." Boucher's Glossary of Arch. and Prov. Words.

bilbo, a sword (so called from Bilboa in Spain, which was famous for its manufacture of sword-blades), i. 349, 392.

bilboes—The, vii. 200: "The bilboes is a bar of iron with fetters annexed to it, by which mutinous or disorderly sailors were anciently linked together. The word is derived from Bilboa, a place in Spain where instruments of steel were fabricated in the utmost perfection. To understand Shakespeare's allusion completely, it should be known that, as these fetters connect the legs of the offenders very close together, their attempts to rest must be as fruitless as those of Hamlet, in whose mind there was a kind of fighting that would not let him sleep. Every motion of one must disturb his partner in confinement. The bilboes are still shown in the Tower of London, among the other spoils of the Spanish Armada" (STEEVENS).

bill, a sort of pike or halbert, or rather a kind of battle-axe affixed to a long staff, formerly carried by the English infantry, and afterwards the usual weapon of watchmen (" Bills—these long-popular weapons of the foot-soldier—were constructed to thrust at mounted men, or cut and damage their horse-furniture; sometimes they were provided with a side-hook to seize a bridle." FAIRHOLT): take thou the bill (with a quibble), give me thy mete-yard, iii. 163; my brain-pan had been cleft with a brown bill, v. 185; have a care that your bills be not stolen, ii. 110; a goodly commodity, being taken up of these men's bills (with a quibble both on taken up,—see take up,—and on bills), ii. 113; manage rusty bills, iv. 145; take up commodities upon our bills (with a quibble), v. 181; our bills. Tim. Knock me down with 'em (with a quibble): cleave me to the girdle, vi. 539; Bring up the brown bills, vii. 324. .

bill, a forest-bill, an implement carried by foresters: with bills on their necks (with a quibble—see note 17, iii. 80), iii. 12.

bill, a placard posted by public challengers: He set up his bills here in Messina, ii. 76.

bill, a billet, a note: give these bills Unto the legions on the other side, vi. 680.

bin, been, viii. 293.

bird-bolt, a short thick arrow with a blunted extremity, for killing birds without piercing them, ii. 76, 197; bird-bolts, iii. 337.

birds, deceiv'd with painted grapes, viii. 259: "Our author alludes to the celebrated picture of Zenxis, mentioned by Pliny, in which some grapes were so well represented that birds lighted on them to peck at them" (MALONE).

birthdom, birthright, vii. 53.

bisson, blind: your bisson conspectuities, vi. 160; this bisson multitude, vi. 183 (see note 109, vi. 255).

bite my thumb at them—I will, vi. 389; Do you bite your thumb at us, sir? &c. ibid.: "This mode of insult, in order to begin a quarrel, seems to have been common in Shakespeare's time. Decker, in his Dead Term, 1608, describing the various groups that daily frequented St. Paul's Church, says, 'What swearing is there, what shouldering, what jostling, what jeering, what byting of thumbs, to beget quarrels!' [A passage originally cited by Malone] . . . The mode in which this contemptuous action was performed is thus described by Cotgrave [sub Nique], in a passage which has escaped the industry of all the commentators; 'Faire la nique: to mocke by nodding or lifting up of the chinne; or more properly, to threaten or dese by putting the thumbe naile into the mouth, and with a jerke (from the upper teeth) make it to knacke'" (SINGER).

bite thee by the ear—I will, vi. 420: "This odd mode of expressing pleasure, which seems to be taken from the practice of animals, who, in a playful mood, bite each other's ears, &c., is very common in our old dramatists." Gifford's note on Jonson's Works, vol. ii. p. 184.

bitter sweeting—A very, vi. 420: sweeting means a kind of sweet apple; bitter-sweet or bitter-sweeting, an apple which has a compound taste of sweet and bitter ("A Bitter-sweet [Apple], Amari-mellum." Coles's Lat. and Engl. Dict.).

black men are pearls in beauteous ladies' eyes, i. 317: Ray gives "A black man's a jewel in a fair woman's eye." Proverbs, p. 47, ed. 1768.

Black-Monday, ii. 367: "Black Monday (as Mr. Peck observes, Explanatory and Critical Notes upon Shakespeare's Plays) 'is a moveable day, it is Easter-Monday, and was so called on this occasion. In the 34th of Edward III. [1360], the 14th of April, and the morrow after Easter-day, King Edward with his host lay before the city of Paris; which day was full dark of mist and hail, and so bitter cold, that many men died on their horses backs with the cold. Wherefore unto this day it hath been call'd the Blacke-Monday.' Stow, p. 264 b." (GREY.) blacks—O'er-dy'd, iii. 424: Blacks, i.e. mourning habiliments: by

bladed corn, vii. 47 : see note 84, vii. 90.

blank, the white in the centre of the butts (see clout), also the mark or aim in gunnery : the blank And level (the mark and range or line of aim) of my brain, iii. 442 ; As level as the cannon to his blank, vii. 174 ; The true blank of thine eye, vii. 253 ; within the blank ("shot," JOHNSON) of his displeasure, vii. 433.

blanks, benevolences, and I wot not what—As, iv. 129 : "Blanks. A mode of extortion, by which blank papers were given to the agents of the crown, which they were to fill up as they pleased, to authorize the demands they chose to make." Nares's Gloss. : "Stow records, that Richard II. 'compelled all the Religious, Gentlemen, and Commons, to set their scales to blankes, to the end he might, if it pleased him, oppresse them severally, or all at once : some of the Commons paid 1000 markes, some 1000 pounds,' &c. Chronicle, p. 319, fol. 1639" (HOLT WHITE).

blanks—Commit to these waste, viii. 387 : "Probably this Sonnet was designed to accompany a present of a book consisting of blank paper. Lord Orrery sent a birth-day gift of the same kind to Swift, together with a copy of verses of the same tendency" (STEEVENS).

blast in proof, burst in the trial (a metaphor, as Steevens observes, from the proving of fire-arms or cannon), vii. 191.

bleared thine cyne, imposed upon you, deceived you, iii. 173 (The expression is a very old one).

blench, to start off, to fly off, to shrink, to flinch, i. 505 ; iii. 430 (where Steevens explains Could man so blench? by "Could any man so start or fly off from propriety of behaviour?") ; vi. 7, 32 ; vii. 147.

blenches, "starts, or aberrations from rectitude" (MALONE), viii. 404.

blend, blended, blent : blend with objects manifold, viii. 445 : see note 9, viii. 450.

blent, blended : being blent together, ii. 385 ; beauty truly blent, iii. 341.

blind-worm, a slow-worm, vii. 46 ; blind-worms, ii. 282.

blister'd breeches, "breeches puffed, swelled out like blisters" (STEEVENS), breeches "gathered into close rolls or blisters" (FAIRHOLT), v. 499.

bloat, bloated, swollen with intemperance, vii. 172.

block, the shape or fashion of a hat,—properly the mould on which felt hats were formed : changes with the next block, ii. 76 (Dekker uses the word metaphorically: "But, sirra Ningle, of what fashion is this knights wit, of what blocke?" Satiro-mastix, 1602, sig. c 2).

block, the hat itself: This' a good block, vii. 327: see note 106, vii. 364.

blood, disposition, inclination, temperament, impulse: Blood, thou still art blood, i. 471; faith melteth into blood ("as wax, when opposed to the fire kindled by a witch, no longer preserves the figure of the person whom it was designed to represent, but flows into a shapeless lump; so fidelity, when confronted with beauty, dissolves into our ruling passion, and is lost there like a drop of water in the sea," STEEVENS), ii. 89; wisdom and blood combating, ii. 100; his important blood, iii. 255; Let thy blood be thy direction till thy death! vi. 37; Strange, unusual blood, vi. 550; To let these hands obey my blood, vii. 316; our bloods No more obey the heavens, &c. vii. 635 (see note 1, vii. 737).

blood—To be in, (a term of the chase), to be in good condition, to be vigorous: The deer was, as you know, in sanguis,—blood, ii. 192; If we be English deer, be, then, in blood ("of true mettle," JOHNSON), v. 57; Thou rascal, thou art worst in blood to run, vi. 139 (a rather difficult passage; see note 13, vi. 241); his crest up again, and the man in blood, vi. 211.

blood will I draw on thee,—thou art a witch, v. 20: "The superstition of those times taught that he that could draw the witch's blood was free from her power" (JOHNSON).

blood-boltered, vii. 49: "It [blood-boltered] is a provincial term, well known in Warwickshire, and probably in some other counties. When a horse, sheep, or other animal, perspires much, and any of the hair or wool, in consequence of such perspiration, or any redundant humour, becomes matted in tufts with grime and sweat, he is said to be boltered; and whenever the blood issues out, and coagulates, forming the locks into hard clotted bunches, the beast is said to be blood-boltered" (MALONE): "To bolter, in Warwickshire, signifies to daub, dirty, or begrime. 'I ordered (says my informant) a harness-collar to be made with a linen lining, but blacked, to give it the appearance of leather. The saddler made the lining as he was directed, but did not black it, saying, it would bolter the horse. Being asked what he meant by bolter, he replied, dirty, besmear; and that it was a common word in his country. This conversation passed within eight miles of Stratford-on-Avon.' In the same neighbourhood, when a boy has a broken head, so that his hair is matted together with blood, his head is said to be boltered (pronounced baltered). So, in Philemon Holland's translation of Pliny's Natural History, 1601, Book xii. ch. xvii. p. 370; 'they doe drop and distill the said moisture, which the shrewd and unhappie beast catcheth among the shag long haire of his beard. Now by reason of dust getting among it, it baltereth and cluttereth into knots,' &c." (STEEVENS): "Boltered. Having the hair clotted or matted together." Supplement to Richardson's Dict.: "According to Sharp's Ms. Warwickshire Glossary, snow is said to balter together; and Batchelor says, 'hasty pudding is said to be boltered when much of the flour remains in lumps.' Orthoepical Analysis, 1809, p. 126" (HALLIWELL): "I believe the Warwickshire word [balter] to have originated in ball, and to have meant balled, clogged, or matted." Latham's Johnson's Dict. sub "Bolter."

bloody, in or of the blood: Lust is but a bloody fire, i. 413.

blow, to blow upon: Air, quoth he, thy cheeks may blow, ii. 200; And the very ports they blow, vii. 8.

blow, to swell: blown Jack, iv. 268; the blown tide (wrongly explained "the tide driven by the wind"), vi. 232; blown ambition, vii. 320; a vent of blood, and something blown, vii. 597; our blown sails, viii. 70; how imagination blows him, iii. 356; This blows my heart, vii. 569.

blow my mouth—The flesh-fly, i. 209: Here, according to Malone, blow means "swell and inflame:" but, says Steevens, "to blow, as it stands in the text, means 'the act of a fly by which she lodges eggs in flesh'."

blubber'd queens, vii. 126; Blubbering and weeping, weeping and blubbering, vi. 439: it must be remembered that the verb to blubber did not formerly convey the somewhat ludicrous idea which it does at present.

blue-bottle rogue, an allusion to the dress of the beadle, which in Shakespeare's days was blue, iv. 398.

blue-caps, "a name of ridicule given to the Scots, from their blue bonnets" (JOHNSON), iv. 241.

blue coats, the common dress of serving-men in Shakespeare's time and long before, iii. 151; v. 14, 15.

blue eye—A, "A blueness about the eyes" (STEEVENS): a blue eye and sunken, iii. 45.

blunt, dull, stupid, insensible: That Clarence is so harsh, so blunt, unnatural, v. 308.

blurtd at, pished at, held in contempt, viii. 53.

blush . . . like a black dog, as the saying is, vi. 341: Ray gives, "To blush like a black dog." Proverbs, p. 218, ed. 1768: and Walker cites, from Withals's Adagia, p. 557, "Faciem perficit. Hee blush-eth like a blacke dogge, he hath a brazen face."

board, to accost, to address: board her, iii. 123, 331; board him, vii.

186; boarded me, i. 361; ii. 89; boarded her, iii. 282; boarding, i. 361 (with a quibble).

bob, a taunt, a scoff ("A bob, sanna." Coles's Lat. and Engl. Dict.): senseless of the bob, iii. 31.

bob, to cheat: You shall not bob us out of our melody, vi. 45; gold and jewels that I bobb'd from him ("fooled him out of," MALONE), vii. 455.

bodkin, a small dagger: his quietus make With a bare bodkin, vii. 149.

boggler, vii. 560: Means here "a vicious woman, one who starts from the right path. Johnson in his Dict. explains it a doubter, a timorous man; but it is evidently addressed, not to Thyreus, but Cleopatra." Nares's Gloss.

Bohemian-Tartar, "A wild appellation, to insinuate that Simple makes a strange appearance" (JOHNSON), i. 404.

bold, confident: Bold of your worthiness, ii. 176.

bolds, emboldens, vii. 334.

Bolingbroke about his marriage—The prevention of poor, iv. 127:

"When the Duke of Hereford, after his banishment, went into France, he was honourably entertained at that court, and would have obtained in marriage the only daughter of the Duke of Berry, uncle to the French king, had not Richard prevented the match" (STEEVENS).

bolins, viii. 37: "Bowlines are ropes by which the sails of a ship are governed when the wind is unfavourable. They are slackened when it is high. This term occurs again in The Two Noble Kinsmen,

'the wind is fair:

Top the bowling.'

They who wish for more particular information concerning bolings, may find it in Smith's Sea Grammar, 4to, 1627, p. 23" (STEEVENS).

bollen, swollen, ii. 396 (see note 69, ii. 425); viii. 327.

bolt, is described by R. Holme as being properly "an arrow with a round or half-round bobb at the end of it, with a sharp-pointed arrow-head proceeding therefrom" (Nares's Gloss.,—where see more concerning it); but it is used to signify an arrow in general: where the bolt of Cupid fell, ii. 279; fool's bolt, iii. 73; iv. 467; a bolt of nothing, vii. 704.

bolt is soon shot—A fool's: see fool's bolt is soon shot—A.

bolt on't—Make a shaft or a: see make a shaft, &c. bolted, sifted, iii. 476; iv. 441; vi. 189.

bolters, sieves, iv. 260.

bolting-hutch, "the wooden receptacle into which the meal is bolled" (STEEVENS), iv. 243.

bombard, a large leathern vessel for distributing liquor, i. 203; iv. 243; baiting of bombards ("tippling," JOHNSON), v. 569.

bombast, material for stuffing out dresses (originally cotton); As bombast, and as lining to the time, ii. 232; my sweet creature of bombast, iv. 240.

bona-roba, a courtesan ("Buonarobba, as we say good stuffe, that is, a good wholesome plum-cheeked [plump-cheeked] wench." Florio's Ital. and Engl. Dict.), iv. 360; bona-robas, iv. 355.

bond—I know it for my, I know it "to be my bounden duty" (MASON), vii. 510.

bonneted, vi. 167: see note 82, vi. 250: This is generally explained "took off their bonnets" (and Cotgrave has "Bonneter. To put of his cap vnto." Fr. and Engl. Dict.); but the passage is very awkward and obscure.

book, one's studies, learning: The tenour of my book, ii. 122; my book preferr'd me to the king, v. 179; A beggar's book, v. 481 (Compare unbookish).

book, a writing, a paper: By that time will our book (articles, paper of conditions), I think, be drawn, iv. 252; By this, our book's drawn, iv. 253; A book? O rare one! vii. 719.

book,—We quarrel in print, by the, iii. 74: "The particular book here alluded to is a very ridiculous treatise of one Vincentio Saviolo, entitled Of Honor and Honorable Quarrels, in quarto, printed by Wolf, 1594, forming the Second Book of Vincentio Saviolo his Practise. This Second Book he describes as 'A Discourse most necessarie for all Gentlemen that haue in regarde their honors, touching the giuing and receiuing of the Lie, wherevpon the Duello and the Combats in diuers sortes doth insue, and many other inconueniences for lack only of the true knowledge of honor, and the contrarie, and the right vnderstanding of wordes, which heere is plainly set downe.' The contents of the several chapters are as follow. 1. 'A Rvle and Order concerning the Challenger and Defender.' 2. 'What the reason is, that the partie vnto whom the Lie is giuen ought to become Challenger, and of the nature of Lies.' 3. 'Of the manner and diuersitie of Lies.' 4. 'Of Lies certaine.' 5. 'Of conditionall Lyes.' 6. 'Of the Lye in generall.' 7. 'Of the Lye in particular.' 8. 'Of foolish Lyes.' 9. 'A conclusion touching the Challenger and the Defender, and of the wresting and returning back of the Lye or Dementie.' In the chapter 'Of Conditionall Lies,' speaking of the particle if, he says, 'Conditionall Lyes be such as are giuen conditionally; as if a man should saie or write these woordes,—If thou hast saide that I haue offered my Lord abuse, thou lyeest; or if thou saiest so heerafter, thou shalt lye; and as often as thou hast or shalt so say, so oft do I and will I say that thou doest lye. Of these kinde of Lyes giuen in this manner often arise much contention in words, and diuers intricate worthy battailes, multiplying wordes vpon wordes, whereof no sure conclusion can arise.' By which he means, they cannot proceed to cut one another's throats while there is an if between. Which is the reason of Shakespeare making the Clown say, 'I know when seven justices,' &c. Caranza was another of these authentic authors upon the Duello. Fletcher, in his last act of Love's Pilgrimage, ridicules him with much humour" (WARBURTON,—whose note I have greatly altered and corrected by means of the old ed. of the transl. of Saviolo's work).

Book of Riddles—The, i. 350: Was, in all probability, what is called in the edition of 1629, The Booke of Meery Riddles, &c., a copy of which is preserved at Bridgewater House. No earlier edition is known; but earlier editions must have once existed, as the work is mentioned by Laneham in his Letter from Kenilworth, 1575.

Book of Songs and Sonnets, i. 350: Most probably the Songes and Sonnettes by Lord Surrey, Sir Thomas Wyatt, and others, printed in 1557, and very popular during the time of Queen Elizabeth.

books for good manners, iii. 74: There were several books of this kind, the earliest of which was probably The boke named and intyled Good Maners, printed by De Worde in 1507.

boot, profit, gain, something added: with boot, i. 471; vii. 345; it is no boot (it is of no avail), iii. 179; v. 63; Grace to boot (over and above, in addition), iii. 423; there's some boot ("something over and above," JOHNSON), iii. 484; without boot! what a boot is here, &c. iii. 485; there is no boot ("no advantage, no use, in delay or refusal," JOHNSON), iv. 109; make boot of this, v. 165; Young York he is but boot ("that which is thrown in," JOHNSON, a make-weight), v. 426; Saint George to boot (over and above, in addition), v. 451; Make boot of his distraction, vii. 563. (In the passages, Grace to boot and Saint George to boot, Malone explains to boot by "to help.") boot, booty: Make boot upon the summer's velvet buds; Which pillage, &c. iv. 430; boot and glory too, viii. 130.

boot, to benefit, to enrich: I will boot thee with what gift beside Thy modesty can beg, vii. 527.

boot, to put on boots: Boot, boot, Master Shallow, iv. 397.

boots—Give me not the, i. 264: "A proverbial expression, though now disused, signifying, don't make a laughing-stock of me; don't play upon me. The French have a phrase, Bailler foin en corne; which Cotgrave thus interprets, To give one the boots; to sell him a bargain" (THEOBALD,—whose explanation of the text I believe to be right): "An allusion, as it is supposed, to the diabolical torture of the boot. Not a great while before this play was written it had been inflicted in the presence of King James on one Dr. Fian, a supposed wizard, who was charged with raising the storms that the king encountered in his return from Denmark . . . The unfortunate man was afterwards burned" (DOUCE): This torture consisted in the leg and knee of the criminal being enclosed within a tight iron boot or case, wedges of iron being then driven in with a mallet between the knee and the iron boot: but probably most readers will recollect the description of Macbriar undergoing this punishment in Scott's Old Mortality.

bore of the matter—Much too light for the, vii. 186: "The bore is the caliber of a gun, or the capacity of the barrel. 'The matter (says Hamlet) would carry heavier words'" (JOHNSON).

bores me with some trick—He, "He stabs or wounds me by some artifice or fiction" (JOHNSON), "He undermines me with some device" (STAUNTON), v. 488.

borne in hand: see bear in hand.

borrows money in God's name, ii. 137: "i.e. is a common beggar. This alludes to the 17th verse of the 19th chapter of Proverbs; 'He that giveth to the poor lendeth unto the Lord'" (STEEVENS).

bosky, woody, i. 220 (where, according to Steevens, bosky acres "are fields divided from each other by hedge-rows"); iv. 274.

bosom, wish, desire: And you shall have your bosom on this wretch, i. 503.

bosom of thy love—Even in the milk-white, i. 297; "In her excellent-white bosom, these," vii. 134: "Women anciently had a pocket in the fore part of their stays, in which they not only carried love-letters and love-tokens, but even their money and materials for needle-work" (STEEVENS).

brach—The deep-mouth'd, iii. 106 ; Lady, my brach, iv. 252 ; Achilles' brach, vi. 30 (on which expression see note 46, vi. 108) ; the lady brach, vii. 266 ; spaniel, brach, or lym, vii. 307 : "Brach. From the French brac or braque, or the German bract, a scenting dog : a lurcher, or beagle ; or any fine-nosed hound. Spelman's Glossary. Used also, by corruption, for a bitch, probably from similarity of sound ; and because, on certain occasions, it was convenient to have a term less coarse in common estimation than the plain one. See Du Cange in Bracco. The following account shows the last-mentioned corruption : 'There are in England and Scotland two kinds of hunting-dogs, and no where else in the world : the first kind is called ane rache (Scotch), and this is a foot-scenting creature, both of wild beasts, birds, and fishes also, which lie hid among the rocks : the female thereof in England is called a brache. A brach is a mannerly name for all hound-bitches.' Gentleman's Recreation, p. 27, 8vo." Nares's Gloss. : "Brach. The kennel term for a bitch-hound." Gifford's note on Ford's Works, vol. i. p. 22.

braid—Since Frenchmen are so, iii. 261 : Here Steevens understands braid to mean "crafty or deceitful ;" while Richardson (in his Dict.) would refer it to "the suddenness and violence" of Bertram's wooing. (In Dr. Latham's edition of Johnson's Dict. is a long and very unsatisfactory article on this word.)

braid, to upbraid, to reproach : 'Twould braid yourself too near, viii. 9.

brain, to beat out the brains, i. 212 ; That brain'd (defeated) my purpose, i. 517.

brain, to comprehend, to understand: such stuff as madmen Tongue, and brain not, vii. 719.

brainish apprehension, "distempered, brain-sick mood, or conceit" (CALDECOTT), vii. 173.

brain-pan, the skull, v. 185. *

brakes of vice, and answer none—Some run from, i. 458: Here the meaning of brakes (a word which was used in sundry significations) has been much disputed: the context, I think, shows that we ought to understand it in the sense of "engines of torture."

brands—Nicely Depending on their, vii. 668: Here brands "are likely to have been the inverted torches mentioned by Mr. Steevens" (DOUCE).

brass of this day's work—Small witness live in, iv. 482: "in brass, i.e. in brazen plates anciently let into tomb-stones" (STEEVENS).

brave, a boast, a vaunt, a defiance: There end thy brave, iv. 68; This brave shall oft make thee to hide thy head, vi. 71; to bear me down with braves, vi. 298.

brave, to make fine or splendid: thou hast braved many men; brave not me (with a quibble), iii. 162; He should have brav'd the east an hour ago, v. 451.

brave, to defy, to bluster: Enter Demetrius and Chiron, braving, vi. 298.

bravery, finery, sumptuous apparel, magnificence: witless bravery, i. 453; his bravery is not on my cost, iii. 32; double change of bravery, iii. 160; There shall want no bravery, viii. 189.

bravery, bravado: the bravery of his grief, vii. 202; malicious bravery, vii. 378.

brawl—A French, ii. 183: "The word brawl in its signification of a dance is from the French branle, indicating a shaking or swinging motion. The following accounts [account] of this dance may be found more intelligible than that cited from Marston [in his Malcontent, act iv. sc. 2]. It was performed by several persons uniting hands in a circle and giving each other continual shakes, the steps changing with the tune. It usually consisted of three pas and a pied-joint, to the time of four strokes of the bow; which being repeated was termed a double brawl. With this dance balls were usually opened" (DOUCE). But there was a great variety of brawls.

brazen tombs—Live register'd upon our, ii. 163: The allusion, as was first remarked by Douce, is "to the ornamenting the tombs of eminent persons with figures and inscriptions on plates of brass."

breach than the observance—More honour'd in the, vii. 120: Samuel Rogers used to maintain that this line, though it has passed into a sort of proverbial expression, is essentially nonsense: "how," he would ask, "can a custom be honour'd in the breach?" Compare the following line of a play which has been printed as a joint production of Jonson, Fletcher, and Middleton; breach of the sea, breaking of the sea, iii. 343 ("the boat . . . would be dashed in a thousand pieces by the breach of the sea." Defoe's Robinson Crusoe, vol. i. p. 43, ed. 1755; "the wind . . . made a great breach of the sea upon the point." Id. vol. i. p. 132; "a breach of the sea upon some rocks." Id. vol. i. p. 134).

"He keeps his promise best that breaks with hell." The Widow, act iii. sc. 2.

break cross or across, a metaphor from tilting, at which it was reckoned disgraceful for the tilter to break his spear across the body of his opponent, instead of breaking it in a direct line: this last [staff] was broke cross, ii. 133; breaks them bravely, quite traverse, athwart the heart of his lover, iii. 50; so I had broke thy pate . . . Good faith, across, iii. 224.

break up, to carve,—used metaphorically of opening a letter: Boyet, you can carve; Break up this capon, ii. 189; An it shall please you to break up this, ii. 365: On the first of these passages Theobald observes; "Our poet uses this metaphor as the French do their poulet; which signifies both a young fowl and a love-letter. Poulet, amatoris literæ, says Richelet; and quotes from Voiture, Repondre au plus obligeant poulet du monde, To reply to the most obliging letter in the world. The Italians use the same manner of expression, when they call a love-epistle una pollicetta [polizetta] amorosa. I ow'd the hint of this equivocal use of the word to my ingenious friend, Mr. Bishop:" Farmer adds; "Henry IV., consulting with Sully about his marriage, says, 'My niece of Guise would please me best, notwithstanding the malicious reports that she loves poulets in paper better than in a fricasee.' A message is called a cold pigeon in the letter [by Laneham] concerning the entertainments at Killingworth Castle."

break with, to open a subject to: now will we break with him, i. 272; to break with thee of some affairs, i. 292; I will break with her and with her father, ii. 82; Then after to her father will I break, ibid.; let us not break with him, vi. 634; Have broken with the king, v. 556.

break with, to break an engagement with: I would not break with her for more money than I'll speak of, i. 379.

breast, a voice: the fool has an excellent breast, iii. 346.

breath, a breathing, an exercise: An after-dinner's breath, vi. 89; either to the uttermost, Or else a breath ("a slight exercise of arms," STEEVENS), vi. 74.

breathe, to utter, to speak: The worst that man can breathe, vi. 541; You breathe in vain, vi. 542; The youth you breathe of, vii. 129; to breathe What thou hast said to me, vii. 172.

breathe, to take exercise: thou wast created for men to breathe themselves upon thee, iii. 236; as swift As breathed (well exercised, kept in breath) stags, iii. 111; breath'd ("inured by constant practice," JOHNSON). . . . To an untirable and continuat goodness, vi. 507.

breathe in your watering, stop and take breath while you are drinking, iv. 233 (Compare a passage in the old play Timon, edited by me for the Shakespeare Society, from a Ms. in my possession;

"wee also doe enacte

That all holde vp their heades, and laughe aloude, Driake much at one draughte, breathe not in their drinke," &c. p. 87; which lines, before the play was printed, were cited by Steevens, to support an erroneous interpretation of the passage of Shakespeare).

breathing, exercise, action: who are sick For breathing and exploit, iii. 213; Here is a lady that wants breathing too, viii. 29.

breathing time, time for exercise: 'tis the breathing time of day with me, vii. 205.

breathing-while, time sufficient for drawing breath, v. 364; viii. 277.

Brecknock, while my fearful head is on—To, v. 422: Meaning "to the Castle of Brecknock in Wales, where the Duke of Buckingham's estate lay" (MALONE). • breech'd with gore—Their daggers Unmannerly, vii. 28: Here breech'd has drawn forth a variety of explanations from the commentators; and Dr. Latham in his recent edition of Johnson's Dict. queries if it means "sheath'd:" after all, probably Douce is right when he suggests "that the expression, though in itself something unmannerly, simply means covered as with breeches."

breeching scholar, a scholar liable to be breeched, flogged, iii. 140.

breed-bate, a causer of strife or contention, i. 356: see bate. • breese, the gad-fly, vi. 18; vii. 552.

Brentford—The fat woman of, i. 397; the witch of Brentford, ibid.:

In the corresponding scene of the quarto she is called "Gillian of Brainford;" who appears to have been a real personage, and whose name was well known in our author's time. A black-letter tract, entitled Iyl of breyntfords testament. Newly compiled, n.d. 4to, was written by Robert, and printed by William, Copland: the "Iyl" who figures in that coarse tract "kept an inne of ryght good lodgyng;" but no mention is made of her having dealt in witchcraft. Yet one of the characters in Dekker and Webster's Westward Ho says, "I doubt that old hag, Gillian of Brainford, has bewitched me." Webster's Works, p. 238, ed. Dyce, 1857.

bribed buck, i. 411: see note 125, i. 437.

brief, a short writing, an abstract: There is a brief how many sports are ripe, ii. 313; Shall draw this brief into as huge a volume, iv. 15.

brief, a contract of espousals, a license of marriage: Shall seem expedient on the new-born brief, iii. 235.

brief, a letter: this sealed brief, iv. 272.

brief, in brief: Brief, I am To those that prate, and have done, no companion, viii. 195.

brief, rife, common, prevalent (a provincialism): A thousand businesses are brief in hand, iv. 61.

briefly, quickly: Go put on thy defences. Eros. Briefly, sir, vii. 566.

bring me out—You, "You put me out, draw or divert me from my point" (CALDECOTT), iii. 42.

bring—To be with a person to, a cant expression, which was formerly common enough, though it occurs only once in our author's plays,—Cres. To bring, uncle? Pan. Ay, a token from Troilus, vi. 16; and see note 12, vi. 103: of the various explanations which this phrase has called forth none appears to me satisfactory. (Compare the following passages;

"And I'll close with Bryan till I have gotten the thing That he hath promis'd me, and then I'll be with him to bring:
Well, such shifting knaves as I am, the ambodexter must play,
And for commodity serve every man, whatsoever the world say."
Sir Clifomon and Sir Clamydes,—Peele's Works,
p. 503, ed. Dyce, 1861.

"And heere Ile haue a fling at him, that's flat;
And, Balthazar, Ile be with thee to bring,
And thee, Lorenzo," &c. Kyd's Spanish Tragedy, sig. a 8 verso, ed. 1618.

"Orlando shakes himself, and with a spring Ten paces off the English duke he cast;
But Brandimart from him he could not fling,
That was behind him, and did hold him fast:
But yet with Oliver he was to bring;
For with his fist he smote him as he past,
That downe he fell, and hardly scaped killing,
From mouth, nose, eyes, the bloud apace distilling." Harington's Orlando Furioso, B. xxxix. 48, p. 329, ed. 1684.

"Clem. And Ile go furnish myself with some better accouttriments, and Ile be with you to bring presently." Heywood's Fair Maid of the West, Sec. Part, sig. 1 2 verso, ed. 1631.

"Lip. Now, Mistress Maria, ward yourself: if my strong hope fail not, I shall be with you to bring.
Shr. To bring what, sir? some more o' your kind?"
The Family of Love,—Middleton's Works, vol. ii.
p. 147, ed. Dyce.

"If he prove not yet
The cunning'st, rankest rogue that ever canted,

I'll never see man again; I know him to bring,
And can interpret every new face he makes."

Cupid's Revenge,—Beaumont and Fletcher's Works, vol. ii. p. 419, ed. Dyce.

"E. Love. I would have watch'd you, sir, by your good patience, For ferreting in my ground.

Lady. You have been with my sister?

Wel. Yes; to bring.

E. Love. An heir into the world, he means."

The Scornful Lady,—Beaumont and Fletcher's Works, vol. iii. p. 107, ed. Dyce.

"Why did not I strike her? but I will do something,
And be with you to bring before you think on't."

The Ball,—Shirley's Works, vol. iii. p. 86,
ed. Gifford and Dyce.

The passage of The Ball just quoted has been misunderstood and corrupted by Gifford: it belongs to one of the plays which were printed before the edition was put into my hands.)

broach, to spit, to transfix, vi. 329; broach'd, ii. 316; iv. 496.

brock, a badger, iii. 357.

brogues—Clouted, nailed coarse shoes, vii. 701.

broke cross: see break cross.

broken mouth, a mouth which has lost some of its teeth: My mouth no more were broken than these boys', iii. 231.

broken music, iii. 12; iv. 505; vi. 44: "'Broken music' means what we now term 'a string band.' Shakespeare plays with the term twice [thrice]: firstly in Troilus and Cressida, act iii. sc. 1, proving that the musicians then on the stage were performing on stringed instruments; and secondly in Henry V., act v. sc. 2, where he says to the French Princess Katherine, 'Come, your answer in broken music; for thy voice is music and thy English broken.' [Again in As you like it, act i. sc. 2: 'But is there any else longs to feel this broken music in his sides?'] The term originated probably from harps, lutes, and such other stringed instruments as were played without a bow, not having the capability to sustain a long note to its full duration of time." Chappell's Popular Music of the Olden Time, &c. vol. i. p. 246, sec. ed.

broker, a pander, a procuress, a go-between: a goodly broker, i. 268; This bawd, this broker, iv. 28; To play the broker (match-maker) in mine own behalf, v. 290; Hence, broker-lackey, vi. 100; all brokers-between, vi. 52; they are brokers, vii. 119; brokers to defiling, viii. 444.

broker—A crafty knave does need no, v. 118: A proverbial sentence: Ray has "Two cunning knaves need no broker; or, a cunning knave, &c." Proverbs, p. 127, ed. 1768.

brokes, deals as a pander, iii. 251.

brooch in this all-hating world—A strange, iv. 179, "i.e. is as strange and uncommon as a brooch which is now no longer worn" (MALONE): I doubt if there is any allusion here to brooches being out of fashion. The word "sign" in the preceding line probably suggested the expression "a strange brooch:" "It is a sign of love; and love to Richard is, amid so much hatred, a strange feeling for any one to display—as he would a brooch or ornament." ("Brooch"—about the precise meaning of which Malone squabbled with Mason—was not unfrequently used metaphorically for ornament: he is the brooch, indeed, And gem of all the nation, vii. 189. "These sonnes of Mars, who in their times were the glorious Brooches of our nation, and admirable terrour to our enemies." The World runnes on Wheelles, p. 237,—Taylor's Workes, 1630;

"Next dy'd old Charles, true honor'd Nottingham, The Brooch and honor of his house and name."

Upon the Death of King James, p. 824,—id.) brooch'd, adorned, vii. 581.

brooded, iv. 40: see note 77, iv. 88.

brook—Flying at the, Hawking at water-fowl, v. 127.

broom-groves, i. 220: "The reading of the elder editions is 'broom groves,' which for what reason it is altered [to 'broom groves'] I cannot conceive. Ceres was certainly not the goddess of the woods; and those very broom groves seem to be expressly hinted at, in the very words of Ceres which follow a little below, 'my bosky acres;' which very properly express a broom-brake, as it is called, at least in the western part of the island" (HEATH): "Broom in this place signifies the Spartium scoparium, of which brooms are frequently made. Near Gamlingay in Cambridgeshire it grows high enough to conceal the tallest cattle as they pass through it; and in places where it is cultivated, still higher: a circumstance that had escaped my notice, till I was told of it by Professor Martyn" (STEEVENS): "In the old Scotch song of 'My daddy is a canker'd carle,' the songstress places her lover in a broom-grove;

'But let them say, or let them do,

'Tis a' ane to me;

For he's low down, he's in the broom,

Is whiting for me'" (MASON):

"Nares observes that as the broom, or genista, is a low shrub, which gives no shade, it has been doubted what is the exact meaning of broom-groves; but there are two kinds of broom, as mentioned in Lyte's edition of Dodoens, 1578, p. 663, 'the one high and tawle, the other lowe and small,' the first of which is stated to grow 'commonly to the length of a long or tawle man,' and Parkinson enumerates several other varieties. The Spartium scoparium, which grows to a great height, is probably the species alluded to by Shakespeare. There is a notice in the ancient romance of Gay of

Warwick, preserved in the Auchinleck Ms. at Edinburgh, of three hundred Sarazens being concealed 'in a brom field.' See the Abbot'sford Club edition, p. 292" (HALLIWELL): "Hanmer changes this ['broom groves'] to 'brown groves,' as does Mr. Collier's annotator; and a more unhappy alteration can hardly be conceived, since it at once destroys the point of the allusion: yellow, the colour of the broom, being supposed especially congenial to the lass-lorn and dismissed bachelor. Thus Burton, in his 'Anatomy of Melancholy,' Part iii. Sec. 2,—'So long as we are wooers, and may kiss and coll at our pleasure, nothing is so sweet; we are in heaven, as we think: but when we are once tied, and have lost our liberty, marriage is an hell: give me my yellow hose again'" (STAUNTON): "Is the word grove ever applied to shrubs by the Elizabethan writers? Hanmer's 'brown groves' has been before the public for more than a century, and has been vigorously assailed by men of eminent learning and ability, but no instance of this [i. e. of grove applied to shrubs] has been produced, and therefore I conclude that none exists. The notion of disconsolate lovers betaking themselves to groves is common enough in poetry: Shakespeare himself has placed Romeo in a sycamore grove when Rosaline was cruel, and we may judge from this the sort of grove he would select for young gentlemen in the like case. Till it can be shown that a growth of broom may be called a grove, it seems idle to dispute about the height of the shrub. In Babington's Botany it is said to be 2½ or 3 feet high, and this is certainly the usual height to which it grows on Hampstead Heath, though occasionally a plant may be found taller: I am told that in Italy it grows to the height of 6 or 7 feet; but that surely is no great matter.—The defences set up for the old reading ['broom-groves'] appear to me singularly weak. 'Ceres,' says Heath, 'was certainly not the goddess of the woods.' Very true; and just as certainly she was not the goddess of 'broom-brakes,' or of 'vineyards,' or of 'bosky acres,' or 'turfy mountains,' or 'unshrubbed downs,' or of 'flowers,' or of the 'sea-marge sterile and rocky-hard;' all which Heath has overlooked. It seems that in the present masque Ceres appears as the Goddess of the Earth, Δημήτηρ. That this was the original character of the Greek goddess is probable from the etymology of her name; but how Shakespeare came so to describe her, is a question for those who have studied the subject of his learning. He may have picked up a good deal of out-of-the-way classical knowledge from Jonson [?]. I think, however, we are warranted rather in asking why woods are left out in this passage than why they are brought in.—Mason's quotation from the old Scotch song proves nothing as to broom-groves, for the song merely mentions broom. Mason accordingly is not warranted in saying that 'the songstress places her lover in a broom-grove;' yet Halliwell prints Mason's assertion, but omits the quotation with which he supports it; so that everybody who trusts to his sixty-guinea edition must necessarily believe that the phrase in question occurs in the old song. As to Halliwell's 800 Saracens hid in a broom field; the last word (field) is surely incompatible with groves. Besides, the same thing might happen, and indeed has happened, in a field of wheat. In The Morning Herald of 4 July 1861, there is an American account of 3000 rebels 'concealed in a thick undergrowth and wheat fields.' This, however, would not warrant such a phrase as wheat-groves.—I must confess that Staunton's note with the quotation from Burton's Anatomy appears to me far more unhappy than Hanmer's alteration. Shakespeare says nothing of the blossom of the broom; he only speaks of its shadow. Shakespeare could not have been guilty of so far-fetched an allusion, and such a perversion of language. I know of no passage in which the colour yellow is represented as 'especially congenial to lass-lorn bachelors.' Still, I am aware of several passages where yellow is mentioned as the colour of jealousy, but for the most part with reference to married people, not bachelors: I daresay, however, there are similar allusions to the jealousy of the unmarried also. Jokes about yellow hose, &c., are common enough. But in this passage from Burton the phrase refers neither to jealousy nor to unsuccessful love. Surely the context shows that here 'give me my yellow hose again' means 'give me my bachelor's days again (when I wore yellow hose,—which were once in high fashion, and are still worn by the boys of Christ's Hospital,—and) when I was kissing and colling my intended, and not satiated with a wife'" (W. N. LETTSOM).

Brownist, iii. 365: "The Brownists were so called from Mr. Robert Browne, a noted separatist in Queen Elizabeth's reign. See Strype's Annals of Queen Elizabeth, vol. iii. pp. 15, 16, &c. In his Life of Whitgift, p. 323, he informs us, that Browne, in the year 1582, 'went off from the separation, and came into the communion of the church'" (GREY). Browne died in 1630.

bruising irons of wrath—Thy, v. 445: "The allusion is to the ancient mace" (HENLEY), which was "formerly used by our English cavalry: see Grose on Ancient Armour, p. 53" (STEEVENS).

Brutus' bastard hand, v. 168: "Brutus was the son of Servilia, a Roman lady, who had been concubine to Julius Cæsar" (STEEVENS).

bubukles, iv. 462: According to Johnson (Dict.), bubukle is "a red pimple;" according to Nares (Gloss.), "a corrupt word, for carbuncle, or something like it;" according to Halliwell (Dict. of Arch. and Prov. Words), "a botch or imposthume."

buck of the first head, a buck of the fifth year, ii. 192.

buck-basket, a basket in which linen was carried to be bucked, i. 391 (twice): see the next article.

bucking, i. 383: To buck clothes means properly, I believe, to wash them in lie, and beat them, while wet, with a sort of flattened pole on a table or block ("Bucata . . . lye to wash a buck." Florio's Ital. and Engl. Dict.; "To Buck Cloaths, linteā lizivio incoquere et rudibus cedere." Coles's Lat. and Engl. Dict.); but we may gather from the present scene that the dirty linen of the Ford family was to be bucked in the river, and perhaps to be beaten on a stone, without the use of lie.

bucks, quantities of linen bucked at once (see above): she washes bucks here at home, v. 170.

buckle, to join in close fight, to engage with, to encounter: buckle with me, v. 12; too strong for me to buckle with, v. 70; buckle with thee blows (deal blows with thee in close fight), v. 248; Be buckled with, v. 59.

buckle, to bend, to bow: buckle under life, iv. 318.

buckler, to defend: I'll buckler thee against a million, iii. 149; the guilt of murder bucklers thee, v. 158; buckler falsehood with a pedigree, v. 283.

bucklers—I give thee the, I yield thee the victory, I lay aside all thoughts of defence ("Je te le donne gaigné. I grant it, I yield it thee; I confesse thy action; I give thee the bucklers." Cotgrave's Fr. and Engl. Dict. sub "Gaigné"), ii. 138.

Bucklersbury in simple-time—Smell like, i. 382: Bucklersbury was formerly inhabited chiefly by druggists, who sold all sorts of herbs (simples), both green and dry.

buff—A fellow all in, ii. 34; in a suit of buff, ii. 35; And is not a buff jerkin a most sweet robe of durance? iv. 211: Buff was formerly worn by serjeants and catchpoles: see durance, &c.

bug, a bugbear, iii. 452; v. 309; bugs, iii. 126; With, ho! such bugs and goblins in my life (With "such multiplied causes of alarm, if I were suffered to live," CALDECOTT), vii. 201; vii. 713.

building, fixture: This jewel holds his building on my arm, viii. 24: see note 74, viii. 84.

bulk, trunk, breast ("Pettorata, a shocke against the breast or bulke." Florio's Ital. and Engl. Dict.; "The Bulke of the bodie. Tronc, buste." Cotgrave's Fr. and Engl. Dict.): my panting bulk, v. 314; to shatter all his bulk, vii. 130; Beating her bulk, viii. 300.

bulk, a kind of stall, board, or ledge outside a house, on which articles were set for sale ("Balcone . . . a bulke or stall of a shop." Florio's Ital. and Engl. Dict.; "A Bulk (before a Shop), Appendix." Coles's Lat. and Engl. Dict.): stand behind this bulk, vii. 454; stalls, bulks, windows, vi. 164.

Bullen! No, we'll no Bullens . . . This candle burns not clear, v. 583-4:

"There may be a play intended on the word Bullen, which is said to have been an ancient provincial name for a candle" (STAUNTON).

bully-rock, i. 353, 364 (three times): "Messrs. Steevens and Whalley maintain that the above term (a cant one) derives its origin from the rook in the game of chess; but it is very improbable that that noble game, never the amusement of gamblers, should have been ransacked on this occasion. It means a hectoring, cheating sharper, as appears from A new dictionary of the terms of the canting crew, no date, 12mo, and from the lines prefixed to The compleat gamester, 1680, 12mo, in both which places it is spelt bully-rock. Nor is Mr. Whalley correct in stating that rock and not rook is the true name of the chess-piece, if he mean that it is equivalent to the Latin rupes" (DOUCE): But in the above passages the Host uses bully-rock jocularly, certainly not as a term of reproach; and Coles has "A Bully {Rock, } Vir fortis et animosus." Lat. and Engl. Dict. (I may observe that "Bully-rock" occurs over and over again in Shadwell's Sullen Lovers: see his Works, vol. i. pp. 26, 37, 45, 46, 62, 69, 74, 83, 84, 101, 102, 108.)

bum is the greatest thing about you—Your, i. 462: An allusion to Pompey's large trunk-hose, round swelling breeches.

bung, a sharper, a pickpocket, iv. 344.

bunting—I took this lark for a, iii. 239: the Common Bunting, Emberiza miliaria: "The general resemblance of this Bunting to the Sky Lark in the colour of its plumage has given origin to another provincial name by which it is known, that of the Bunting Lark." Yarrell's Hist. of Brit. Birds, vol. i. p. 481, sec. ed.

burden bear—Sweet sprites, the, i. 189; belike 't hath some burden, then? i. 269; that goes without a burden, ii. 114; sing my song without a burden, iii. 42; burden of my wooing dance, iii. 122; such delicate burdens of "dildos," &c. iii. 471: "The burden of a song, in the old acceptation of the word, was the base, foot, or under-song. It was sung throughout, and not merely at the end of the verse. Burden is derived from bouzioun, a drone base (French bourdon)." Chappell's Popular Music of the Olden Time, &c. vol. i. p. 222, sec. ed.

burdocks, a plant too well known to have been noticed here, had not Mr. Beisly, in his Shakspeare's Garden, &c. pp. 142-3, quite misrepresented the reading of the old eds. in the following line, With burdocks, hemlock, nettles, cuckoo-flowers, vii. 319; where burdocks is Hanmer's highly-probable correction for "hoar-docks" and "hor-docks" of the quartos, and "Hardokes" and "Hardocks" of the folios: Mr. Beisly, however, erroneously supposes that the early copies agree in having "harlocks" (which, in fact, is Farmer's conjecture), and says, "This I consider should be charlock[s] or carlock[s], the ancient name of wild mustard," &c.

burgonet, or burganet, a close-fitting helmet, so called because invented by the Burgundians, v. 192, 193 (twice); vii. 511.

burn daylight—proverbial expression derived from the lighting of candles or lamps by day, and applied to wasting time in superfluous acts, i. 361; vi. 420.

burning devil take them!—A, vi. 89: "Alluding to the venereal disease, formerly called the brenning or burning" (MASON).

burst, broke, broken: he burst his head, iv. 362; the glasses you have burst, iii. 105; hath been often burst, iii. 144; how her bridle was burst, iii. 151; Your heart is burst, vii. 377.

Burton-heath, iii. 110: Means, no doubt, Burton-on-the-heath, "a small village on the borders of Warwickshire and Oxfordshire" (KNIGHT).

bush—Good wine needs no, iii. 77: "It appears formerly to have been the custom to hang a tuft of ivy at the door of a vintner. I suppose ivy was rather chosen than any other plant, as it has relation to Bacchus" (STEEVENS): The custom was of great antiquity: "The practice is still observed in Warwickshire and the adjoining counties, at statute-hirings, wakes, &c. by people who sell ale at no other time. And hence, I suppose [doubtless], the Bush tavern at Bristol and other places" (RITSON).

buss, to kiss, iv. 42; vi. 78.

but, unless, except: To think but nobly of my grandmother, i. 180; but I be deceiv'd, iii. 141, 164; But on this day let seamen fear no wreck, iv. 31; but goodman Puff, iv. 396; but Your comfort makes the rescue, vii. 554; But Being charg'd, we will be still by land, vii. 573.

but I shall lose the grounds I work upon, without losing the grounds, &c. iii. 255.

butcher's cur—This, v. 488: "Wolsey is said to have been the son of a butcher" (JOHNSON).

butt—You ruinous, vi. 81: "Patroclus reproaches Thersites with deformity, with having one part crowded into another" (JOHNSON).

butt-shaft, "a kind of arrow, used for shooting at butts; formed without a barb, so as to stick into the butts, and yet be easily extracted" (Nares's Gloss.), ii. 175; vi. 418.

buttery-bar, and let it drink—Bring your hand to the, iii. 392: The buttery-bar means the place in palaces and in great houses whence provisions were dispensed; and it is still to be seen in most of our old colleges: I do not answer for the correctness of the following explanation; "The bringing the hand to the buttery-bar, and letting it drink, is a proverbial phrase among forward Abigaila, to ask at once for a kiss and a present. Sir Andrew's slowness of comprehension in this particular gave her a just suspicion, at once, of his frigidity and avarice. She therefore calls his hand dry; the moistness of the hand being a sign of liberality, as well in matters of love as money" (KENRICK).

buttons be disclos'd—Before their, Before their buds be opened, vii. 116.

buttons—'Tis in, his, i. 380: "All that the Host means is, that Fenton has it in him to succeed: it is, as it were, buttoned up within his dress. There is no sort of allusion to bachelors' buttons," &c. (COLLIER).

buxom, lively, spritely, iv. 460; viii. 6.

buy and sell, to dispose of utterly, to over-reach, to betray: Does buy and sell his honour as he pleases, v. 490; bought and sold, ii. 24; iv. 70; v. 59, 451; vi. 28: "To be bought and sold in a company." Ray's Proverbs, p. 179, ed. 1768. (So Harman, in his Caueat or Warening for Common Curators, &c., 1573, "the leud lousey language . . . wherewith they bye and sell the common people as they passe through the country." p. 64; reprint 1814; and Skelton, in his Magnyfycence, buzzard, a common and inferior kind of hawk (Buteo vulgaris, —see Yarrell's Hist. of Brit. Birds, vol. i. p. 82, sec. ed.): O slow-wing'd turtle! shall a buzzard take thee? iii. 134; kites and buzzards, v. 354.

"Why, was not for money Troy bothe bought and solde?"

Works, vol. i. p. 277, ed. Dyce.)

buzzard, a beetle (so named from its buzzing): Ay, for a turtle, —as he takes a buzzard, iii. 134.

'by, an abbreviation of aby (which see): Thou shalt 'by this dear, ii. 303.

by and by, immediately: That shall be by and by, i. 214; I'll be with her by and by, i. 393; Now fetch me a stool hither by and by, v. 133.

by the fool multitude—Meant, Meant of the fool multitude, ii. 374: "The plain fact is (for it needs not many words) that the prepositions by and of are synonymous, and that our ancestors used them indifferently, as they were well justified in doing." Gifford's note on Jonson's Works, vol. i. p. 140.

by-drinkings, drinkings between meals, iv. 260.

by'r lady, by our Lady, ii. 111 (twice), 115; iii. 347; iv. 233, 240, 243, 252, 396; v. 388, 499; vi. 336, 405; vii. 143, 156.

by'r lakin, by our Ladykin, by our little Lady, i. 214; ii. 286.

caddis-garter, iv. 234; caddisses, iii. 472: Caddis was worsted riband or galloon. ("Cruel, caddas, or worsted ribbon." The Rates of the Custome house, &c. 1582, sig. B v. "Caddas or Cruell riband." The Rates of Marchandises, &c., n. d. sig. c 5.)

CADE—CALF'S-SKIN.

cade of herrings, v. 170: "That is, a barrel of herrings" (JOHNSON): "A cade is less than a barrel. The quantity it should contain is ascertained by the accounts of the Celaress of the Abbey of Berk-ing. 'Memorandum that a barrel of herryng shold contene a thousand herryngs, and a cade of herryng six hundreth, six score to the hundreth.' Mon. Ang. i. 83" (MALONE).

cadent, falling, vii. 271:

Cadwallader, surnamed Bhendiged or the Blessed, the last king of Britain of the British race (see transl. of Caradoc's Hist. of Wales by Powell and Wynne, pp. 8-11, ed. 1774), iv. 497.

Cæsar and his fortune bare at once—That proud-insulting ship Which, v. 13: "This alludes to a passage in Plutarch's Life of Julius Cæsar, thus translated by Sir Thomas North: 'Cæsar hearing that, straight discovered himselfe unto the maister of the pynnace, who at the first was amazed when he saw him; but Cæsar, &c. said unto him, Good fellow, be of good cheere, &c. and fear not, for thou hast Cæsar and his fortune with thee'" (STEEVENS).

Cæsarion, the son of Cleopatra by Julius Cæsar, vii. 561.

cage—His father had never a house but the, v. 170: "A cage was formerly a term for a prison. See Minsheu in v. We yet talk of jail-birds" (MALONE): "There is scarce a village in England which has not a temporary place of confinement still called The Cage" (STEEVENS).

Cain-coloured beard—A, a beard resembling in colour (sandy-red) that with which Cain was commonly represented in tapestries and pictures, i. 356: compare Judas's [hair], &c.

cake's dough—Our, iii. 117; My cake is dough, iii. 273: A proverbial saying, to express that one's hopes are frustrated; a cake which comes out of the oven in that state being considered as spoiled.

Calchas, vi. 53, 54, 62, &c.; She [Cressida]'s a fool to stay behind her father, vi. 8: "Calchas, according to Shakespeare's authority, The Destruction of Troy [see vi. 2], was 'a great learned bishop of Troy,' who was sent by Priam to consult the oracle of Delphi concerning the event of the war which was threatened by Agamemnon. As soon as he had made 'his oblations and demands for them of Troy, Apollo (says the book) answered unto him, saying; Calchas, Calchas, beware that thou returne not back again to Troy; but goe thou with Achilles unto the Greekes, and depart never from them, for the Greekes shall have victorie of the Trojans by the agreement of the gods.' Hist. of the Destruction of Troy, translated by Caxton, 5th edit. 4to, 1617. This prudent bishop followed the advice of the oracle, and immediately joined the Greeks" (MALONE).

calf's-skin on those recreant limbs—And hang a, iv. 32 (three times); And hang a calf's-skin on his recreant limbs, iv. 34: Nares, following a note of Sir John Hawkins, says; "Fools kept for diversion in great families were often distinguished by coats of calf-skin, with buttons down the back. Therefore Constance and Falconbridge mean to call Austria a fool, in that sarcastic line so often repeated." Gloss. in "Calf's-skin:" But, as Ritson remarks, "it does not appear that Constance means to call Austria a fool, as Sir John Hawkins would have it; but she certainly means to call him coward, and to tell him that a calf's-skin would suit his recreant limbs better than a lion's."

Caliban, i. 186, &c.: "The metathesis in Caliban from Cannibal is evident" (FARMER).

Calipolis, iv. 346; where see foot-note.

caliver, a hand-gun (less and lighter than a musket, and fired without a rest), iv. 268, 361 (twice).

calkins, the parts of a horse-shoe which are turned up and pointed to prevent the horse from slipping, viii. 208.

call—Be as a, &c. iv. 45: A metaphor derived from bird-catching,—one bird being placed (in a cage, or fastened by a string) to allure others to the net by his call.

call on him for't, vii. 508: see note 26, vii. 602.

call to, call on: I'll call to you, vi. 522: see note 46, vi. 583.

callet, or callat, a trull, a drab, a jade ("Goguenelle, A fained title, or tearme, for a wench; like our Gixie, Callet, Minx, &c." Cotgrave's Fr. and Engl. Dict.), iii. 445; v. 121, 261; vii. 448.

calling, appellation, name: would not change that calling, iii. 14.

Callino, castore me! iv. 483: see note 131, iv. 528: I may add here that Mr. Chappell gives, from the Ms. known as Queen Elizabeth's Virginal Book, three of the earliest Irish airs extant, one of which is Callino casturame,—Popular Music of the Olden Time, &c. vol. ii. p. 793, sec. ed.; and that in Dekker's Satiro-mastix, 1602, I find Tucca saying, "Nay, your ooohs, nor your Callin-oes cannot serue your turne." Sig. L 4.

calm, the Hostess's blunder for qualm, iv. 341.

Cambysses' vein—In King, i. 242: An allusion to the play entitled A lamentable Tragedie, mixed full of pleasant mirth, containing the life of Cambises king of Percia, from the beginning of his kingdom unto his death, his owne good deed of execution, after that many wicked deedes and tyrannous murders, committed [sic] by and through him, and last of all, his odious death by Gods Iustice appointed. Done in such order as followeth. By Thomas Preston. n. d. 4to.

Camelot—Goose, if I had you upon Sarum plain, I'd drive ye cackling home to Camelot, vii. 280: Camelot "was the place where the romances say King Arthur kept his court in the West" (WARBURTON): "In the parts of Somersetshire near Camelot there are many large moors, upon which great numbers of geese are bred, so that many other places in England are from thence supplied with quills and feathers" (HANMER) : Here, therefore, there is perhaps a double allusion,—to Camelot as famous for its geese, and to those knights who were vanquished by the Knights of the Round Table being sent to Camelot to yield themselves vassals to King Arthur.

camomile, the more it is trodden on, &c.—Though the, iv. 242 : "The style immediately ridiculed is that of Lyly in his Euphues : 'Though the camomile the more it is trodden and pressed downe, the more it spreadeth ; yet the violet the oftener it is handled and touched, the sooner it withereth and decayeth,' &c." (FARMER) : "Again, in Philomela, the Lady Fitzwater's Nightingale, by Robert Greene, bl. l. 1595, sign. 1 4 ; 'The palme tree, the more it is prest downe, the more it sprowteth up ; the camomill, the more it is troden, the sweeter smell it yeildeth'" (REED) : Greene, in another work, his Carde of Fancie, has ; "The Camomill increaseth most beeing troden on." Sig. q 2 verso, ed. 1608.

candle—Seek him with, iii. 36 : "Alluding probably to St. Luke's Gospel, ch. xv. v. 8 : 'If she lose one piece, doth [she] not light a candle,—and seek diligently till she find it ?'" (STEEVENS).

candle-mine, "inexhaustible magazine of tallow" (JOHNSON), iv. 349.

candlesticks, With torch-staves in their hand—The horsemen sit like fæd, iv. 478 : "Grandpré alludes to the form of ancient candlesticks, which frequently represented human figures holding the sockets for the lights in their extended hands" (STEEVENS).

candle-wasters, revellers, who, sitting up all night, waste many candles, ii. 129.

candles' ends for flap-dragons—Drinks off: see flap-dragon—A.

candy deal of courtesy—What a, "What a deal of candy courtesy" (MALONE), iv. 222.

canker, the dog-rose: I had rather be a canker in a hedge than a rose in his grace, ii. 84; this canker, Bolingbroke, iv. 220; The canker-blooms, viii. 376 (Mr. Bealy in his Shakspeare's Garden, &c. p. 49, informs us that in the first and third of the above passages our poet refers to the rose-sponge or excrescence that grows on the branches of the dog-rose: but I believe him to be as much mistaken about the first passage as he evidently is with respect to the third one,—

"The canker-blooms have full as deep a dye
As the perfum'd tincture of the roses, Hang on such thorns, and play as wantonly
When summer's breath their mask'd buds discloses,"— where canker-blooms can only mean the blossoms of the dog-rose).

canker, a caterpillar ("The larva I allude to (Lozotenia Rosana) . . . lives among the blossoms [of the rose], and prevents the possibility of their further development," &c. Patterson's Letters on the Nat. Hist. of the Insects mentioned in Shakspeare's Plays, p. 34): in the sweetest bud The eating canker dwells, i. 264; Hath not thy rose a canker, Somerset? v. 31; the canker death eats up that plant, vi. 416; The canker galls the infants of the spring, vii. 116; This canker that eats up Love's tender spring, viii. 261; And loathsome canker lives in sweetest bud, viii. 366; For canker vice the sweetest buds doth love, viii. 384; like a canker in the fragrant rose, viii. 396; A vengeful canker eat him up to death, viii. 398; to kill cankers in the musk-rose buds, ii. 282; cankers of a calm world, iv. 268.

canker-blossom! You thief of love!—You, ii. 299: "The canker-blossom is not in this place the blossom of the canker or wild-rose . . . but a worm," &c. (STEEVENS): see the preceding article.

carnations: see gillyvors, &c.

carpet consideration—Knight dubbed on, iii. 373: Carpet knights were knights dubbed at court by mere favour,—not on the field of battle for their military exploits: our early writers constantly speak of them with great contempt; and carpet-knight became a term for an effeminate person.

carpet-mongers, equivalent to carpet-knights, effeminate persons (see preceding article), ii. 139.

carry coals, to put up with insults, to submit to any degradation, ("Il a du feu en la teste. Hee is very chollericke, furious, or courageous; he will carrie no coales." Cotgrave's Fr. and Engl. Dict. sub "Teste"): the men would carry coals, iv. 452; we'll not carry coals, vi. 388: "From the mean nature of this occupation, it seems to have been somewhat hastily concluded, that a man who would carry coals would submit to any indignity. Hence, to carry coals, in the sense of tamely putting up with an affront, occurs perpetually in our old writers, both serious and comic" . . . "In all great houses, but particularly in the royal residences, there were a number of mean and dirty dependents, whose office it was to attend the wood-yard, sculleries, &c. Of these (for in the lowest deep there was a lower still) the most forlorn wretches seem to have been selected to carry coals to the kitchens, halls, &c. To this smutty regiment, who attended the progresses, and rode in the carts with the pots and kettles, which, with every other article of furniture, were then moved from palace to palace, the people, in derision, gave the name of black guards, a term since become sufficiently familiar, and never properly explained." Gifford's notes on Jonson's Works, vol. ii. pp. 169, 179. (In Lyly's Midas mention is made of "one of the Cole house," sig. F 4, ed. 1592, i.e. one of the drudges about the palace of King Midas.)

carry out my side—Hardly shall I, vii. 335: "The bastard means, 'I shall scarcely be able to make out my game.' The allusion is to a party at cards, and he is afraid that he shall not be able to make his side successful" (MASON): In the phraseology of the card-table to set up a side was to become partners in a game; to pull or pluck down a side was to occasion its loss by ignorance or treachery; and to carry out a side was to carry out the game with success: see Gifford's note on Massinger's Works, vol. i. p. 150, ed. 1813; and note in my ed. of Beaumont and Fletcher's Works, vol. i. p. 343.

cart, a car, a chariot : Phœbus' cart, vii. 157.

carve too, and lisp—He can, ii. 220; she discourses, she carves, i. 354; carve her, drink to her, viii. 191: That carve is here used to describe some particular form of action,—some sign of intelligence and favour,—was first shown by the late Joseph Hunter (New Illust. of Shakespeare, vol. i. p. 215), who observed that the word “occurs in a very rare poetic tract, entitled A Prophecie of Cadwallader, last King of the Brittaines, by William Herbert, 4to, 1604, which opens with a description of Fortune, and of some who had sought to gain her favour;

‘Then did this Queene her wandering coach ascend, Whose wheels were more inconstant than the wind:
A mighty troop this empress did attend;
There might you Caius Marius carving find,
And martial Sylla courting Venus kind’:

To these lines adduced by Mr. Hunter I afterwards (in my Few Notes, &c. p. 20) added the following passages; “Her amorous glances are her accusers; her very lookes write sonnets in thy commendations; she carues thee at boord, and cannot sleepe for dreaming on thee in bedde.” Day’s Ile of Gulls, 1606, sig. D.

“And if thy rival be in presence too, Seem not to mark, but do as others do; *
Salute him friendly, give him gentle words,
Return all courtesies that he affords;
Drink to him, carve him, give him compliment;
This shall thy mistress more than thee torment.”

Beaumont’s Remedy of Love,—B. and Fletcher’s Works, vol. xi. p. 483, ed. Dyce.

(Beaumont’s Remedy of Love is a very free imitation of Ovid’s Remedia Amoris; and, as far as I can discover, the only part of the original which answers to the preceding passage is,

“Hunc quoque, quo quondam nimium rivale dolebas, Vellem desineres hostis habere loco.
At certe, quamvis odio remanente, saluta.” v. 791):

More recently Mr. Grant White has still further illustrated the word carve. “Thus,” he says, “in A very Woman, among the Characters published with Sir Thomas Overbury’s Wife; ‘Her lightnesse gets her to swim at the top of the table, where her wrie little finger bewraies carving; her neighbours at the latter end know they are welcome, and for that purpose she quencheth her thirst.’ Sig. E 3, ed. 1632. See also Littleton’s Latin-English Lexicon, 1675; ‘A Carver:—chironomus.’ ‘Chironomus:—One that useth apish motions with his hands.’ ‘Chironomia:—A kind of gesture with the hands, either in dancing, carving of meat, or pleading,’ &c. &c.” carve for his own rage—To, “To supply food or gratification for his own anger” (STEEVENS), vii. 408.

case, skin : a grizzle on thy case, iii. 389 ; though my case be a pitiful one, &c. (with a quibble), iii. 489.

case, to skin (a hunting term) : ere we case him, iii. 254.

case, a pair; a couple : I have not a case of lives, iv. 451 (Compare "this case of rapiers." Marlowe's Faustus,—Works, p. 89, ed. Dyce, 1858 ; "two case of jewels." Webster's White Devil,—Works, p. 46, ed. Dyce, 1857 ; "a case of pistols." Middleton and W. Rowley's Spanish Gipsy,—Middleton's Works, vol. iv. p. 177, ed. Dyce).

case of eyes?—What, with the, vii. 326 : "The case of eyes," says Steevens, "is the socket of either eye ;" and, to confirm his explanation, he cites from The Winter's Tale, "to tear the cases of their eyes," act v. sc. 2 : but perhaps Rowe was right when he substituted "What, with this case of eyes?" i. e. with such a pair of no-eyes as this ? See the preceding article.

case me in leather, i. 14 : Dromio means, as a foot-ball is cased or covered.

cashiered—Was, as they say, i. 349 : Here cashiered has been explained "carried out of the room,"—"turned out of company,"—and "cleaned out : " eligit lector.

cask, a casket, v. 163.

Cassalis—Gregory de, v. 540 : "Was the King's Orator, as he was called in Rome, and, according to the household-books of Henry VIII., was in the receipt of a large annual salary for his services in various parts of Italy" (COLLIER).

Cassius—Your brother, vi. 632 ; my brother Cassius, vi. 675 : "Cassius married Junia, Brutus's sister" (STEEVENS).

cassocks, loose outward military coats, iii. 265.

cast, to dismiss : the state . . . Cannot with safety cast him, vii. 379 ; Our general cast us thus early, vii. 404 ; cast in his mood (anger), vii. 411 ; That I was cast, vii. 469.

cast, used with a quibble between its two senses, "to throw" and "to vomit : " though he (drink) took up my legs sometime, yet I made a shift to cast him, vii. 26 ; What a drunken knave was the sea to cast thee in our way! viii. 22.

cast, to empty : His filth within being cast, i. 479 : "To cast a pond is to empty it of mud" (JOHNSON).

cast, to cast up, to compute : Let it be cast, and paid, iv. 387.

cast-lips of Diana, lips left off by Diana, iii. 49.

cast water, to find out diseases by inspecting the urine : cast The water of my land, vii. 65.

Castilian, a cant term, about the origin of which the commentators have uselessly puzzled themselves, i. 373.

Castiliano volto, iii. 331: Equivalent to "put on your Castilian countenance, that is, your grave solemn looks" (WARBURTON).

castle—I'll to my, v. 241: "Sandal Castle, near Wakefield in Yorkshire" (MALONE).

Castle in Saint Alban's—The, v. 195: see note 212, v. 229.

castle on thy head!—Wear a, vi. 89: "A close helmet, which covered the whole head, was called a castle [see note 76, vi. 366]" (WARBURTON): "Troilus doth not advise Diomed to wear a helmet on his head; that would be poor indeed, for he always wore one in battle; but to guard his head with the most impenetrable armour, to shut it up even in a castle, if it were possible, or else his sword should reach it" (HEATH).

castle—Writing destruction on the enemy's, vi. 317: see note 76, vi. 366.

castles mounted stand—Where, v. 126: see note 212, v. 229.

cat, and shoot at me—Hang me in a bottle like a, ii. 80: It appears that formerly cats (occasionally fictitious ones) were hung up in baskets and shot at with arrows; also that, in some counties of England, they were enclosed, with a quantity of soot, in wooden bottles suspended on a line, and that he who could beat out the bottom of the bottle as he ran under it, and yet escape its contents, was "the hero" of the sport; see Steevens's note ad l.: "It is still a diversion in Scotland to hang up a cat in a small cask or firkin, half filled with soot; and then a parcel of clowns on horseback try to beat out the ends of it, in order to show their dexterity in escaping before the contents fall upon them." Percy's Rel. of A. E. Poetry, vol. i. p. 155, ed. 1794.

cat—Here is that which will give language to you, i. 204: "Alluding to an old proverb, that good liquor will make a cat speak" (STEEVENS).

cat i' th' adage—Like the poor, vii. 19: "The adage alluded to is, 'The cat loves fish, but dares not wet her feet;'"

'Catus amat pisces, sed non, vult tingere plantas'" (JOHNSON):

"It is among Heywood's Proverbs, ed. 1598, q 2;

'The cat would eate fish, but she will not wette her feete'" (BOSWELL).

cat-o'-mountain, a wild-cat, i. 225; cat-o'-mountain looks, i. 366: "A term borrowed from the Spaniards, who call the wild-cat gato-monte" (DOUCE).

Cataian—A, i. 363; iii. 347: Meaning properly a native of Cataia or Cathay, i. e. China, is supposed to have become a cant term for "a thief or sharper, because the Chinese were notorious for their skilful thieving; but in the second of the above passages it is certainly used playfully by Sir Toby as a term of reproach or contempt.

catlings, lute-strings or violin-strings, made of cat-gut, vi. 61 hence the name of a musician, Simon Catling, vi. 461.

cats—Prices of, vi. 418; Good king of cats, vi. 429: see Tybalt, &c.

cause, cause of quarrel,—a fashionable term in the science of duelling: The first and second cause will not serve my turn, ii. 175; found the quarrel was upon the seventh cause, iii. 73; a gentleman. . . of the first and second cause ("one who quarrels by the book," WARBURTON; and see book—We quarrel in print, by the), vi. 418.

cautel, craft, deceit ("Cautelle: A wile, cautell, sleight; a craftie reach, or fetch, guilefull devise or endeavour; also, craft, subtiltie, trumperie, deceit, cousenage." Otgrave's Fr. and Engl. Dict.), vii. 116; Applied to cautels ("Applied to insidious purposes, with subtlety and cunning," MALONE), vii. 448.

cautelous, insidious: cautelous baits, vi. 200.

cautelous—Cowards, and men, vi. 634: Here "cautelous is cautious and wary at least to the point of cowardice, if not to that of insidiousness and trickery," CRAIK.

caviare to the general, vii. 143: Caviare is the roe of a kind of sturgeon, and of other fish, pickled, salted, and dried, which came, and still comes, from Russia: Hamlet means that the play in question was of too high a relish for the palates of the multitude.

cease, to cause to cease, to stop: Particularities and petty sounds To cease, v. 194; would cease The present power of life, vii. 728; be not ceas'd With slight denial, vi. 523.

cease, to de cease, to die: both shall cease, without your remedy, iii. 281; Fall, and cease! vii. 344.

censer in a barber's shop—Like to a, iii. 161: The censers formerly used in barbers' shops, to sweeten them with cheap perfumes, had, of course, their covers perforated.

censer—Thou thin man in a, iv. 398: It has been supposed that the allusion is to one of the thin embossed figures in the middle of the pierced convex lid of a censer or fire-pan, in which coarse perfumes were burned to sweeten the atmosphere of the musty rooms in our author's days: but Mr. Grant White understands censer to mean some kind of cap.

censure, judgment, opinion: my just censure, iii. 435; To give their censure, v. 27; To give his censure, v. 122; Durst wag his tongue in censure (in giving an opinion which of the two made the more splendid appearance), v. 485; Take each man's censure, vii. 117; in the general censure, vii. 120; the censure of the which one, vii. 153; In censure of his seeming, vii. 155; mouths of wisest censure, vii. 409; I may not breathe my censure, vii. 444; the strongest in our censure, viii. 31; To give your censures, v. 388; our just censures, vii. 66.

censure, judicial sentence: Your heaviest censure, vi. 237; the censure of this hellish villain, vii. 470.

censure, to pass judgment or opinion on: Should censure thus on lovely gentlemen, i. 267; censure me by what you were, v. 82; censure well the deed ("approve the deed, judge the deed good," JOHN-SON), v. 149; censure me in your wisdom, vi. 655; By our best eyes cannot be censured ("estimated," MALONE), iv. 21; how you are censured here, vi. 159; how are we censured? ibid.; How, my lord, I may be censured, vii. 804; That censures ("estimates," MALONE) falsely, viii. 428.

censure, to pass sentence judicially: That are to censure them, vii. 336; Has censur'd him already, i. 456.

century, a hundred: said a century of prayers, vii. 706.

century, a company of a hundred men: A century send forth, vii. 319; dispatch Those centuries to our aid, vi. 154.

ceremonies, "honorary ornaments, tokens of respect" (MALONE): If you do find them deck'd with ceremonies, vi. 617: "By ceremonies must here be meant what are in the next speech of Flavius called 'Cæsar's trophies,' and are described in the next scene as 'scarfs' which were hung on Cæsar's images" (CRAIK).

ceremonies, "omens or signs deduced from sacrifices or other ceremonial rites" (MALONE): Of fantasy, of dreams, and ceremonies, vi. 636; I never stood on ceremonies, vi. 640.

'cerns, concerns, iii. 172.

certainly of this hard life—The, "The certain consequence of this hard life" (MALONE), vii. 709.

certes, certainly, i. 215; ii. 40, 196; v. 485; vii. 375.

cess—Out of all, Out of all measure, iv. 224 (A phrase of doubtful origin: Cotgrave gives "Sans cesse. Vncessantly . . . also, excessively, immoderately, out of all cesse and crie." Fr. and Engl. Dict.).

cesse, to cease, iii. 278 (Mr. Knight, who rightly, on account of the rhyme, retains this archaism, quotes an instance of it from Chaucer's Troilus and Cressida: but Shakespeare must have met with it in various books that were to him of recent date: e.g. in Phaer and Twyne's Aeneids;

"This spoken, with a thought he makes the swelling seas to cesse, And sunne to shine, and clouds to flee, that did the skies oppressa."

B. i. sig. a iii. ed. 1584).

cestron, a cistern, viii. 193. ♦ chain with crumbs—Go, sir, rub your, iii. 349: Gold chains were formerly worn by persons of rank and dignity, and by rich merchants, —a fashion which descended to upper servants in great houses, and to stewards as badges of office; and these chains were usually cleaned by being rubbed with crumbs.

chairs of order look you scour With juice of balm, &c.—The several, i. 412: "It was an article of our ancient luxury to rub tables, &c. with aromatic herbs". (STEEVENS).

chalic'd, having cups ("It may be noted that the cup of a flower is called calix, whence chalice," JOHNSON), vii. §61.

challenge, You shall not be my judge—Make my, v. 520: "Challenge is here a verbum juris, a law-term. The criminal, when he refuses a juryman, says 'I challenge him'" (JOHNSON).

chamber—Welcome, sweet prince, to London, to your, v. 392: "London was anciently called Camera Regis" (POPE): "This title it began to have immediately after the Norman conquest. See Coke's 4 Inst. 243; Camden's Britannia, 374; Ben Jonson's Account of King James's Entertainment in passing, to his Coronation, &c. [Jonson's Works, vol. vi. p. 428, ed. Gifford]" (REED).

champain, open country, iii. 358; champains, vii. 251.

changeling, ii. 275, 277, 306: "Changeling is commonly used for the child supposed to be left by the fairies, but here for a child taken away" (JOHNSON): "It is here properly used, and in its common acceptation; that is, for a child got in exchange. A fairy is now speaking" (REEDSON).

channel, a kennel: throw the quean in the channel, iv. 330; As if a channel should be call'd the sea, v. 261; Here friend by friend in bloody channel lies, viii. 329.

chanson—The first row of the pious, vii. 142: This is explained by the reading of 4to 1603, "the first verse of the godly ballet."

chape, iii. 265: "The chape was the metal part at the end of a scabbard, the portion of the scabbard which protected the sharp end of the dagger or similar weapon . . . it is sometimes used for the hook or loop at the top of a scabbard" (HALLIWELL): "A Chape (the Iron point of the Scabbard), Vaginae ferramentum, rostrum, lorica, mucro." Coles's Lat. and Engl. Dict.

chapeless, without a chape (see chape), iii. 144.

chapmen, sellers: by base sale of chapmen's tongues, ii. 176.

chapmen, buyers: you do as chapmen do, vi. 63.

chaps, jaws: open your chaps again, i. 204; his dead chaps, iv. 22; your mouldy chaps, iv. 344; Before his chaps be stain'd, v. 149; a pair of chaps, vii. 544.

chaps, clefts, breaks in the continuity of the skin: my frosty signs and chaps of age, vi. 351; Her cheeks with chaps and wrinkles were disguis'd, viii. 328.

character, handwriting, writing: 'Tis Hamlet's character, vii. 188; though thou didst produce My very character, vii. 276; Since mind at first in character was done ("Since thought was first expressed in writing," STAUNTON), viii. 378.

character—Thy, "Thy description, i.e. the writing afterwards discovered with Perdita" (STEEVENS), iii. 458.

character, to inscribe, to infix strongly: in their barks my thoughts I'll character, iii. 36; these few precepts in thy memory See thou character'd, vii. 117; character'd and engrav'd, i. 288; character'd on thy skin, v. 150; Full character'd, viii. 410.

charactery, what is characterized or written: *Fairies use flowers for their character*y ("the matter with which they make letters," JOHNSON), i. 412; *All the character*y of ("all that is characterized on," STEEVENS) my sad brows, vi. 639.

characts, characters, marks, i. 508.

chare, or char, a turn or bout of work, a job or task-work,—drudgery, vii. 594: chares, vii. 583.

char'd—All's, All is dispatched, viii. 159.

charge, a weight, a burden: this charge of thoughts, viii. 11; Patience, good sir, Even for this charge, viii. 37.

charge,—Answering us With our own, "Rewarding us with our own expenses, making the cost of war its recompense" (JOHNSON), vi. 235.

charge—Give them their, ii. 109: "To charge his fellows seems to have been a regular part of the duty of the constable of the watch" (MALONE).

charge you—Not to, "Not with a purpose of putting you to expense or being burdensome" (JOHNSON), i. 369.

charge-house, ii. 209: Steevens supposes this to mean a free-school; but it would rather seem to mean a common school in distinction to a free one.

charlest, most cautious, most scrupulous, vii. 116.

chariness of our honesty—The, "The caution which ought to attend on it [on our chastity]" (STEEVENS), i. 362.

Charity—By Saint, vii. 181: "We read in the martyrology on the first of August,—Romæ passio sanctarum virginum, Fidei, Spei, et Charitatis, quæ sub Hadriano principe martyriæ coronam adeptæ sunt." Douglas's Criterion, p. 68, cited by Ritson. (So, in The Faire Maide of Bristowe, 1605;

"Now by Saint Charity, if I were iudge, A halter were the least should hamper him." Sig. D 8 verso.)

Charles' wain, iv. 223: The constellation Ursa Major;—according to some, a corruption of Chorles or Churl's [i.e. rustic's] wain; according to others, the constellation was so named in honour of Charlemagne.

charm her chattering tongue, iii. 157; charm thy riotous tongue, v. 167; charm your tongue, v. 314; vii. 464; charm my tongue, vii. 464: In this expression, as Malone observes, charm means "compel to be silent, as if by the power of enchantment."

charm'd—I, in mine own woe, vii. 714: "Alluding to the common superstition of charms being powerful enough to keep men unhurt in battle" (WARBURTON).

charmer, one who works by charms, or spells: She was a charmer (an enchantress), vii. 431; heavenly charmers ("enchanters, ruling us at their will," SEWARD,—the gods), viii. 210.

charming, having the power of fascination: And faster bound to Aaron's charming eyes, vi. 297; more charming With their own nobleness, vii. 713.

charming words—Belwixt two, vii. 643: Here more recently charming has been explained "magical, enchanting:" but qy.?

charms, love-charms: I think you have charms, i. 368.

charneco, v. 138: "Shakespeare and other dramatic writers mention a wine called Charneco, which, in a pamphlet quoted by Warburton, is enumerated along with Sherry-sack and Malaga (The Discovery of a London Monster, called the Black Dog of Newgate, 1612). According to Mr. Steevens, the appellation is derived from a village near Lisbon. There are, in fact, two villages in that neighbourhood, which take the name of Charneca; the one situated about a league and a half above the town of Lisbon, the other near the coast, between Collares and Carcavellos. We shall, therefore, probably not err much, if we refer the wine in question to the last-mentioned territory." Henderson's History of Ancient and Modern Wines, p. 306.

chase, an object of chase: This is the chase ("the animal pursued," JOHNSON), iii. 458; seek thee out some other chase, v. 193; single out some other chase, v. 264: see note 142, ii. 254.

chase—By this kind of, "By this way of following the argument" (JOHNSON), iii. 17.

chases—That all the courts of France will be disturb'd With, iv. 432: We find in the Promptorium Parvulorum "Chace of tenys pley, or othyr lyke. Sistencia, obstaculum, obiculum (fuga, P.)," p. 68, ed. Way: Mr. Halliwell cites the following dialogue of players at tennis from The Marrow of the French Tongue, 1625; "Play then, and give me a good ball.—Sir, doth it please you that this be play? —As it shall please you, I doe not care.—Goe to; play, sir.—A losse; I haue fifteene.—Patient; play.—Say, boy, marke that chase.—Sir, behold it marked, and it is a great one.—Sir, you will lose it.—Demand it of the standers by.—Fifteenes all.—I have thirty, and a chase.—My masters, is the ball above or under the roape?—Sir, methinks it is under more then a spanne.—I have thirty for fifteene.—And I, I have two chases.—Sir, the last is no chase, but a losse.—Sir, how is it a losse?—Because you did strike it at the second bound." p. 192: R. Holme gives, among the "terms" at tennis; "Chasse, is to miss the second striking of the Ball back;" and, among the "laws" of the game, he informs us,

"6. You must observe that there is no changing sides without two Chases or Forty one Chase, and then they may change sides, and the other serves upon the Pent-house beyond the Blew, and then the other is bound to play the Ball over the Line, between the Chase and the end Wall; and if the other side misses to return the Ball, he loses 15." Academy of Armory and Blason, B. iii. p. 265: In Dict. de la Lang. Fr. par Laveaux is "Chasse. Au jeu de paume, se dit de la distance qu'il y a entre le mur de côté où l'on sert, et l'endroit où tombe la balle du second bond. Cette distance se mesure par les carreaux. Quand la chasse est petite, on dit, une chasse à deux, à trois carreaux et demi. Marquer les chasses. Grande chasse. Il y a chasse. Gagner la chasse. Chasse au pied de la muraille, ou simplement, chasse au pied, chasse morte:" According to Douce, "A chase at tennis is that spot where a ball falls, beyond which the adversary must strike his ball to gain a point or chase. At long tennis it is the spot where the ball leaves off rolling. We see therefore why the king has called himself a wrangler" (DOUCE): On the passage of Ariosto's Orlando Furioso, C. xix. st. 84,

"Quanto nel giuoco de le caccie un muro Si muova a colpi de le palle grosse,"

Mr. Panizzi merely quotes the observation of Molini, "Caccia è termine del giuoco della palla, del pallone, del calcio, &c.;" and Rose on his translation of the passage only remarks, "Chases is in tennis somewhat of an equivalent to hazards at billiards." An anonymous dramatist writes;

"Ric. Reueng'd! and why good childe?
Olde Faukenbridge hath had a worsen basting.
Fa. I, they haue banded [me] from chase to chase;
I haue been their tennis ball since I did coort."

A Pleasant Commodity called Looke about you, 1600, sig. x 2 verso.

Chatham—The clerk of, v. 171: "A nonentity in history" (DOUCE).

chats him—While she, While she keeps talking of him (?), vi. 164.

chaudron, part of the entrails of an animal ("a word formerly in common use in the books of cookery," STEEVENS; "A Calves chauldron, Echinus vituli." Coles's Lat. and Engl. Dict.), vii. 46.

che vor ye, "I warn you" (JOHNSON), vii. 328 (Somersetshire dialect).

cheap—Good: see good cheap.

cheater—A tame, iv. 343: The context, I think, shows that when Falstaff applies to Pistol these words (cheater properly signifying "one who plays with false dice"), he means no more than "a poor spiritless or harmless rascal." (Here Steevens quotes the following passage from Mihil Mumchance, &c. (a tract which has been inconsiderately attributed to Greene); "They [those who played with false dice] call their art by a new-found name, as cheating, themselves cheators, and the dice cheters, borrowing the term from among our lawyers, with whom all such casuals as fall to the lord at the holding of his leets, as waifes, straiens, and such like, be called chetes, and are accustomedly said to be escheted to the lord's use:" Steevens also cites from Beaumont and Fletcher's Fair Maid of the Inn, act iv. sc. 2, "and will be drawn into the net by this decoy-duck, this tame cheater,"—where tame cheater is evidently a cant phrase.)

cheater, an escheator ("an officer appointed by the Lord Treasurer, who observed the Escheats due to the King in the County whereof he was Escheator, and certified them unto the Chancery or Exchequer," &c. Cowell's Law Dict. ed. 1727): I will be cheater to them both (with a quibble), i. 354; I will bar no honest man my house, nor no cheater (where the Hostess misunderstands cheater as used by Falstaff), iv. 343.

check, a term in falconry, applied to a hawk when she forsakes her proper game, and follows some other of inferior kind that crosses her in her flight: check at every feather, iii. 361; the staniel checks at it, iii. 357.

check, a reproof, a rebuke: nobler than attending for a check, vii. 677.

cheer, countenance, aspect: pale of cheer, ii. 294; that look'd with cheer, ii. 319; show a merry cheer, ii. 388; your cheer appall'd, v. 11; this change of cheer, vi. 290; she smiled with so sweet a cheer, viii. 294; heavy cheers, viii. 136.

cherry-pit, a game,—the pitching of cherry-stones into a small hole, iii. 371.

cherubin, a cherub (Fr. and Span. cherubin), i. 181; vii. 18, 446: cherubin look, vi. 552; cherubins, ii. 409 & v. 485; vi. 49; vii. 668. (This form, common enough in our early writers, is used even by Dryden.)

cheveril, kid-leather, soft, and easily stretched ("Cheuerell lether. Cuir de chevreul." Cotgrave's Fr. and Engl. Dict.): a cheveril glove, iii. 360; cheveril conscience, v. 515; a wit of cheveril, vi. 420.

chew upon this, "consider this at leisure, ruminate on this" (JOHNSON), vi. 621.

chewet, iv. 275: "A chewet or chuet is a noisy chattering bird, a pie. This carries a proper reproach to Falstaff for his meddling and impertinent jest" (THEOBALD): "Chouëtte: An Owlet; or, the little Horne-Owle (a theewish night-bird); also, a Chough, Cagdesse, Daw, Jack-Daw." Cotgrave's Fr. and Engl. Dict.,—the latter part of which article makes it very probable that Shakespeare used the word in the sense of "chough" or "jack-daw," though modern French Dictionaries do not, I believe, assign any such meaning to chouette (see, for instance, Laveaux's Dict.): according to other critics, chewet signifies here a sort of small pie or pudding, made of minced meat, and fried in oil; "Goubelet . . . a kind of a little round pie resembling our Chust." Cotgrave's Fr. and Engl. Dict. - (If Dr. Latham had been acquainted with the article "Chouëtte" in Cotgrave, he, I presume, would not have suggested that Shakespeare meant here the lapwing or poewit; see his ed. of Johnson's Dict.) chide, to sound, to resound, to echo: Shall chide your trespass (chide being used here partly in the sense of "rebuke"), iv. 448; the chiding flood, v. 537; Retorts to chiding ("noisy, clamorous," STEEVENS) fortune, vi. 18; The chiding billow, vii. 395; as chiding a nativity (i.e. "as noisy a one," STEEVENS), viii. 37.

chide with, to quarrel: And he does chide with you, vii. 449; do you with Fortune chide, viii. 404.

chiding, noise, sound (cry of hounds): Such gallant chiding, ii. 307.

child—A boy or a, iii. 459: see note 78, iii. 517.

child o' the time—Be a, "do as others do" (STAUNTON), vii. 536.

child Rowland, vii. 303: "This term [child], in O. E., denoted a youth, especially one of high birth, before he was advanced to the honour of knighthood." Jamieson's Etym. Dict. of the Scottish Language: In romances and ballads it frequently is equivalent to "knight."

child-changed father—This, vii. 330: "That is, changed by his children; a father, whose jarring senses have been untuned by the monstrous ingratitude of his daughters" (MALONE): "i.e. changed to a child by his years and wrongs; or perhaps reduced to this condition by his children" (STEEVENS).

childing autumn, teeming, fruitful autumn, ii. 277.

children shall have no names—My, My children will be illegitimate, vii. 500.

chill, I will (Somersetshire dialect): chill be plain with you, vii. 328.

chopine, vii. 143: An enormously high clog, which was worn by the ladies of Spain, Italy, &c. (In Connelly's Span. and Engl. Dict. Madrid, 4to, I find "Chapin . . . A sort of patten with a cork sole," &c.; but none of the Italian Dictionaries in my possession contain the word "cioppino," which, according to Boswell, is in Veneroni's Dict.): The following account of chopines, or, as he calls them, chapineys, is given by Coryat: "There is one thing used of the Venetian women, and some others dwelling in the cities and towns subject to the Signiory of Venice, that is not to be observed (I think) amongst any other women in Christendome: which is so common in Venice, that no woman whatsoever goeth without it, either in her house or abroad; a thing made of wood, and covered with leather of sundry colors, some with white, some redde, some yellow. It is called a Chapiney, which they weare vnder their shoes. Many of them are curiously painted; some also I have seene fairely gilt: so vncomely a thing (in my opinion) that it is pittie this foolish custom is not cleane banished and exterminated out of the citie. There are many of these Chapineys of a great heighth, euen half a yard high, which maketh many of their women that are very short seeme much taller then the tallest women we haue in England. Also I haue heard that this is obserued amongst them, that by how much the nobler a woman is, by so much the higher are her Chapineys. All their gentlewomen, and most of their wifes and widowes that are of any wealth, are assisted and supported eyther by men or women when they walke abroad, to the end they may not fall. They are borne vp most commonly by the left arme, otherwise they might quickly take a fall. For I saw a woman fall a very dangerous fall, as she was going down the staires of one of the little stony bridges with her high Chapineys alone by herselfe: but I did nothing pittie her, because shee wore such friuolous and (as I may truely terme them) ridiculous instruments, which were the occasion of her fall. For both I myselve, and many other strangers (as I haue obserued in Venice) haue often laughed at them for their vaine Chapineys." Crudities, &c. (reprinted from ed. 1611), vol. ii. p. 36: "The choppine or some kind of high shoe was occasionally used in England. Bulwer in his Artificial Changeling, p. 550, complains of this fashion as a monstrous affectation, and says that his countrywomen therein imitated the Venetian and Persian ladies," &c. (DOUCE).

choler—It [i.e. the meat "burnt and dried away"] engenders, iii. 154; Lest it make you choleric, ii. 17: Our ancestors fancied that over-roasted or dried-up meat induced choler.

choler, my lord, if rightly taken. . . . No, if rightly taken, halter, iv. 240: "The reader who would enter into the spirit of this repartee, must recollect the similarity of sound between collar and choler" (STEEVENS).

chopping French—The, iv. 176: "Chopping means changing . . . in this sense the Duchess of York may apply the word to the French expression of Pardonnez moi, which gives a directly opposite meaning to the English word pardon, in the way she wishes the king to speak it" (PYE): "The Duchess calls the language 'the chopping French' on account of the convertibility of such terms as pardonnez moi, which, apparently consenting, mean the very reverse" (COLLIER).

choris, chorus (for the sake of a rhyme), viii. 167.

chough, i. 200; vii. 203; choughs, ii. 292; iii. 257, 484; vii. 42, 322? Yarrell observes that in the description of Dover cliff,—"The crows and choughs that wing the midway air," &c.—"possibly Shakespeare meant Jackdaws, for in the Midsummer-Night's Dream he speaks of russet-pated (grey-headed) Choughs, which term is applicable to the Jackdaw, but not to the real Chough." Hist. of Brit. Birds, vol. ii. p. 58, sec. ed.

christendom, christianity: By my christendom, iv. 46.

christendoms, That blinking Cupid gossips—A world Of pretty, fond-adoptious, "A number of pretty, fond, adopted appellations, or Christian names, to which blind Cupid stands godfather" (Nares's Gloss.), iii. 211.

christom child, iv. 443: the Hostess means chrisom child: On the line in The Doubtful Heir,

"You shall be as secure as chrisom children,"

Gifford remarks, "Johnson says chrisom children are those that die within the month. It may be so; but our old writers apply the expression to a child just cristened." Shirley's Works, vol. iv. p. 298: Nares (in his Gloss.) quotes what follows from Blount's Glossography: "Chrisome (a xplw [to anoint—with the holy oil formerly used in baptism]) signifies properly the white cloth which is set by the minister of baptism upon the head of a child newly anointed with chrisom after his baptism: now it is vulgarly taken for the white cloth put about or upon a child newly christened, in token of his baptism; wherewith the women use to shroud the child, if dying within the month; otherwise it is usually brought to church at the day of purification. Chrisoms, in the bills of mortality, are such children as die within the month of birth, because during that time they use to wear the chrisom-cloth." (In the first edition of Blount's work, 1656, I do not find the concluding sentence of the above quotation.)

chuck, a chicken,—a term of endearment, ii. 210; iii. 370; iv. 451; vii. 37, 431, 445, 566; chucks, vi. 229.

chuffs—Fat, iv. 228: "Chuff is always used in a bad sense, and means a coarse unmannered clown, at once sordid and wealthy." Gifford's note on Massinger's Works, vol. i. p. 281, ed. 1813. (In A Gorgious Gallery of Gallant Inventions, &c. 1578, we have "The wealthy chuffe, for all his wealth, Cannot redeeme therby his health," &c. p. 150, reprint.

and in Marlowe's Ovid's Elegies,

"Chuff-like, had I not gold, and could not use it?" Book iii. 7 (where the original has "dives avarus"),—Works, p. 343, ed. Dyce, 1858).

cicatrice, a mark: The cicatrice and capable impressure, iii. 51.

Ciceter, Cirencester, iv. 181.

cide, to decide, viii. 372.

cinders of the element—The, iv. 374: "A ludicrous term for the stars" (STEEVENS).

cinque-pace, a dance, the steps of which were regulated by the number five, ii. 87 (twice) : Nares in his Gloss. confounds it with the galliard.

Circe's cup—I think you all have drunk of, ii. 50 : "The Duke means to say, I think you all are out of your senses ; so below,

'I think you are all mated or stark mad.'

Circe's potion, however, though it transformed the companions of Ulysses into swine, and deprived them of speech, did not, it should seem, deprive them of their reason ; for Homer tells us that they lamented their transformation. However, the Duke's words are sufficiently intelligible, if we consider them as meaning—Methinks you all are become as irrational as beasts" (MALONE) : But Malone forgets Virgil ; who evidently meant us to understand that those whom Circe had transformed were "deprived of reason ;"

"Hinc exaudiri gemitus iræque leonum, Vincta recusantum, et sera sub nocte rudentum ;
Setigerique sues, atque in præsepibus ursi Sævire, ac formæ magnorum ululare luporum." Æn. vii. 15.

Compare also Greene's Never too late ; "Resembling those Grecians, that, with Ulysses, drinking of Circes drugges, lost both forme and memorie." Sig. G 4 verso, ed. 1611.

circle, a diadem : The circle of my glory, iv. 62 ; The circle of the Ptolemies, vii. 555.

circummur'd, walled round, i. 491.

circumstance, detail : it must, with circumstance ("with the addition of such incidental particulars as may induce belief," JOHNSON) be spoken, i. 302 ; With circumstance and oaths, ii. 43 ; To wind about my love with circumstance, ii. 349 ; Cuts off more circumstance, iv. 14 ; By circumstance, but to acquit myself, v. 357 ; Who, in his circumstance ("in the detail or circumduction of his argument," JOHNSON), vi. 56 ; without more circumstance at all, vii. 125 ; a bombast circumstance, vii. 375.

circumstance, I fear you'll prove—So, by your, i. 264 : "Circumstance is used equivocally. It here means conduct ; in the preceding line, circumstantial deduction" (MALONE).

circumstanc'd—I must be, I must submit to circumstances, vii. 436.

cital, a recital, an account, iv. 279 (explained by Pope "taxation").

cite, to incite, to urge : I need not cite him to it, i. 282 ; cited so by them, v. 160 ; it cites us, brother, to the field, v. 253.

citizen—How Edward put to death a, v. 407 : "The person was one Walker, a substantial citizen and grocer at the Crown in Cheap-side. Echard's History of England, vol. i. p. 519" (GREY).

citizen, "having the qualities of a citizen" (Johnson's Dict.), "town-bred, delicate" (Nares's Gloss.): But not so citizen a wanton, vii. 694.

cittern-head—A, ii. 228: An allusion to the grotesque carved heads with which citterns were usually ornamented.

civil, sober, grave, decent, solemn: sad and civil, iii. 368 (where civil has been explained "tart, sour, bitter,"—very erroneously); by a civil peace maintain'd, iv. 364; civil citizens, iv. 430; civil night, vi. 432; Montano, you were wont be civil, vii. 409; my sober guards and civil fears, viii. 447.

civil, count,—clivil as an orange, ii. 92: A "civil (not a Seville) orange" was the usual orthography of the time: "Aigre-douce, A civile Orange." "A ciuill Orange . . . Aigre-douce." Cotgrave's Fr. and Engl. Dict.

clack-dish, i. 487: or clap-dish, a wooden dish, or box, carried by beggars: it had a movable cover, which they clacked to attract notice; and in it they received the alms.

clamour your tongues, iii. 473: see note 110, iii. 522: The attempts to explain this by referring it to bell-ringing (vide notes in the Var. Shakespeare and Nares's Gloss. in v.) ought, I think, to have ceased long ago.

clap thyself my love, iii. 423: "She opened her hand, to clap the palm of it into his, as people do when they confirm a bargain" (STEEVENS): It was common to plight mutual troth by clapping the hands together: see close your hands, &c.

clapped : the clout, iv. 356: see clout.

claw, to flatter: claw no man in his humour, ii. 84; claws him with a talent, ii. 194.

clean, quite, entirely: clean through the bounds of Asia, ii. 8; disfigur'd clean, iv. 140; clean past your youth, iv. 322; renouncing clean the faith, v. 499; This is clean kam (see kam), vi. 189; Clean from the purpose of the things themselves, vi. 627; clean starvèd, viii. 386.

cleanly, dexterously, cleverly: And borne her cleanly by the keeper's nose, vi. 299; cleanly-coin'd excuses, viii. 318.

clear, pure, innocent, free from evil: a clear life ensuing, i. 217; you clear heavens ("may mean either ye cloudless skies or ye deities exempt from guilt," STEEVENS), vi. 551; in that clear way thou goest, viii. 59; for the sake of clear virginity, viii. 124; In his clear bed might have reposed still, viii. 298; the clearest gods, vii. 324.

clear-stories, iii. 381: A clear-story is a term in Gothic architecture for an upper story or row of windows in a church, hall, &c., and rising clear above the adjoining parts of the building: "This term seems to have been used in a variety of ways for any method of admitting light into the upper parts of a building. It appears from Holme that clearstory windows are those which have 'no transum or cross piece in the middle of them; to break the same into two lights,' the meaning employed by Shakespeare," &c. (HALLIWELL.)

clearness—Always thought That I require a, "i.e. you must manage matters so, that throughout the whole transaction I may stand clear of suspicion" (STEEVENS), vii. 35.

cleave to, to unite with closely: Thy thoughts I cleave to, i. 223; cleave to no revenge but Lucius, vi. 346; cleave not to their mould, vii. 12; If you shall cleave to my consent, vii. 21 (a very obscure cleft the root, cleft the root of her heart (an allusion to cleaving the pin,—see pin and clout,—the metaphor from archery with which the speech begins being continued here), i. 322.

clepe, to call, vii. 120; clepes, viii. 272; clepeth, ii. 208; clept, vii. 34.

clerkly, scholar-like, i. 276, 405 (twice); v. 147.

cliff, a key in music (used equivocally): if he can take her cliff, vi. 84.

cling thee—Till famine, vii. 68: Here cling is generally explained "shrink or shrivel:" but it means, I suspect, "make the entrails stick together;" compare Donne, clinqant, glittering, shining, v. 485.

"As to a stomach sterv'd, whose insides meete," &c.

clip, to embrace: Clip dead men's graves, v. 165; let me clip ye In arms, vi. 152; here I clip The anvil of my sword, vi. 209; You elements that clip us round about, vii. 429; clip your wives, vii. 571; No grave upon the earth shall clip in it, vii. 598; To clip Elysium, viii. 259; clip me, viii. 456; clipp'd in with the sea, iv. 247; clipp'd his body, vii. 664; clipp'd about, vii. 734; she clipp'd Adonis, viii. 456; clippeth thee about, iv. 65; clipping her, iii. 498.

cloister'd flight, vii. 36: "The bats wheeling round the dim cloisters of Queen's College, Cambridge, have frequently impressed on me the singular propriety of this original epithet" (STEEVENS).

close, secret: a close exploit (act) of death, v. 420; close delations, vii. 420:

close, secretly, by stealth: Which in a napkin being close convey'd, iii. 109.

close your hands—Young princes, iv. 27: see clap thyself my love.

close with, and close in with, "to come to an agreement with, to comply with, to unite with" (Johnson's Dict.), to fall in with: make thee wrong this virtuous gentlewoman to close with us? iv. 350; to close In terms of friendship with thine enemies, vi. 652; He closes with you in this consequence, vii. 129; He closes with you thus, ibid.; This closing with him fits his lunacy, vi. 344.

closely, secretly, privately: go closely in with me, iv. 49; to keep her closely at my call, vi. 472; we have closely sent for Hamlet hither, vii. 148.

closeness, recluseness, privacy, i. 180.

closure, an enclosure: the guilty closure of thy walls, v. 402; the quiet closure of my breast, viii. 265; the gentle closure of my breast, viii. 373.

closure, a conclusion, an end: a mutual closure of our house, vi. 352.

clothier's yard, an arrow the length of a clothier's yard, vii. 324 (Arrows "a cloth-yard long" are frequently mentioned in our early writers).

cloud in's face—He has a, vii. 540: Said of a horse "when he has a black or dark-coloured spot in his forehead between his eyes. This gives him a sour look, and being supposed to indicate an ill-temper, is, of course, regarded as a great blemish" (STEEVENS).

clouded, stained, defamed: My sovereign mistress clouded so, iii. 428.

clout, the nail or pin of the target: he'll ne'er hit the clout, ii. 191; 'a would have clapped i' the clout at twelve score (he would have hit the clout at twelve score yards), iv. 356; i' the clout, i' the clout, vii. 324: "Clout," says Gifford, "is merely the French clou, the wooden pin by which the target is fastened to the butt. At the head of this pin was commonly painted white, to hit the white, and hit the clout, were, of course, synonymous: both phrases expressed perfection in art, or success of any kind." Note on Jonson's Works, vol. v. p. 309: It is not safe to differ from Gifford, who may have had some authority for the above statement concerning the clout or pin: from the passages, however, which I happen to recollect in our early writers I should say, that the clout or pin stood in the centre of the inner circle of the butts,—which circle, being painted white, was called the white,—that to "hit the white" was a considerable feat, but that to "hit or cleave the clout or pin" was a much greater one,—though, no doubt, the two expressions were occasionally used to signify the same thing, viz. to "hit the mark."

clouted: see brogues, &c.

cloy, to claw, to stroke with a claw: cloys his beak, vii. 718.

clubs cannot part them, iii. 68; I'll call for clubs, if you will not away v. 16; Clubs, clubs! these lovers will not keep the peace, vi. 298; I missed the meteor once, and hit that woman, who cried out "Clubs!" when I might see from far some forty truncheoners draw to her succour, which were the hope o' the Strand, where she was quartered, &c. v. 569; Clubs, bills, and partisans! vi. 390: "It appears, from many of our old dramas, that, in our author's time, it was a common custom, on the breaking out of a fray, to call out 'Clubs—clubs,' to part the combatants" (MALONE): "Clubs" was originally the popular cry to call forth the London apprentices, who employed their clubs for the preservation of the public peace: sometimes, however, they used those weapons to raise a disturbance, as they are described doing in the last but one of the passages above cited.

clutch, to contract, to clasp close: to clutch my hand, iv. 28; extracting it clutched, i. 485.

coach-fellow, a horse that draws in the same carriage with another,—an associate, i. 365.

coals—Carry: see carry coals.

coasteth to the cry—She, She advanceth to the cry, viii. 268.

coat, a coat of arms: an eye-sore in my golden coat, viii. 293; spirits of richest coat, viii. 446.

coat is of proof—His: see second proof.

cobloaf, vi. 28: see note 44, vi. 107.

cock, a weather-cock: drown'd the cocks! vii. 294.

cock, a cock-boat: Diminish'd to her cock,—her cock, a buoy, vii. 322.

cock, a corruption of, or euphemism for God: Cock's passion, iii. 152; By cock, vii. 181. (This irreverent alteration of the sacred name was formerly very common: it occurs at least a dozen times in Heywood's Edward the Fourth, where one passage is

"Herald. Swear on this booke, King Lewis, so help you God, You meane no otherwise then you haue said.

King Lewis. So helpe me Cock as I dissemble not."

Part ii. sig. n 4, ed. 1619.)

cock—A wasteful, vi. 529: see note 69, vi. 586.

cock and pie—By, i. 352; iv. 387: A not uncommon oath, of uncertain derivation: cock has been understood to be the corruption of God (see above), and pie to mean the service-book of the Romish Church; which seems much more probable than Dounce's supposition that this oath was connected with the making of solemn vows by knights in the days of chivalry during entertainments at which a roasted peacock was served up.

cock-a-hoop!—You will set, vi. 406: Ray gives "To set cock on hoop," and remarks, "This is spoken of a Prodigal, one that takes out the spigget, and lays it upon the top [or hoop] of the barrel, drawing out the whole vessel without any intermission." Proverbs, p. 183, ed. 1768: Gifford (Note on Jonson's Works, vol. vi. p. 226) describes it as "a phrase denoting the excess of mirth and jollity;" and "suspects that it had a more dignified origin" than that just quoted from Ray: But it also was applied, as in our text, to insolence of language or bearing; and accordingly Coles (who seems to refer it to the bird cock) has "To be Cock-a-hoop, Ampullari, insolesco, cristas erigere." Lat. and Engl. Dict.

cockatrice, an imaginary creature (called also basilisk), supposed to kill by its very look, v. 418; vi. 433; viii. 802; cockatrices, iii. 372.

cockerel, a young cock, i. 193.

cockle—Sow'd, ii. 207; The cockle of rebellion, vi. 181: Nares says that Shakespeare means "the Agrostemma githago of Linnæus, a weed often troublesome in corn-fields" (Gloss.); Mr. Beisly that he means "the Lolium temulentum, in his time called darnel, as well as cockle and cockle-weed" (Shakspeare's Garden, &c. p. 180).

cockle hat, vii. 180: The cockle-shell worn usually in the front of the hat was the badge of a pilgrim: "for the chief places of devotion being beyond sea, or on the coasts, the pilgrims were accustomed to put cockle-shells upon their hats, to denote the intention or performance of their devotion" (WARBURTON).

cockled, inshelled, enclosed in a shell, ii. 206.

cock-light, twilight, viii. 182: see cock-shut time.

cockney—This great lubber, the world, will prove a, iii. 378; as the cockney did to the eels, vii. 287: "There is hardly a doubt that it [the term cockney] originates in an Utopian region of indolence and luxury, formerly denominated the country of cocaigne . . . With us the lines cited by Camden in his Britannia, vol. i. col. 451,

'Were I in my castle of Bungey Upon the river of Waveney, I would ne care for the king of Cockney,' whencesoever they come, indicate that London was formerly known by this satirical name; and hence a Londoner came to be called a cockney" (DOUCE): "The term cocknay appears in the Promptorium to imply simply a child spoiled by too much indulgence. . . . There can be little doubt that the word is to be traced to the imaginary region 'ihote Cokaygne,' described in the curious poem given by Hickes, Gramm. A. Sax. p. 231, and apparently translated from the French. Compare 'le Fabliaus de Coquaigne,' Fabl. Barbazan. et Méon. iv. 175. Palsgrave gives the verb 'To bring up lyke a cocknaye,' mignotter; and Elyot renders 'delicias facere, to play the cockney.' 'Dodeliner, to bring vp wantonly, as a cockney.' Hollyband's Treasurie. See also Baret's Alvearie. Chaucer uses the word as a term of contempt; and it occasionally signifies a little cook, coquinator." Way's note on the Prompt. Parv. p. 86: On the first of the above passages of our text see note 101, iii. 410 in the second passage there is perhaps an allusion to some tale now not known.

cock-shut time, v. 444 : An expression signifying "twilight," because the net in which cocks, i.e. wood-cocks, were caught or shut in during the twilight, was termed a cock-shut; it being a large net, which, suspended between two long poles, and stretched across a glade or riding, was easily drawn together ("Twilight or Cock-shut time, either in the morning or the evening." Minshew's Guide into Tongues, ed. 1617).

cod's head for the salmon's tail—To change the, vii. 399 : "i.e. to exchange a delicacy for coarser fare. See Queen Elizabeth's Household Book for the 43d year of her reign : 'Item, the Master Cookes have to fee all the salmons' tails,' &c. p. 296" (STEEVENS).

codding spirit—That, "That love of bed-sports. Cod is a word still used in Yorkshire for a pillow" (STEEVENS), vi. 341.

codling, iii. 339 : "(A mere diminutive of cod) . . . means an involucre or kell, and was used by our old writers for that early state of vegetation, when the fruit, after shaking off the blossom, began to assume a globular and determinate form." Gifford's note on Jonson's Works, vol. iv. p. 24.

cod-piece, an ostentatiously indelicate part of the male dress, which was put to several uses,—to stick pins in, to carry the purse in, &c. i. 290 (twice), 486 ; ii. 112 ; iii. 483 ; vii. 295 (twice) ; (on the last of which passages, Marry, here's grace and a cod-piece ; that's a wise man and a fool, Douce observes, "Shakespeare has with some humour applied the above name [cod-piece] to the Fool, who, for obvious reasons, was usually provided with this unseemly part of dress in a more remarkable manner than other persons") ; cod-pieces, ii. 187.

coffin, the raised crust of a pie : of the paste a coffin I will rear, vi. 348 : compare custard-coffin.

cog, to cheat, to wheedle, to lie, to load a die ("To cogge. Gaber, flater, afflater, sadayer . . . mensonger, et mentir, . . . To cogge a Die. Casser la noisille." Cotgrave's Fr. and Engl. Dict.), i. 382 (twice) ; ii. 131, 217 ; v. 364 ; vi. 194, 568 ; cogging, i. 378 ; Come, both you cogging Greeks, vi. 96 (Steevens remarks, in opposition to Johnson, that here the epithet cogging "had propriety, in respect of Diomedes at least, who had defrauded him of his mistress. Troilus bestows it on both, unius ob culpam") ; vii. 448.

cognizance, a badge, v. 32 ; vi. 642 (as a plural) ; vii. 669.

coign, a corner-stone at the exterior angle of a building (old Fr. coing), vi. 230 ; coign of vantage ("convenient corner," JOHNSON), vii. 17 ; the four opposing coigns (here "the author seems to have considered the world as a stupendous edifice, artificially constructed," MALONE), viii. 35. (The editors are at a loss for an example of coign in any other writer than Shakespeare. But compare "And Cape of Hope, last coign of Africa."

Sylvester's Du Bartas,—The Colonies, p. 129, ed. 1841, where the original has "angle dernier d'Afrique."

coil, bustle, stir, tumult, turmoil, i. 183; 269; ii. 23, 111, 140, 300; iii. 223; iv. 17, vi. 318, 425, 522; When we have shuffled off this mortal coil ("coil is here used in each of its senses, that of turmoil or bustle, and that which entwines or wraps round," CALDECOTT), vii. 149; viii. 151.

coistrel, iii. 331; viii. 60: "A coystril is a palfry groom, one only fit to carry arms, but not to use them. So, in Holinshed's [Harrison's] Description of England, vol. i. p. 162: 'Costerels, or bearers of the armes of barons or knights,' &c. (TOLLET): Coistrel is often used as a general term of reproach; and I believe, in spite of Gifford's note on Jonson's Works, vol. i. p. 109, that it is a distinct word from kestrel ("Coustell that wayteth on a speare, cousteillier." Palsgrave's Lesclar. de la Lang. Fr. 1530, fol. xxvii. (Table of Subst.):

"A carter a courtier, it is a worthy warke,
That with his whyp his mares was wonte to yarke;
A custrell to dryue the denyll out of the derke," &c.

Skelton's Magnyfycence,—Works, vol. i. p. 241, ed. Dyce).

Colbrand the giant, iv. 11; nor Colbrand, v. 568: "A Danish giant, whom Guy of Warwick discomfited in the presence of King Athelstan. The combat is very pompously described by Drayton in his Polyolbion [Song the Twelfth]" (JOHNSON).

cold for action, cold for want of action, iv. 428.

collect, to gather by observation: Made me collect these dangers in the duke, v. 143.

collection, a conclusion, a consequence drawn, a deduction: move The hearers to collection, vii. 179; Make no collection of it, vii. 734.

collied, smutted, blackened, darkened: the collied night, ii. 269; passion, having my best judgment collied, vii. 409.

collier!—Satan: hang him, foul, iii. 371: Here Steevens remarks that collier was, in Shakespeare's time, a term of the highest reproach, in consequence of the impositions practised by the venders of coals (and see Gifford's note on Jonson's Works, vol. ii. p. 169): which is, no doubt, true; but in the present passage it is evident that only the blackness of the collier is alluded to: "Like will to like (as the Devil said to the Collier)." Ray's Proverbs, p. 130, ed. 1768.

collop, used metaphorically by a father to his child, as being a portion of his flesh, iii. 424; v. 75.

Colme-kill, vii. 80: "The famous Iona, one of the Western Isles. . . . Holinshed scarcely mentions the death of any of the ancient kings of Scotland, without taking notice of their being buried with their predecessors in Colme-kill" (STEEVENS): "It is now called Icolmkill" (MALONE): "Kil is a cell." See Jamieson's Dictionary in voce. Colme-kill is the cell or chapel of St. Columba" (BOSWELL).

Colme's-inch—Saint, vii. 7: "Now called Inchcomb [or Inchcolm], is a small island lying in the Firth of Edinburgh [of Forth], with [considerable remains of] an abbey upon it, dedicated to St. Columb; called by Camden Inch Colm or The Isle of Columba . . . Inch or Inshe, in the Irish and Erse languages, signifies an island [generally a small one]. See Lhuyd's Archæologia" (STEEVENS).

coloquintida, vii. 393: "Is the Cucumis Colocynthis, the colocynth gourd or bitter cucumber. From the fruit of this plant is obtained the well-known bitter and purgative drug, colocynth," &c. Beisly's Shakspeare's Garden, &c. p. 164.

colours, specious appearances, deceits: I do fear colourable colours, ii. 196; I love no colours (with a quibble), v. 30.

colours—Fear no, iii. 335; iv. 401: "Probably at first a military expression, to fear no enemy. So Shakespeare derives it, and though the passage [i.e. the first of these passages] is comic, it is likely to be right." Nares's Gloss.

colt, "a witless, heady, gay youngster" (JOHNSON), but used with a quibble: that's a colt indeed, ii. 351.

colt, to fool, to trick, to gull: What a plague mean ye to colt me thus? iv. 227 (where the quibbling in the Prince's reply refers, of course, to Falstaff's having lost his horse).

colt, to horse: She hath been colted by him, vii. 669.

columbinés: see fennel for you, &c.

co-mart, vii. 106: see note 3, vii. 213.

comb on—You crow, cock, with your, vii. 657: "The allusion is to a [domestic] fool's cap, which hath a comb like a cock's" (JOHNSON): "The intention of the speaker is to call Cloten a cowcomb [a simpleton?]" (MASON).

combineate husband, contracted husband, i. 482: The late W. S. Rose, after giving some instances of the "close and whimsical relation there often is between English and Italian idiom," concludes with this remark: "Thus every Italian scholar understands 'her combineate husband' to mean her husband, elect; and at this hour there is nothing more commonly in an Italian's mouth than 'Se si può combinarla' (if we can bring it to bear), when speaking with reference to any future arrangement." Note on his translation of Oriando Furioso, vol. iv. p. 47.

combined, bound: I am combined by a sacred vow, i. 503.

come, bird, come, vii. 125: "The call which falconers use to their hawk in the air, when they would have him come down to them" (HÄMMER).

come out and long-tail: see cut and long-tail, &c.

come off, to come down, to pay: they must come off, i. 401.

comes sooner by white hairs, sooner acquires white hairs, ii. 350.

comfortable, susceptible of comfort, cheerful: For my sake be comfortable, iii. 380; his comfortable temper, vi. 589.

comfortable, ready to give comfort, comforting: Be comfortable to my mother, iii. 209; Who, I am sure, is kind and comfortable, vii. 271.

comforting your evils, encouraging, abetting your wicked courses, iii. 444.

comma 'tween their amities—Stand a, vii. 201: see note 143, vii. 241.

commences it, and sets it in act and use—Till sack, iv. 376: "It seems probable to me, that Shakespeare, in these words, alludes to the Cambridge Commencement; and in what follows to the Oxford Act: for by those different names our two universities have long distinguished the season at which each of them gives to her respective students a complete authority to use those hoards of learning which have entitled them to their several degrees in arts, law, physic, and divinity" (TYRWHITT).

commend, to commit, to offer: Commend the paper to his gracious hand, iii. 274; commend it strangely to some place, iii. 448; His glittering arms he will commend to rust, iv. 151; I do commend you to their backs, vii. 32; Commend unto his lips thy favouring hand, vii. 571; Commends th' ingredients of our poison'd chalice, vii. 18; His eye commends the leading to his heart, viii. 299.

commodity, profit, advantage: To me can life be no commodity, iii. 452; tickling commodity, iv. 28; turn diseases to commodity, iv. 326; Prove our commodities, vii. 312.

commodity of brown paper and old ginger—A, i. 499: In Shakespeare's days it was very common for money-lenders to force prodigals, like young Master Rash, to take a portion of the sum they wanted to borrow in goods (commodities) of various kinds,—sometimes the veriest trumpery, brown paper, lute-strings, &c.,—of which goods the said prodigals were to make what they could. Passages illustrative of this custom abound in our early writers; and several of them* have been cited; but the following lines, I believe, are now for the first time adduced;

" You [i. e. usurers] dampne yourselues, and sweare that money's scant,
But ritche commodities he [i. e. the young gentleman] shall not want,
That certaine money presently will yeeld,
If he be skilfull to marshall the field;
Silks, and veluets, at intollerable price,
Embroydered hangars, pepper, and rice,
Browne paper, lute-strings, buckles for a saddle, Perwigs, tiffany, paramours to waddle, Great bars of yron, and Spanish tucks," &c.

Baxter's Sir Philip Sydneys Ourania, &c. 1606, sig. 14.

commonty, Sly's blunder for comedy, iii. 113.

commonwealth I would by contraries, &c.—I' the, i. 196: In this and in the next two speeches of Gonzalo, Shakespeare is deeply indebted to portions of a chapter of Montaigne's Essayes, as translated by Florio, 1603 (see prefatory matter to The Tempest, i. 172): there Montaigne, speaking of a newly-discovered country which he calls Antartick France, has the following sentences, but not in the following order;

" It is a nation, would I answer Plato, that hath no kinde of traffike, no knowledge of letters, no intelligence of numbers, no name of magistrate, nor of politike superioritie; no use of service, of riches, or of poverty; no contracts, no successions, no dividences; no occupation but idle; no respect of kinred but common, no apparel but naturall, no manuring of lands, no use of wine, corne, or mettle. The very words that import lying, falshood, treason, dissimulation, covetousnes, envie, detraction, and pardon, were never heard of amongst them."

" And if, notwithstanding, in divers fruites of those countries they were never tilled, we shall finde that, in respect of ours, they are most excellent, and as delicate unto our taste, there is no reason arte should gaine the point of honour of our great and puissant mother Nature."

" Meseemeth that what in those nations wee see by experience, doth not onlie excede all the pictures wherewith licentious poesie hath proudly imbellished the golden age, and al his quaint inventions to faine a happy condition of man, but also the conception and desire of philosophie." Book I. chap. xxx. Of the Caniballes.

communication of A most poor issue—But minister, v. 486: see note 9, v. 574.

compact, compacted, composed: compact of credit, ii. 26; of imagination all compact, ii. 312; compact of jare, iii. 30; compact of sin, vi. 351; compact of fire, viii. 244.

complain, used as a verb active: Where, then, alas, may I complain myself (“as Mr. M. Mason observes, is a literal translation of the French phrase, me plaindre,” STEEVENS), iv. 111; And what I want, it boots not to complain, iv. 154.

complain of good breeding, complain of the want of good breeding, iii. 37: see note 77, iii. 88.

complement, and ceremony of it—In all the accoutrement, i. 395; deck'd in modest complement, iv. 441; A man of complements, ii. 167; in all complements of devoted, &c. ii. 170; These are complements, ii. 183; the courageous captain of complements, vi. 418: “Compliment [Complement], in Shakespeare's time, did not signify, at least did not only signify, verbal civility or phrases of courtesy, but, according to its original meaning, the trappings or ornamental appendages of a character; in the same manner, and on the same

complices, accomplices, confederates, iv. 139, 141, 319; v. 193, 294.

comply, to compliment: Let me comply with you in this garb ("compliantly assume this dress and fashion of behaviour," CALDECOTT), vii. 141; He did comply with ("was complaisant with, treated with apish ceremony," CALDECOTT) his dug, before he sucked it, vii. 205: Compare "Flatterie hath taken such habit in man's affections, that it is in moste men altera natura: yea, the very sucking babes hath a kind of adulation towards their nurses for the dugge." Ulpian Fulwel's Arte of Flatterie,—Preface to the Reader, —1579, 4to (Mr. Singer asserts that in both the above passages of Shakespeare comply with means "embrace," and he compares, in Herrick,

" Witty Ovid, by Whom fair Corinna sits, and doth comply, With iv'ry wrists, his laureat head," &c.).

compose, to agree: If we compose well here ("If we come to a lucky composition, agreement," STEEVENS), vii. 515.

composition, a compact, an agreement: I crave our composition ("the terms on which our differences are settled," STEEVENS) may be written, vii. 530.

composition, consistency: There is no composition in these news, vii. 383.

composture, a compost, vi. 562.

compromis'd, mutually agreed, ii. 355.

compt, an account, a reckoning, iii. 278; have the dates in compt ("take good notice of the dates, for the better computation of the interest due upon them," THEOBALD), vi. 524; and what is theirs, in compt ("subject to account," STEEVENS), vii. 17; when we shall meet at compt (reckoning at the judgment-day), vii. 467.

comptible, impressible, susceptible, sensitive, iii. 339.

con him no thanks for't—I, iii. 265; thanks I must you con, vi. 562: "To con thanks exactly answers the French sçavoir gré. To con is to know" (STEEVENS).

conceal, a blunder of Simple for reveal: I may not conceal them, sir, i. 404.

conceit, conception, thought, imagination, fancy: *the good conceit (opinion) I hold of thee, i. 301; his conceit is false, ii. 92; conceit's expositor, ii. 177; profound conceit, ii. 347; a gentleman of good conceit, iii. 68; using conceit alone, iv. 40; 'Tis nothing but conceit ("fanciful conception," MALONE), iv. 131; no more conceit in him than is in a mallet, iv. 348; dull conceit, v. 80; some conceits or other, v. 404; She would applaud Andronicus' conceit, vi. 327; Conceit, more rich in matter than in words, vi. 426; The horrible conceit of death and night, vi. 455; When thy first griefs were but a mere conceit, vi. 574; rich conceit, vi. 576; force his soul so to his own conceit, vii. 146; Conceit in weakest bodies, vii. 170; Conceit upon her father, vii. 180; of very liberal conceit, vii. 204; Who, if it had conceit, would die, viii. 36; bottomless conceit, viii. 307; Conceit and grief, viii. 324; Conceit deceitful, viii. 328; deep conceit, viii. 457; passing all conceit, ibid.; Dangerous conceits, vii. 425.

conceit, to conceive, to imagine: one of two bad ways you must conceit me, vi. 652; Well conceited (wittily and pleasantly conceived), Davy, iv. 388; You have right well conceited, vi. 630; one that so imperfectly conceits, vii. 420.

conceited, fanciful, imaginative: is not the humour conceited? i. 353; an admirable-conceited fellow (a fellow full of admirable conceits, pleasant fancies), iii. 472; the conceited painter, viii. 326; conceited characters (images), viii. 439.

conceited, possessed with an idea: He is as horribly conceited of him, iii. 375.

conceiv'd to scope, "properly imagined, appositely, to the purpose" (JOHNSON), vi. 509.

concent, consonance of harmony, accord, union, iv. 388, 429, 430, 438.

concernancy, sir? why do we wrap the gentleman in our more rawer breath?—The, "The tendency of all this blazon of character? Why do we clothe this gentleman's perfections in our humble and imperfect language? make him the subject of our rude discussion?" (CALDECOTT), vii. 203.

concludes—This, "This is a decisive argument" (JOHNSON), iv. 8.

conclusion, an experiment: a foregone conclusion, vii. 428; That mother tries a merciless conclusion, viii. 320; To try conclusions, vii. 42; She hath pursu'd conclusions infinite, vii. 598; amplify my judgment in Other conclusions, vii. 648.

conclusion, shall acquire no honour Demuring upon me—Your wife Octavia, with her modest eyes, And still, vii. 581: Here still conclusion is explained by Johnson "sedate determination, silent coolness of resolution;" by Singer "moral judgment conveyed, not in words, but by mute demure expression of countenance" (Shakespeare Vindicated, &c. p. 296); and an anonymous critic glosses the whole passage as follows; "That lady of yours, looking demurely upon me with her modest eyes, and drawing her quiet inferences, shall acquire no honour from the contrast between my fate with her own." Blackwood's Magazine for Oct. 1853, p. 468.

Concolinel, ii. 182: Perhaps the (corrupted) title or beginning or burden of some Italian song.

condemned seconds—You have sham'd me In your, vi. 155: Explained by Steevens, "You have, to my shame, sent me help, which I must condemn as intrusive, instead of applauding it as necessary."

condition, on condition: Condition, I had gone barefoot to India, vi. 11.

condition, disposition, temper, quality: the condition of a saint, ii. 353; the duke's condition, iii. 15; Demand of him my condition, iii. 265; I will from henceforth rather be myself, Mighty and to be fear'd, than my condition ("I will from henceforth rather put on the character that becomes me, and exert the resentment of an injured king, than still continue in the inactivity and mildness of my natural disposition," WARBURTON), iv. 215; a good English condition, iv. 498; my condition is not smooth, iv. 506; a touch of your condition, v. 429; the condition of a man, vi. 231; it hath much prevail'd on your condition, vi. 637; long-engrafted condition, vii. 257; full of most blessed condition, vii. 401; of so gentle a condition! vii. 441; the cate-log of her conditions, i. 298; his ill conditions, ii. 107; our soft conditions, iii. 179; all his senses have but human conditions ("qualities," JOHNSON), iv. 472; It is the stars . . . govern our conditions, vii. 319; our conditions So differing in their acts, vii. 518; Quiet and gentle thy conditions, viii. 37.

condition, an art, a profession: would be well express'd In our condition, vi. 509.

condition, shall better speak of you, &c.—I, in my, iv. 375: Here in my condition seems to be rightly explained by Steevens "in my place as commanding officer."

conditions—To make: see make conditions.

condolement—Obstinate, "ceaseless and unremitted expression of grief" (CALDECOTT), vii. 110.

condolements, certain vails—Certain, viii. 24: Does condolements mean "gratifications"?

conduce a fight—Within my soul there doth, vi. 88: see note 153, vi. 125.

corporal of his field—A, ii. 187: "Dr. Farmer's quotation of the line from Ben Jonson [New Inn, act ii. sc. 2], 'As corporal of the field, maestro del campo,' has the appearance, without perhaps the intention, of suggesting that these officers were the same: this, however, was not the fact. In Styward's Pathway to Martiall Discipline, 1581, 4to, there is a chapter on the office of maister of the campe, and another on the electing and office of the foure corporalls of the fields; from which it appears that 'two of the latter were appointed for placing and ordering of shot, and the other two for embattailing of the pikes and billes, who according to their worthinesse, if death hapneth, are to succede the great sergeant or sergeant major" (DOUCE): "Corporals of the Field. This office is a place of good reputation, though of great paines, labour, and industry. There are commonly four of them, of which two are alwayes attending on the marshall or generall, as their right hands, discharging by their endurances the governours of the campe of many travailes, cares, and watchings. They ought either to be ancient captaines, casheer'd as we say in the altering and changings the list of the army; or experienced souldiers that know how to bestowe the companies, and where to order the regements and ambusca-does; but in no case they must be chosen either for favour or affection, because their service consists in knowledge and understanding the secrets of the warre, as having the overlooking of the colonels and captaines companies, that they march in order; the informing of the quarter-masters what squadrons shall goe to the watch, or other imployments; the giving the alarums to the campe, as taking notice of the scowt-masters direction; the acquainting the colonell of the regiment volantem with any danger or busines; the overseeing of skirmishes, and so to certifie the marshall and sergeant-major where is any defect or neede of supply; and a continuall attending both night and day, as never out of imployment, when the enemy lodgeth neare, or any towne or place is besieged." The Military Art of Trayning, 1622 (cited by Mr. Halliwell).

corrigible, corrective, having the power to correct: corrigible authority, vii. 392.

corrigible neck—His, vii. 578: Here Steevens says that corrigible is for "corrected:" but is it not rather for "subject to correction"?

(According to Gifford, costard means properly a large kind of apple; see his note on Jonson's Works, vol. iv. p. 121.)

costermonger times—In these, "In these times when the prevalence of trade has produced that meanness that rates the merit of every thing by money" (JOHNSON), iv. 324. (A costermonger meant formerly a petty dealer in fruit of various kinds.)

coted them on the way—We, vii. 140: To cote is explained by Tollet "to overtake," and by Nares (in Gloss.) "to pass by, to pass the side of another:" Caldecott cites from Golding's transl. of Ovid's Metamorphoses, "With that Hippomenes coted her" (where the original has "Præterit Hippomenes"), B. x. sig. R 8 verso, ed. 1603: With the present passage of Shakespeare compare what the same speaker afterwards says of the same persons, it so fell out, that certain players We o'er-raught (overtook, overpassed) on the way, vii. 148.

cot-quean, a man who busies himself too much in female affairs, vi. 456. (The late Joseph Hunter, in his New Illustr. of Shakespeare, vol. ii. p. 138, confounded, as others have done, this word with cuc-quean.—In Fletcher's Love's Cure, act ii. sc. 2, Bobadilla says to Lucio, who has been brought up as a girl, "Diablo! what should you do in the kitchen? cannot the cooks lick their fingers, without your overseeing? nor the maids make pottage, except your dog's head be in the pot? Don Lucio? Don Quot-quean, Don Spinster! wear a petticoat still, and put on your smock a' Monday; I will have a baby o' clouts made for it, like a great girl;" where "Quot-quean" is a corrupt form of "Cot-quean:" Even in Addison's days the word cot-quean was still used to signify one who is too busy in meddling with women's matters: see the letter of an imaginary lady in The Spectator, No. 482.)

Cotsol', Cotswold Downs in Gloucestershire, celebrated for rural sports of all kinds: I heard say he was outrun on Cotsol' ("This might refer to common coursing, and therefore does not at all affect the date of the play, which Warton endeavoured to fix from the establishment of Dover's Games on Cotswold. They were not founded till the reign of James I." Nares's Gloss.), i. 347; a Cotsol' man, iv. 355.

couchings, vi. 647: see note 57, vi. 697.

counsel, secrecy: Myself in counsel his competitor, i. 288; 'Twere better for you if it were known in counsel (with a quibble), i. 348; to your sworn counsel, iii. 255; Two may keep counsel, &c. (a proverb), vi. 830, 428; How hard it is for women to keep counsel! vi. 644; the players cannot keep counsel, vii. 157; Emptying our bosoms of their counsel (secrets) sweet, ii. 271.

counsels—Are enter'd in our, Are initiated in our secrets, or acquainted with our purposes, vi. 143.

countenance, patronage : He wag'd me with his countenance, vi. 234.

countenance, to receive, to entertain : to countenance my mistress, iii. 152.

counter, a piece of false coin used to cast accounts with : What, for a counter (trifle), would I do but good? iii. 32 ; I cannot do't without counters, iii. 464 ; will you with counters sum, &c. vi. 31 ; such rascal counters (where counters is used as a term of contempt for money), vi. 669 ; your neck, sir, is pen, book, and counters, vii. 720.

counter-caster, vii. 376 : see the preceding article.

counter, and yet draws dry-foot well—A hound that runs, ii. 35 : To run counter is to mistake the course of the game, or to turn and pursue the backward trail ; to draw dry-foot is to track by the scent of the foot : "To run counter and draw dry-foot well are therefore inconsistent. The jest consists in the ambiguity of the word counter, which means the wrong way in the chace and a prison in London. The officer that arrested him was a sergeant of the counter" (JOHNSON) : You hunt counter : hence ! avaunt ! iv. 322 (see note II, iv. 404) ; O, this is counter, you false Danish dogs ! vii. 182.

counterfeit, a portrait, a likeness, a picture : Fair Portia's counterfeit, ii. 383 ; Thou draw'st a counterfeit Best in all Athens, vi. 567 ; the poor counterfeit of her complaining ("her maid, whose countenance exhibited an image of her mistress's grief," MALONE), viii. 323 ; your painted counterfeit, viii. 357 ; the counterfeit Is poorly imitated, viii. 375.

counterfeit, synonymous with slip, a piece of false money : hence the quibbling, If I could have remembered a gilt counterfeit, thou wouldest not have slipped out of my contemplation, vi. 37 ; and hence the metaphor, some coiner with his tools Made me a counterfeit, vii. 670 ; and see slip.

court-of-guard, the place where the guard musters, v. 22; vii. 401, 572, 573.

courtesy from heaven—I stole all, iv. 255: On the words "Stole courtesy from heaven" in Massinger's Great Duke of Florence, act ii. sc. 3, Gifford remarks; "This is from Shakespeare, and the plain meaning of the phrase is, that the affability and sweetness of Giovanni were of a heavenly kind, i.e. more perfect than was usually found among men; resembling that divine condescension which excludes none from its regard, and therefore immediately derived or stolen from heaven, from whence all good proceeds. In this there is no impropriety: common usage warrants the application of the term to a variety of actions which imply nothing of turpitude, but rather the contrary: affections are stolen—in a word, to steal, here, and in many other places, means little else than to win by imperceptible progression, by gentle violence, &c." Note on Massinger's Works, vol. ii. p. 467, ed. 1813.

court holy-water, flattery, fine speeches without deeds, vii. 295.

cressets, iv. 246: "A cresset light was the same as a beacon light, but occasionally portable. It consisted of a wreathed rope smeared with pitch and placed in a cage of iron like a trivet, which was suspended on pivots in a kind of fork. The light sometimes issued from a hollow pan filled with combustibles. The term is not, as Hanmer and others have stated, from the French croisette, a little cross, but rather from croiset, a cruet or earthen pot; yet as the French language furnishes no similar word for the cresset itself, we might prefer a different etymology," &c. (DOUCE).

Cressida was a beggar, iii. 361: "The circumstance of making Cressid a beggar is from Chaucer [Henryson]; who, in his Testament of Cresseide, makes Saturn, at the instance of Cupid, conclude a sentence pronounc'd on her in these words,

"great penurye Thou suffre shalt, and as a beggar dye" (CAPELL).

Cressid's kind—The lazar kite of, iv. 436: Steevens remarks that this expression is found in Gascoigne's Dan Bartholomew of Bathe, 1587 [p. 67], and in Greene's Card of Fancy, 1601 [sig. M verso, ed. 1608]; "What courtesy is [there] to be found in such kites of Cressid's kind?" "This alludes to the punishment of Cressida for her falsehood to Troilus. She was afflicted with the leprosy, 'like a Lazarous,' and sent to the 'spittel hous.' See Chaucer's [Henryson's] Testament of Cresseide" (DOUCE,—whom Grey has anticipated in pointing out this allusion).

"Nor seldom seene in kites of Cressid's kinde;"

Crosby-place, v. 361, 372, 397: In Bishopsgate Street; "This magnificent house was built in the year 1466 by Sir John Crosby, grocer and woolman. [At least, he obtained a lease of the ground in 1466.] He died in 1475. The ancient hall of this fabric is still remaining, though divided by an additional floor, and incumbered by modern galleries, having been converted into a place of worship for Antinomians, &c. The upper part of it is now the warehouse of an eminent packer. Sir J. Crosby's tomb is in the neighbouring church of St. Helen the Great" (STEVENS): "Crosby Hall was restored a few years ago. It is an elegant Gothic edifice, sufficient to tell the magnificence of the original Crosby Place" (HALLIWELL).

CROSS, if I did bear you—Yet I should bear no, iii. 25; crosses love not him, ii. 171; you are too impatient to bear crosses, iv. 326: "The ancient penny, according to Stow, had a double cross with a crest stamped on it, so that it might easily be broken in the midst, or in the four quarters. Hence it became a common phrase when a person had no money about him, to say, he had not a single cross. As this was certainly an unfortunate circumstance, there is no end to the quibbling upon this poor word." Gifford's note on Jonson's Works, vol. i. p. 134.

CROSS'D—He'd be, He would be furnished with crosses or money (a quibble), vi. 520: see the preceding article.

CROSS-ROW—The, v. 352: An abbreviation of The Christ-cross row, i. e. the alphabet, which, we are told, was so called, either because a cross was placed at the beginning of it, or because it was written in the form of a cross, as a charm. curst, froward, perverse : a curst necessity, iv. 429.

curstness grow to the matter—Nor, "Let not ill-humour be added to the real subject of our difference" (JOHNSON), vii. 515.

curtains—Their ragged, Their tattered colours, iv. 478.

curtal dog, i. 362 ; ii. 29 ; viii. 461 : "Originally the dog of an unqualified person, which by the forest laws must have its tail cut short, partly as a mark, and partly from a notion that the tail of a dog is necessary to him in running. In later usage, curtail-dog means either a common dog, not meant for sport, or a dog that missed his game. It has the latter sense in this passage [i.e. in the first of the above passages,—Hope is a curtal dog]." Nares's Gloss.

curtal—Bay, a docked bay horse ("a proper name for a horse, as well as an appellation for a docked one," DOUCE), iii. 231.

cust-alorum, i. 345 : Is this intended for an abbreviation of Custos rotulorum ? or does Shallow (which is rather unlikely) blunder here ? or is the text somewhat corrupted ?

custard—Like him that leaped into the, iii. 240 : "It was a foolery practised at city entertainments, whilst the jester or zany was in vogue, for him to jump into a large deep custard, set for the purpose, 'to set on a quantity of barren spectators to laugh'," as our poet says in his Hamlet" (THEOBALD) : and see The Devil is an Ass,—Jonson's Works, vol. v. p. 14, ed. Gifford : In the 'passage of our text there certainly seems to be an allusion to some particular occurrence of the time.

custard-coffin, the raised crust of a custard, iii. 261 : compare coffin.

customer, a cant term for a loose woman : I think thee now some common customer, iii. 284 ; I marry her !—what, a customer ! vii. 439.

customer, an accustomed visitor: You minion, you, are these your customers? ii. 40 ("Aventore, a customer, a commor or a frequenter to a place." Florio's Ital. and Engl. Dict.: Malone's explanation of customers in this passage is strangely wrong).

cut, a familiar name for a common horse (either from its being docked or gelded), and sometimes applied to a man as a term of reproach: call me cut, iii. 351; beat Cut's saddle, iv. 223; a white cut, forth for to ride, viii. 163.

cut and long-tail—under the degree of a squire—Come, i. 388; come cut and long-tail to him, viii. 199: In the first of these passages Slender means to say, "Come what persons will, under the degree of a squire;" and though, in the second passage, the Gaoler's daughter is speaking of the unrivalled accomplishments of the horse which she imagines Palamon has given to her, it seems to be agreed that the expression Come cut and long-tail was originally derived from dogs, and equivalent to "Come dogs of all sorts." ("Yea, even their verie dogs, Rug, Rig, and Risbie, yea, cut and long-taile, they shall be welcome." Ulpian Fulwel's Art of Flattery, 1576, sig. G 3:

"When as Dorilus arose, Whistles Cut-tayle from his play,
And along with them he goes."

Drayton, The Shepheards Strena, p. 152; appended to The Battaille of Agincourt, &c. 1627.—

In vol. ii. p. 671 of the second edition of his Shakespeare Mr. Collier observes; "The Rev. Mr. Dyce in a note on 'Wit at several Weapons' (B. and F. iv. 39) says that cut and longtail means 'dogs of all kinds.' What marks of admiration would he not have placed after it, if any other editor had committed such a mistake!" Here I might indeed be excused if I had recourse to "marks of admiration" at the astonishing inconsistency of Mr. Collier, who, when he wrote what I have just quoted, must have entirely forgotten that in vol. i. p. 222 of the same edition he had given the following note on The Merry Wives of Windsor, act iii. sc. 4; "come cut and long-tail," A phrase expressive of dogs of every kind; which Slender applies to persons precisely in the same way as by [sic] Pompey in Beaumont and Fletcher's 'Wit at several Weapons' (edit. Dyce, iv. p. 39)."

cutler's poetry upon a knife, ii. 412: "Knives, as Sir J. Hawkins observes, were formerly inscribed, by means of aquafortis, with short sentences in distich" (REED).

cuttle, iv. 344: We are informed by Greene that "The knife [for cutting a purse is called] the Cuttle bounç." Notable Discovery of Coosenage, &c. 1592, sig. c 2; and so too by Dekker (who has "Cuttle-bung") in his Belman of London, &c. sig. H verso, ed. 1608; and here perhaps cuttle may be explained "cutpurse:" but the context would rather show that (as Nares in Gloss. suggests) it is equivalent to "cutter, swaggerer, bully." (Todd, in his ed. of Johnson's Dict., says that Shakespeare's commentators "were not aware that cuttle is a serious term [for a knife], in use long before Shakespeare wrote:" What should have made him suppose that they were not aware of it?)

cypress let me be laid—In sad, Let me be laid in a coffin made of sad cypress-wood, iii. 352 : Here some prefer understanding cypress to mean "a shroud of cypress or cyprus" (see the next article) : but it is at least certain that formerly coffins were frequently made of cypress-wood ; and Douce remarks that "the expression laid seems ; more applicable to a coffin than to a shroud, and also that the shroud is afterwards expressly mentioned by itself."

cyprus, cipres, or cypress, a fine transparent stuff, similar to crape, either white or black, but more commonly the latter, iii. 363, 472. (It appears by a letter of H. Walpole to Sir H. Mann, dated April 25th, 1743, that even at that period cypress was synonymous with crape : "If one did lose a husband or a lover, there are those becoming comforts, weeds and cypresses, jointures and weeping Cupids." Letters, vol. i. p. 240, ed. Cunningham.)

Dagonet in Arthur's show—I was then Sir, iv. 361 : "The question whether Shallow represented Sir Dagonet at *Mile-end-green or Clement's inn, although it has been maintained on either side with great plausibility, must ever remain undecided ; but Mr. Malone's acute and ingenious conjecture, that Arthur's show was an exhibition of archery, and not an interlude, will no longer admit of any doubt. The truth of both these positions will appear from the following circumstances. In 1682 there was published 'A remembrance of the worthy show and shooting by the Duke of Shore-ditch and his associates the worshipful citizens of London upon Tuesday the 17th of September 1583, set forth according to the truth thereof to the everlasting honour of the game of shooting in the long bow. By W. M., in p. 40 of which book is this passage: 'The prince of famous memory King Henry the Eighth, having red in the chronicles of England, and seen in his own time how armies mixed with good archers have evermore so galled the enemy, that it hath been great cause of the victory, he being one day at Mile-end when prince Arthur and his knights were there shooting did greatly commend the game, and allowed thereof, lauding them to their encouragement.' One should be very much inclined to suppose this decisive of the first question, and that these shows were usually held at Mile-end; but this is by no means the case. The work proceeds to state that King Henry the Eighth, keeping at one time a princely court at Windsor, caused sundry matches to be made concerning shooting with the long bow; at which one Barlo, who belonged to his majesty's guard, remaining to shoot, the king said to him, 'Win thou all, and thou shalt be duke over all archers.' Barlo drew his bow and won the match; whereat the king being pleased, commended him for his good archery; and the man dwelling in Shoreditch, the king named him Duke of Shoreditch. One of the successors to this duke appointed a show on the 17th of September 1583, to be held in Smithfield and other parts of the city, which is here very circumstantially described; and among many other curious particulars it is mentioned that the citizens and inhabitants of Fleetbridge, &c. followed with a show worth beholding of seemly archers; 'then the odd devise of Saint Clements parish, which but ten days before had made the same show in their own parish, in setting up the queen's majesties stake in Holborn fields, which stakemaster Knevit, one of the gentlemen of her majesties chamber, gave unto them at his cost and charges; and a gunn worth three pound, made of gold, to be given unto him that best deserved it by shooting in a peece at the mark which was set up on purpose at Saint Jame's wall.' This, however, was not solely a shooting with fire-arms, but also with bows: for in the account of the show itself, which immediately follows, men bearing 'shields and shafts' are mentioned, and 'a worthy show of archers following.' In the continuation of the description of the Smithfield show mention is made of 'the baron Stirrop, whose costly stake will be in memorys after he is dead, now standing at Mile-end;' and again, 'And this one thing is worthy of memory, that upon the day of Prince Arthur's shooting, which was five weeks before this show, the duke, willing to beautife the same in some seemly sort, sent a buck of that season by the marquess Barlo (the name of this person was kept up long after his decease), accompanied with many goldsmiths, who coming in satten dublets and chains of gold about their bodies, with horns at their backs, did all the way wind their horns, and presented the same to prince Arthur, who was at his tent, which was at Mile-end-green.' We see therefore that Shakespeare having both these shows in his recollection, has made Shallow, a talkative simpleton, refer to them indistinctly, and that probably by design, and with a due attention to the nature of his character. What Shallow afterwards says about the management of the little quiver fellow's piece, or caliver, will not weigh in either scale; because in all these shows there were musketeers. In that at Smithfield the feryers marched, consisting of 'one hundred handsome fellowes with calivers on their necks, all trimly decked with white feathers in their hats.' Maister Thomas Smith, who in Mr. Malone's note is said to have personated Prince Arthur, was 'chiefe customer to her majesty in the port of London;' and to him Richard Robinson, a translator of several books in the reign of Elizabeth, dedicated his Auncient order, societie and unitie laudable of Prince Arthure and his knightly armory of the round table, with a threefold assertion frendly in favour and furtherance of English archery at this day, 1583, 4to. Such part of this work as regards Prince Arthur is chiefly a translation from the French, being a description of the arms of the knights of the round table; the rest is a panegyric in verse by Robinson himself in praise of archery. It appears from the dedication that King Henry VIII. confirmed by charter to the citizens of London, the 'famous order of knightes of prince Arthur's round table or society: like as in his life time when he sawe a good archer in deede, he chose him and ordained such a one for a knight of the same order.' . . . Whatever part Sir Dagonet took in this show would doubtless be borrowed from Mallory's romance of the Mort Arture, which had been compiled in the reign of Henry VII. What there occurs relating to Sir Dagonet was extracted from the excellent and ancient story of Tristan de Leonnois, in which Dagonet is represented as the fool of king Arthur. He is sometimes dressed up in armour and set on to attack the knights of Cornwall, who are uniformly described as cowards. It once happened that a certain knight, who for a particular reason had been called Sir Cotte mal taillée by Sir Kay, king Arthur's seneschal, was, at the instance of Sir Kay, attacked by poor Dagonet; but the latter was very soon made to repent of his rashness and thrown over his horse's crupper. On another occasion Tristan himself, in the disguise of a fool, handles Sir Dagonet very roughly; but he, regardless of these tricks of fortune, is afterwards persuaded to attack Mark the king of Cornwall, who is in reality a coward of the first magnitude. Mark, supposing him to be Lancelot of the lake, runs away, and is pursued by the other; but the persons who had set on Sir Dagonet, becoming apprehensive for the consequences, follow them, as 'they would not,' says the romance, 'for no good, that Sir Dagonet were hurt; for king Arthur loved him passing well, and made him knight with his owne hands.' King Mark at length meets with another knight, who, perceiving his cowardice, attacks Dagonet and tumbles him from his horse. In the romance of Sir Perceval li Gallois, Kay, the seneschal of Arthur, being offended with Dagonet for insinuating that he was not the most refuge of knights, kicks him into the fire. So much for the hero personated by Master Justice Shallow" (Douce).

dare, a defiance, a challenge: Scotus Pompeius Hath given the dare to Cesar, vii. 504.

dare, to terrify: dare the field, iv. 478; dare us with his cap like larks, v. 539,—on which passage Steevens observes; "It is well known that the hat of a cardinal is scarlet; and that one of the methods of daring larks was by small mirrors fastened on scarlet cloth, which engaged the attention of these birds while the fowler drew his net over them." ("They set out their faces as Fowlers do their daring glasses, that the Larks that soare highest may stoope soonest." Greene's Neuer too late, First Part, sig. B 3 verso, ed. 1611.)

Darius—The rich-jewell'd coffer of, v. 22: "When Alexander the Great took the city Gaza, the metropolis of Syria, amidst the other spoils and wealth of Darius treasured up there, he found an exceeding rich and beautiful little chest or casket. Having surveyed the singular rarity of it, and asked those about him what they thought fittest to be laid up in it; when they had severally delivered their opinions, he told them, he esteemed nothing so worthy to be preserved in it as Homer's Iliads. Vide Plutarchum in Vita Alexand. Magni" (THEOBALD): "The very words of the text are found in Puttenham's Arte of English Poesie, 1589; 'In what price the noble poems of Homer were holden with Alexander the Great, insomuch as every night they were layd vnder his pillow, and by day were carried in the rich iewell cofer of Darius, lately before vanquished by him in battaile' [p. 12]" (MALONE).

darnel, iv. 500; v. 43; vii. 319: This weed, "darnel (lolium temulentum), annual darnel or ray grass, grows in fields, has a tall stout stem with rough leaves, flowers in July and August," &c. Beisly's Shakspeare's Garden, &c. p. 113: On the second of the passages referred to in this article Steevens has the following note; "'Darnel (says Gerard) hurteth the eyes, and maketh them dim, if it happen either in corne for breade, or drinke.' Hence the old proverb—Lolio victitare, applied to such as were dim-sighted . . . Pucelle means to intimate, that the corn she carried with her, had produced the same effect on the guards of Rouen; otherwise they would have seen through her disguise, and defeated her stratagem."

darraign your battle, v. 259: Johnson explains this, "Range your host, put your host in order." Steevens observes, "The quartos read 'Prepare your battle.'" Nares, in his Gloss., gives "To Darraign." To arrange an army, or set it in order of battle. Of uncertain derivation . . . Often for to fight a battle, and even when between two combatants." ("Dare, Audere . . . Hinc etiam daren, dar-raine, darreigne bataille frequenter occurrunt apud Chaucerum. Nisi putes hæc à causis forensibus ad armorum certamina fuisse translata: ut sint à Normannico desrener, quod idem cùm Dirationare vel Disrationare." Junji Etymol. Angl.: "*Desrener. dash the herald will contrive—Some loathsome, viii. 293: "In the books of heraldry a particular mark of disgrace is mentioned, by which the escutcheons of those persons were anciently distinguished, who 'discourteously used a widow, maid, or wife, against her will,' " &c. (MALONE).

date, a fruit which was formerly used in various kinds of pastry and other dishes, and which frequently gave rise to quibbles, as in the following passages: Your date is better in your pie and your porridge than in your cheek, iii. 211; and then to be baked with no date in the pie, &c. vi. 15.

daub, to disguise: I cannot daub it further, vii. 313; he daub'd his vice, v. 406.

daubery, imposture, gullery, juggling, i. 399.

Davy Gam: see Gam—Davy.

day-bed, a couch, a sofa, iii. 356; v. 411.

day-woman, a dairy-woman, ii. 174.

deal, a part, a portion: My shepherd's pipe can sound no deal ("in no degree, more or less," STEEVENS), viii. 461.

deal in her command, without her power, i. 234: "Shakespeare, I conceive, had here in his thoughts vicarious and delegated authorities. He who 'deals in the command,' or, in other words, executes the office of another, is termed his lieutenant or vicegerent; and is usually authorized and commissioned to act by his superior. Prospero therefore, I think, means to say, that Sycorax could control the moon, and act as her vicegerent, without being commissioned, authorized, or empowered by her so to do" (MALONE): "[We have here] the original and etymological sense of power or pouvoir; potestas, not vis; what we now call authority or legal power" (WALKER): In this passage without her power has been explained "beyond her power,"—quite erroneously, I believe.

dealt on lieutenantry, "fought by proxy, made war by his lieutenants, or on the strength of his lieutenants" (STEEVENS), vii. 554.

dear loss—The, i. 230; Full of dear guiltiness, ii. 233; the clamours of their own dear groans, ii. 234; it is a dear expense, ii. 271; dear perfection, iii. 277; vi. 411; in terms so bloody and so dear, iii. 387; my dear offence, iv. 12; a dear account, iv. 108; thy dear exile, iv. 116; so dear a show of zeal, iv. 285; this dear and deep rebuke, iv. 384; your dear offences, iv. 442; in such dear degree, v. 378; so dear a loss (three times), v. 386; dear petition, vi. 89; this dear sight, vi. 319; O dear account! vi. 407; full of charge Of dear import, vi. 464; In dear employment, vi. 466; dear divorce 'Twixt natural son and sire! vi. 561; our dear peril, vi. 572; some dear cause, vii. 319; their dear loss, vii. 731; many dearer ("of greater value," JOHNSON) in this bloody fray, iv. 286; dearest spirits, ii. 175; dearest groans, iii. 271; dearest enemy, iv. 256; dearest speed, iv. 288; dearest need, v. 442; dearest foe, vii. 113; dearest action, vii. 386; dearest spite, viii. 367: "Tooke has so admirably accounted for the application of the epithet dear by our ancient writers to any object which excites a sensation of hurt, pain, and consequently of anxiety, solicitude, care, earnestness, that I shall extract it as the best comment upon the apparently opposite uses of the word in our great poet; 'Deareth is the third person singular of the English (from the Anglo-Saxon verb Derian, nocere, lædere), to dere. It means some or any season, weather, or other cause, which dereth, i. e. maketh dear, hurteth, or doth mischief.—The English verb to dere was formerly in common use.' He then produces about twenty examples, the last from Hamlet [act i. sc. 2],

'Would I had met my dearest foe in heaven Ere [Or ever] I had seen that day.'

Tooke continues; 'Johnson and Malone, who trusted to their Latin to explain his (Shakespeare's) English, for deer and *deere*st would have us read dire and *dire*st; not knowing that Dere and Deriend mean hurt and hurting, mischief and mischievous; and that their Latin dirus is from our Anglo-Saxon Dere, which they would expunge.' ΕΠΕΑ ΠΤΕΡΟΕΝΤΑ, vol. ii. p. 409. A most pertinent illustration of Tooke's etymology has occurred to me in a Ms. poem by Richard Rolle the Hermit of Hampole;

'Bot flatering lele and loselry,
Is grete chepe in thair courtes namly,
The most derthe of any, that is Aboute tham there, is sothfastnes. Spec. Vite''

(SINGER): see too Richardson's Dict., where Tooke's explanation of dear is given as the true one: "Throughout Shakespeare and all the poets of his and a much later day, we find this epithet [dearest] applied to that person or thing, which, for or against us, excites the liveliest and strongest interest. It is used variously, indefinitely and metaphorically, to express the warmest feelings of the soul; its nearest, most intimate, home and heartfelt emotions: and here ['my dearest foe,' Hamlet, act i. sc. 2], no doubt, though, as every where else, more directly interpreted, signifying 'veriest, extremest,' must by consequence and figuratively import 'bitterest, deadliest, most mortal.' As extremes are said in a certain sense to approximate, and are in many respects alike or the same, so this word is made in a certain sense to carry with it an union of the fiercest opposites: it is made to signify the extremes of love and hatred. It may be said to be equivalent generally to very; and to import 'the excess, the utmost, the superlative' of that, whatever it may be, to which it is applied. But to suppose, with Tooke (Divers. of Purley ii. 409), that in all cases dear must at that time have meant 'injurious,' as being derived from the Saxon verb 'dere, to hurt, is perfectly absurd. Dr. Johnson's derivation of the word, as used in this place, from the Latin dirus, is doubtless ridiculous enough: but Tooke has not produced a single instance of the use of it, i.e. of the adjective, in the sense upon which he insists; except, as he pretends, from our author," &c. (CALDECOTT): "Horne Tooke (Divers. of Purley, 612, &c.) makes a plausible case in favour of dear being derived from the ancient verb derian, to hurt, to annoy, and of its proper meaning being, therefore, injurious or hateful [hurtful]. His notion seems to be, that from this derian we have dearth, meaning properly that sort of injury which is done by the weather, and that, a usual consequence of dearth being to make the produce of the earth high-priced, the adjective dear has thence taken its common meaning of precious. This is not all distinctly asserted; but what of it may not be explicitly set forth is supposed and implied. It is, however, against an explanation which has been generally accepted, that there is no appearance of connexion between derian and the contemporary word answering to dear in the sense of high-priced, precious, beloved, which is deore, dúre, or d're, and is evidently from the same root, not with derian, but with deóran, or dýran, to hold dear, to love. There is no doubt about the existence of an old English verb dere, meaning to hurt, the unquestionable representative of the original derian: thus in Chaucer (C. T. 1824) Theseus says to Palamon and Arcite, in the Knight's Tale;

'And ye shul bothe anon unto me swere That never mo ye shul my contree dere, Ne maken werre upon me night ne day,
But ben my frendes in alle that ye may.'

But perhaps we may get most easily and naturally at the sense which dear sometimes assumes by supposing that the notion properly involved in it of love, having first become generalized into that of a strong affection of any kind, had thence passed on into that of such an emotion the very reverse of love. We seem to have it in the intermediate sense in such instances as the following;

'Some dear cause
Will in concealment wrap me up a while.' Lea, iv. 3.

'A precious ring; a ring that I must use
In dear employment.' Romeo and Juliet, v. 3.

And even when Hamlet speaks of his 'dearest foe,' or when Celia remarks to Rosalind, in As You like It, i. 3, 'My father hated his [Orlando's] father dearly,' the word need not be understood as implying more than strong or passionate emotion" (CRAIK).

dear'd, endeared, vii. 509. ● dearly—Hated his father, iii. 17; how dearly ever parted ("however excellently endowed," JOHNSON), vi. 55 ; we dearly grieve, vii. 176 : see dear, &c.

Death his court ; and there the antic sits, &c.—Keeps, iv. 146 : "Some part of this fine description might have been suggested from the seventh print in the Imagines Mortis, a celebrated series of wooden cuts which have been improperly attributed to Holbein. It is probable that Shakespeare might have seen some spurious edition of this work ; for the great scarcity of the original in this country in former times is apparent, when Hollar could not procure the use of it for his copy of the Dance of Death" (DOUCE).

death, which laugh'st us here to scorn—Thou antic, v. 64 : Perhaps in this passage, too, the idea was suggested by the work mentioned in the preceding article.

death—That whoso draws a sword, 'tis present, That whoso draws a sword within the precincts of the court is liable to be punished with death, v. 50.

death—Took it, on his, iv. 8 : This is explained by Steevens, "Entertained it as his fixed opinion, when he was dying:" but I believe that here upon his death is merely an asseveration, or sort of oath, as it is in King Henry IV., Part First, act v. sc. 4, where Falstaff says, "I'll take it upon my death, I gave him this wound in the thigh."

dewberries, ii. 290 : "Dew-berries, Baccæ rubi repentis." Coles's Lat. and Engl. Dict. : "Dewberry (Rubus cæsius). This plant grows on the borders of fields and on the banks of hedges and ditches. The fruit is very pleasant to the taste, and consists of a few drupes half enclosed in the calyx and covered with a grey bloom. It generally grows close to the ground, and the fruit is ripe in September." Beisly's Shakspeare's Garden, &c. p. 51.

diablo, the devil,—an exclamation (Span.), vii. 408.

dialogue between the fool and the soldier, iii. 264 : "Some popular production of this kind probably then existed. It is a species of performance of which John Heywood seems to have been the inventor in the reign of Henry VIII." (COLLIER).

Dian's bud o'er Cupid's flower, ii. 306 : "Dian's bud is the bud of the Agnus Castus or Chaste Tree. Cupid's flower is the Viola tricolor or Love-in-idleness [or pansy or heart's-ease]. STEEVENS.

dich, vi. 517: see note 29, vi. 580.

Dickon, a familiar and vulgar alteration of Richard, v. 451.

Dictynna, ii. 193 (three times): "Shakespeare might have found this uncommon title for Diana in the Second Book of Golding's translation of Ovid's Metamorphosis" (STEEVENS): Δικτυνα or Δικτυννα (from δίκτυον, a hunting-net).

Dido and her Aeneas shall want troops, vii. 577: Here Aeneas must be an oversight of the poet for "Sychæus."

die and drab I purchased this caparison—With, "With gaming and whoring I brought myself to this shabby dress" (PERCY), iii. 463.

diet, the regimen prescribed for those suffering from the lues venerea: like one that takes diet, i. 274; unless they kept very good diet, i. 460; The tub-fast and the diet, vi. 552.

diet me—May justly, "May justly constrain me to fast, by depriving me of the dues of a wife" (HEATH), iii. 283.

difference, an heraldic term: let him bear it for a difference (distinction), ii. 76; wear your rue with a difference, vii. 184.

differing multitudes, "unsteady multitudes, who are continually changing their opinions, and condemn to-day what they yesterday applauded" (MASON), vii. 692.

diffidence, distrust, iv. 7; v. 46; diffidences, vii. 261.

diffuse, to disorder: That can my speech diffuse (That can so disorder my speech that it may be as much disguised as my person), vii. 263.

diffused, wild, irregular, extravagant: some diffused song, i. 402; diffus'd attire, iv. 500; diffus'd infection of a man ("I believe diffus'd in this place signifies irregular, uncouth," JOHNSON; "diffus'd infection of a man may mean, 'thou that art as dangerous as a pestilence that infects the air by its diffusion,'" STEEVENS), v. 357. ("He that marketh our follies in being passing humorous for the choise of apparell, shall finde Ouids confused chaos to afford a multitude of defused inuentions." Greene's Farewell to Follie, sig. c 2 verso, ed. 1617).

diggt, Fluellen's Welsh pronunciation of digged, iv. 452.

digression, a deviation from virtue: example my digression by some mighty precedent, ii. 173; my digression is so vile, viii. 293.

dilated articles allow—The scope Of these, "The tenor of these articles, set out at large, authorizes" (CALDECOTT), vii. 109.

dild you—God: see God dild you.

diminutives, very small pieces of money : poor'st diminutives, vii. 575.

dinner's done, we'll forth again—So soon as, vi. 525 : “i. e. to hunting, from which diversion, we find by Flavius's speech, he was just returned. It may be here observed, that in our author's time it was the custom to hunt as well after dinner as before” (REED).

directitude, vi. 211 : see note 190, vi. 266.

disable, to detract from, to disparage, to undervalue : disable all the benefits of your own country, iii. 55 ; disable not thyself, v. 71 ; he disabled my judgment, iii. 73.

disable, to impair : I have disabled mine estate, ii. 348.

disabling, a disparaging, an undervaluing, ii. 371.

disappointed, vii. 124 : see note 40, vii. 220.

disbench'd you, drove you from your seat, vi. 168.

discandy, “to melt away from the state of being candied, like sugar, or any thing of that kind” (Nares's Gloss.), vii. 574 ; discandying, vii. 561. (The second passage is very obscure : according to Nares, ubi supra, “The idea is, that as the stones of the hail melted, or discandied, a person should die for each.”) discharge—In yours and my, “depends on what you and I are to perform” (STEEVENS), i. 200.

disclaims in thee, equivalent to disclaims thee, vii. 279.

disclose, the peeping of young birds through the shell (a technical term) : the hatch and the disclose, vii. 152 : see the next article.

disclose, to hatch : When that her golden couplets are disclos'd, vii. 200 (“Disclose is when the young just peeps through the shell. It is also taken for laying, hatching, or bringing forth young ; as ‘She disclosed three birds.’” R. Holme's Academy of Armory and Blazon (Terms of Art used in Falconry, &c.), B. ii. c. xi. p. 238).

disclose, to open : before their buttons (buds) be disclos'd, vii. 116.

discomfit, discomfiture, v. 196.

discontenting father—Your, Your discontented father, iii. 481 (the active participle for the passive).

discontentents, malcontentents : fickle changelings and poor discontentents, iv. 276 ; The discontentents repair, vii. 509.

discourse—So far exceed all instance, all, iii. 384 ; discourse of reason, vi. 33 ; vii. 112 ; O madness of discourse, vi. 87 ; such large discourse, vii. 178 ; discourse of thought, vii. 449 : “Discourse. The act of the understanding, by which it passes from premises to consequences.” Johnson's Dict. : “It is very difficult to determine the precise meaning which our ancestors gave to discourse; or to distinguish the line which separated it from reason. Perhaps it indicated a more rapid deduction of consequences from premises than was supposed to be effected by reason:—but I speak with hesitation." Gifford's note on Massinger's Works, vol. i. p. 148, ed. 1813 (Gifford, ubi supra, maintains that in the passage of Hamlet, vii. 112, we ought to read "discourse and reason," forgetting the passage of Troilus and Cressida, vi. 33: and, among sundry other passages that might be quoted from various authors, compare "There was no discourse of reason strong enough to diuert him from thinking that he was betrayed." A Tragi-comicall History of our Times, vnder the borrowed names of Lisander and Calista (from the French), p. 34, 1627, folio).

discoveries!—Such preposterous, vi. 81: see note 149, vi. 125.

disdained contempt, disdainful contempt, iv. 220.

disease, uneasiness, trouble: I'll tell thee my disease, v. 34; discusse of the world, vii. 254 (see note 13, vii. 349).

diseas'd perfumes—Their, "Their diseased perfumed mistresses" (MALONE), vi. 556.

disedg'd—Be, Have the edge of appetite taken off, vii. 681.

disgracious, unpleasing, v. 429.

dishabited, dislodged, iv. 18.

dishonesty, in chastity: suspect me in any dishonesty, i. 398; From all dishonesty he can, iii. 444.

dislike, to express dislike of a thing: I never heard any soldier dislike it, i. 448; I did dislike the cut of a certain courtier's beard, iii. 78.

dislike, to displease: Neither, fair saint, if either thee dislike, vi. 411; I'll do't; but it dislikes me, vii. 405.

dislimns, unpaints, obliterates what was before limned, vii. 576.

dismes, tens (properly, tenths), vi. 31.

dismount thy tuck, draw thy rapier, iii. 373.

disnatur'd, devoid of natural affection, vii. 271.

dispark'd my parks, iv. 141: "To dispark is a legal term, and signifies to divest a park, constituted by royal grant or prescription, of its name and character, by destroying the enclosures of such a park, and also the vert (or whatever bears green leaves, whether wood or underwood), and the beasts of chase therein, and laying it open" (MALONE).

dispatch'd, suddenly bereaved: Of life, of crown, of queen, at once dispatch'd, vii. 124.

dispose, disposition: He hath a person, and a smooth dispose, vii. 394.

dispose, disposal: All that is mine I leave at thy dispose, i. 291; Which, with ourselves, shall rest at thy dispose, i. 305; His goods confiscate to the duke's dispose, ii. 5; Needs must you lay your heart at his dispose, iv. 12.

dispose—The stream of his, vi. 40: Here, in Johnson's Dict., dispose is explained "disposition, cast of mind, inclination;" in Nares's Gloss. "arrangement:" qy. "purpose"?

dispos'd—Boyet is, ii. 182: see note 36, ii. 241.

dispos'd with Cæsar, "made terms, settled matters" (STEEVENS), vii. 580.

disposer—My, vi. 45: In note 69, vi. 111, I have explained this, "she who disposes or inclines me to mirth by her pleasant (and rather free) talk;" but perhaps the more proper explanation of disposer is, "she who is disposed or inclined to pleasant (and rather free) talk,—my merry, free-spoken damsel."

disputable, inclined to dispute, disputatious, iii. 28.

dispute, to reason upon: dispute his own estate (state, affairs), iii. 477; Let me dispute with thee of thy estate, vi. 438.

dis-seat, to unseat, to dethrone, vii. 64.

dissemble, to conceal: Dissemble all your griefs and discontents, vi. 295; Dissemble not your hatred ("Do not gloss it over," STEEVENS; "Do not merely conceal and cover over your secret ill-will to each other by a show of love," MALONE), v. 380.

dissemble—Think you my uncle did, Think you my uncle was acting deceitfully, was feigning, v. 385.

dissemble myself in't—I will, I will disguise myself in't, iii. 380.

dissembling nature—Cheated of feature by, v. 351: "The poet by this expression seems to mean no more than that nature had made for Richard features unlike those of other men. To dissemble, both here and in the passage quoted [by Malone] from [the old play of] King John, signifies the reverse of to resemble, in its active sense, and is not used as dissimulare in Latin" (DOUCE): see feature.

dissembly, Dogberry's blunder for assembly, ii. 126.

distain, to sully by contrast, to throw into shade: She did distain my child, viii. 53.

distance, the space between two antagonists (a fencing term): thy reverse, thy distance, i. 373.

distemper—Proceeding on, iv. 439: Here distemper is explained by Johnson "predominance of passion;" while Steevens thinks that it may mean "intoxication" (see before, "It was excess of wine that set him on").

distemperature we see The seasons alter—And through this, ii. 277: Here distemperature is explained by Steevens "perturbation of the elements," by Malone "the perturbed state in which the king and queen had lived for some time past."

distill'd Almost to jelly, vii. 113: see note 16, vii. 215.

distinctly, separately: would I flame distinctly, i. 183.

distractions, detachments: His power went out in such distractions, vii. 550.

distrain, to seize (with no reference to rent or debt): distrain the one, distain the other, v. 452; My father's goods are all distrain'd, iv. 138; Hath here distrain'd the Tower to his use, v. 16: see note 123, v. 476.

distraught, distracted, v. 406; vi. 455.

diverted blood, blood turned out of its natural course, iii. 24.

dividable, divided, distant from each other, vi. 19.

dividant, "divisible" (CAPELL), "different, separate" (Johnson's Dict.), "divided" (WALKER), vii. 550.

divided councils, v. 397: "That is, a private consultation, separate from the known and public council. So, in the next scene, Hastings says, 'Bid him not fear the separated councils'" (JOHNSON): "Mr. Reed has shown from Hall's Chronicle that this circumstance is founded on historical fact. But Holinshed, Hall's copyist, was our author's authority" (MALONE).

division, variations in music: Sung . . . With ravishing division, to her lute, iv. 252; the lark makes sweet division, vi. 443. ("To divide. To make divisions in music, which is, the running a simple strain into a great variety of shorter notes to the same modulation." Nares's Gloss.) do him dead, kill him, v. 249.

do me right, do me justice, ii. 133 (as a challenge to fight); iv. 395 (as a challenge to drink a bumper).

do you justice, "drink as much as you do" (STEEVENS), vii. 406: compare the preceding article.

do withal—I could not, I could not help it, ii. 392. ("I can nat do withall, a thyng lyeth nat in me, or I am nat in faulte that a thyng is done." Palsgrave's Lesclarcissement de la Lang. Fr. 1530, fol. clxxx. verso (Table of Verbes):

"Char. Such was the rigour of your desteny.

Cl. Such was my errour and obstinacie.

Ch. But since Gods would not, could you do withall?"

The Tragedie of Antonie. Doone into English [from the French of Garnier] by the Countesse of Pembroke, 1595, sig. B 8:

"But I intreat them, since it must befall,

They would be patient: who can doe withall?"

Wither's Abuses Stript and Whipt,—Sorrow, sig. x, ed. 1613:

"Why, if you do not vnderstand (said Sancho), I cannot do withall." Shelton's transl. of Don Quixote, Part Second, p. 40, ed. 1620 :

The following passage of Mabbe's translation of Aleman's Guzman de Alfarache has just been pointed out to me by Mr. Bolton Corney ; "I pray bee not angry that I came no sooner, I was very busie, I could not doe withall, I came as soone as I could." Part First, p. 18, ed. 1623.)

doff, to do off, to put off, iii. 145 ; iv. 32, 274 ; vi. 90, 411 ; vii. 59.

dog—As dank here as a, iv. 224 : see note 34, iv. 293.

dog-apes, dog-faced baboons, iii. 28.

dogs of war—The, vi. 654 : Mean, it would certainly seem, "Famine, Sword, and Fire : " compare, in King Henry V. Chorus to act i.

"at his heels,
Leash'd-in like hounds, should famine, sword, and fire, Crouch for employment :"

and, in the First Part of King Henry VI. act iv. sc. 2,

"You tempt the fury of my three attendants, Lean famine, quartering steel, and climbing fire."

dole, dolour, grief : dreadful dole, ii. 319 ; pitiful dole, iii. 12 ; delight and dole, vii. 108 ; dole and woe, viii. 35 ; Our dole, viii. 136.

dole, a dealing, an allotment, distribution : dole of honour, iii. 234 ; dole of blows, iv. 319 : and see Happy man be his dole.

dolour and dollar, quibbled on : Dolour comes to him, indeed, i. 193 ; To three thousand dolours a year, i. 448 ; as many dolours for thy daughters, vii. 285.

dolphin or dog-fish, v. 20 : "It should be remembered, that, in Shakespeare's time, the word dauphin was always written dolphin" (STEEVENS).

don, to do on, to put on, vi. 228 ; donn'd, vii. 181, 514.

done, destroyed, consumed : they meet where both their lives are done, v. 58 ; The life thou gav'st me first was lost and done, v. 62 ; wasted, thaw'd, and done, viii. 264 ; as soon decay'd and done, viii. 288 ; spent and done, viii. 439.

done to death, put to death, killed, ii. 140 ; v. 254.

dotant, a dotard, vi. 223.

double, deceitful (with a quibble) : Swear by your double self, ii. 414.

double-fatal yew—Bows Of, iv. 145 : "Called double-fatal, because the leaves of the yew are poison, and the wood is employed for instruments of death" (WARBURTON).

double man—I am not a, "I am not Falstaff and Percy together, though having Percy on my back, I seem double" (JOHNSON), iv. 287.

double vouchers, his recoveries—His, vii. 195: "A recovery with double voucher is the one usually suffered, and is so denominated from two persons (the latter of whom is always the common cryer, or some such inferior person) being successively voucher, or called upon, to warrant the tenant's title. Both finés and recoveries are fictions of law, used to convert an estate tail into a fee-simple" (RITSON).

doubt, fear: and depos'd 'Tis doubt he will be, iv. 155.

doubt, to fear: That love the fundamental part of state More than you doubt the change on't, vi. 184: "The meaning is, 'You whose zeal predominates over your terrors; you who do not so much fear the danger of violent measures, as wish the good to which they are necessary, the preservation of the original constitution of our government'" (JOHNSON).

dout, to do out, to put out, to extinguish: dout them with superfluous courage, iv. 478; this folly douts it, vii. 192.

Dowland, viii. 457: John Dowland, the famous lutenist, was born in 1562. Being of a rambling disposition, he lived much abroad, and so, it seems, lost many opportunities of advancing his fortunes. He was, for a time, lutenist to the King of Denmark, who had begged him of King James. It appears that he died, in England, in 1615. See Hawkins's Hist. of Music, vol. iii. pp. 323-6, where will be found an account of his publications.

("For, as an old, rude, rotten, tune-lesse Kit,
If famous Dowland daign to finger it, Makes sweeter Musick then the choicest Lute
In the grosse handling of a clownish Brute," &c.
Sylvester's Du Bartas,—The Imposture, p. 91, ed. 1641.)

dowle that's in my plume—One, i. 216: That here dowle means "feather" or "particle of down in a feather," is surely plain enough; and the word occurs in early writers applied to other similar substances: but Horne Tooke maintains, against the commentators on Shakespeare, that dowle (or doule, dole, deal, dell) means merely a part, piece, or portion; and such perhaps may have been the original meaning of the word. (I find the rare verb bedowl in An Eclogue by Davies, appended to Browne's Shepherds Pipe;

"What though time yet hannot bedowl'd thy chin?" Sig. m 2, ed. 1620.)

down-gyved, "hanging down like the loose cincture which confines the fetters round the ancles" (STEEVENS), vii. 130.

drabbing, following loose women, vii. 128.

draff, the refuse of any sort of food, (in the north of England and in Scotland) brewers' grains, i. 397; iv. 268.

draught, a jakes: Sweet draught, vi. 82; drown them in a draught, vi. 568.

draw, to draw open, to undraw; draw the curtain straight, ii. 374; draws a curtain, iv. 265.

draw, as we do the minstrels—I will bid thee, ii. 132: According to Malone, the allusion is to the minstrels drawing the bows of their fiddles; according to Mr. Collier, to their drawing their instruments out of the cases.

draw thy action, withdraw thy action, iv. 333.

drawn, having one's sword drawn: Why are you drawn? i. 201; if he be not drawn! iv. 435; art thou drawn among these heartless hinds? vi. 390 (whether who having drawn to do it, viii. 67, means "who having drawn his sword to do it," or "whom she having persuaded to do it," has been disputed: I think, the former).

drawn fox—No more truth in thee than in a, iv. 261: An allusion to the subtlety of the fox, which when drawn, i. e. traced out by the scent and driven from cover, hunted, was supposed to have recourse to all sorts of artifices in order to escape from his pursuers.

drawn of heaviness—The purse too light being, vii. 720: "Drawn is embowelled, exenterated. So in common language a fowl is said to be drawn when its intestines are taken out" (STEEVENS).

draws dry-foot: see counter, and yet, &c.

dreadfully, with dread: apprehends death no more dreadfully but as a drunken sleep, i. 497.

dress, to prepare, to make ready: dress us fairly for our end, iv. 469: being drest to some oration, vi. 21.

dribbling dart of love—The, i. 452: "A dribber, in archery, was a term of contempt which perhaps cannot be satisfactorily explained. Ascham, in his Toxophilus, edit. 1589, p. 32, observes; '—if he give it over, and not use to shoote truly, &c. he shall become of a fayre archer a starke squirter and dribber'" (STEEVENS): according to Mr. Collier, "dribbed is the contrary of point-blank."

drink the air, i. 229: "An expression of swiftness, of the same kind as 'to devour the way' in King Henry IV." (JOHNSON).

drink the free air—Through him, "catch his breath in affected fondness" (JOHNSON), "breathe freely at his will only" (WAKEFIELD), vi. 509.

drollery, a puppet-show: A living drollery (a puppet-show represented by living persons), i. 215.

drollery, a picture or sketch of some scene of low humour: a pretty slight drollery, iv. 333.

drugs, drudges: the passive drugs of it, vi. 557: see note 166, vi. 599.

drum so lost!—A, iii. 253 : "We shall not fully understand Parolles' simulated distress at the loss of the drum, without we remember that the drums of the regiments of his day were decorated with the colours of the battalion. It was therefore equivalent to the loss of the flag of the regiment,—a disgrace all good soldiers deeply feel" (FAIRHOLT).

drum before the English tragedians—The, iii. 268 : By which they used to give notice of their arrival in any town where they intended to perform.

Drum's entertainment—John, iii. 253 ; Good Tom Drum, iii. 285 : "Tom or John Drum's entertainment. A kind of proverbial expression for ill-treatment, probably alluding originally to some particular anecdote. Most of the allusions seem to point to the dismissing of some unwelcome guest, with more or less of ignominy and insult." Nares's Gloss. (A once-popular play, entitled Jack Drum's Entertainment, &c. was first printed in 1601.)

drumble, to be slow and sluggish, to go lazily or awkwardly about a thing, i. 384.

dry he was for sway—So, So thirsty he was for sway, i. 180.

dry, sir—It's, iii. 332 : "Maria intends to insinuate, that it is not a lover's hand, a moist hand being vulgarly accounted a sign of an amorous constitution" (JOHNSON) : see buttery-bar, &c.

dub me knight, iv. 395 : This refers to the custom of persons drinking, on their knees, a large draught of wine or other liquor, in consequence of which they were said to be dubbed knights, and retained the title for the evening.

duckdame, iii. 29 (four times) : The attempts made to explain this "burden" are, I think, alike unsatisfactory.

dudgeon gouts of blood—On thy blade and, vii. 22 : Here dudgeon means simply "haft or handle:" Gifford, speaking of the variety in the hafts of daggers, observes ; "The homeliest was that à roëlles, a plain piece of wood with an orbicular rim of iron for a guard : the next, in degree, was the dudgeon, in which the wood was googed out in crooked channels, like what is now, and perhaps was then, called snail-creeping." Note on Jonson's Works, vol. v. p. 221 : In the same note dudgeon is explained "wooden ;" and (not to quote writers who are less explicit on this point) Bishop Wilkins in the Alphabetical Dictionary appended to his Essay towards a Real Character, &c. 1668, gives "Dudgeon.

[Indignation]

[Root of Box.]

—dagger, [Short Sword whose handle is of the root of Box] :

Richardson, however, denies that dudgeon means either "wooden"

or "root of box," though "the word may be applied as an epithet to the box or any other wood, to express some particular quality," &c. Dict. in v.

due, to endure: That I, thy enemy, due thee withal, v. 57.

dug, &c.—Never palates more the, vii. 586: see note 204, vii. 626.

duke, a leader, a general, a commander (Lat. dux): the duke's (king's) own person, ii. 168; to study three years with the duke (king), ii. 171; the duke's (king's) pleasure, ii. 174; this virtuous duke (king), ii. 176; Theseus, our renowned duke, ii. 265; gracious duke, ii. 266 (twice); before the duke, ii. 272, 286, 310; make the duke say, ii. 273; At the duke's oak, ii. 274; The duke was here, ii. 310; the duke is coming, ii. 311; an the duke had not given him sizpence, ibid.; the duke hath din'd, ibid.; Be merciful, great duke. . . great duke, iv. 451; Gonzago is the duke's name, vii. 159 (But we learn from the quarto of Hamlet, 1603, that in this scene of the play within a play, the two principal characters were originally called Duke and Duchess; and there can be little doubt that when their titles were altered to King and Queen, the word duke's in the present passage was left unaltered by an oversight).

duke de Jarmany—A, i. 405: Mr. Knight was the first to start the idea that here we have an allusion to a real German duke who, with his suite, visited Windsor in 1592,—viz. the Duke of Würtemberg, of whose journey an account, written by his secretary, was printed at Tübingen in 1602. "He was honored," writes Mr. Halliwell, "with the use of one of the Queen's coaches, attended by a page of honor, and 'travelled from London in this coach, and several post-horses [sic], towards the royal residence.' On such an occasion the post-horses would have to be furnished by the various inn-keepers, free of expense;—'cozenage! mere cozenage,' as Master Bardolph says. The scene is, in all probability, an exaggerated satire on the visit of the Duke to Windsor; an allusion that would have been well understood by the Court within a year or two after its occurrence," &c.: Mr. Staunton very well observes, "If any allusion to a visitor received by the Court with so much distinction were intended, an offensive one would hardly have been ventured during the life-time of the Queen:" but, as there is no end to conjecture, he subsequently remarks that probably an allusion was covertly intended to some other visit of the same nobleman, who was in England in 1610, "and it is not unreasonable to suppose he might have visited us more than twice in the long interval of eighteen years."

dull and favourable hand—Some, iv. 380: Here "dull signifies melancholy, gentle, soothing" (JOHNSON): "I believe it rather means producing dullness, or heaviness, and consequently sleep" (MALONE): "Dull here appears to signify quiet, soft" (STAUNTON).

dumb'd by him—Was beastly, vii. 512 : see note 37, vii. 603.

dump, "Formerly the received term for a melancholy strain in music, vocal or instrumental. . . . A dump appears to have been also a kind of dance." Nares's Gloss. : On the first of the following passages Mr. Chappell remarks ; "A dump was a slow dance. Queen Mary's Dump is one of the tunes in William Ballet's Lute Book, and My Lady Carey's Dompe is printed in Stafford Smith's Musica Antiqua, ii. 470, from a manuscript in the British Museum, temp. Henry VIII." Popular Music of the Olden Time, &c. vol. i. p. 210, sec. ed. : Tune a deploring dump, i. 303 ; play me some merry dump, vi. 460 ; dumps so dull and heavy, ii. 98 ; Distress likes dumps, viii. 319.

dumps, (generally in the plural when signifying) low spirits, melancholy : in your dumps, iii. 136 ; to step out of these dreary dumps, vi. 294 ; doleful dumps the mind oppress, vi. 460. ("Morne. Sad, heavie . . . in a melancholie mood, all in dumps." Cotgrave's Fr. and Engl. Dict.) dun's the mouse, the constable's own word, vi. 402 : Of this proverbial saying, which is far from uncommon in our early writers, no satisfactory explanation has yet been given : it would seem, as Nares observes, to have been "frequently employed with no other intent than that of quibbling on the word done." Gloss. : Ray, among his "Proverbial Similies," has "As dun as a mouse." Proverbs, p. 221, ed. 1768.

dun, we'll draw thee from the mire—If thou art, vi. 402 : An allusion to a Christmas sport, called Dun is in the mire? which Gifford describes as follows : "A log of wood is brought into the midst of the room : this is Dun (the cart-horse), and a cry is raised that he is stuck in the mire. Two of the company advance, either with or without ropes, to draw him out. After repeated attempts, they find themselves unable to do it, and call for more assistance. The game continues till all the company take part in it, when Dun is extricated of course ; and the merriment arises from the awkward and affected efforts of the rustics to lift the log, and from sundry arch contrivances to let the ends of it fall on one another's toes." Note on Jonson's Works, vol. vii. p. 283.

dup, to do up, to open : dupp'd the chamber-door, vii. 181. (In Harman's Caueat or Warening for Common Cursetors, &c. 1573, among the cant terms is "To dup y' gyger," which is explained "to open the dore." p. 66, reprint 1814.)

durance—Suits of, ii. 36 ; And is not a buff jerkin a most sweet robe of durance? iv. 211 : Malone observes that on a comparison of the second of these passages with the passage,—

"A devil in an everlasting garment hath him ;
. . . . a fellow all in buff,"—ii. 34,

"it should seem that the sergeant's buff jerkin was called a robe of durance with allusion to his occupation of arresting men and putting them in durance or prison; and that durance being a kind of stuff sometimes called everlasting, the buff jerkin was hence called an 'everlasting garment':" According to Nares, "It appears that the leathern dresses worn by some of the lower orders of people [by sergeants and catchpoles among others] were first called of durance or everlasting from their great durability. . . . Hence a stuff of the colour of buff, made in imitation of it, and very strong, was called durance." Gloss. in Durance: The sort of stuff known by the name of durance continued long in use: On the second passage in this article Mr. Staunton remarks that a "robe of durance was a cant term, implying imprisonment; and the Prince, after dilating on purse-stealing, humorously calls attention to its probable consequences by his query about the buff jerkin. See Middleton's 'Blurt, Master Constable,' act iii. sc. 2;*

'Tell my lady, that I go in a suit of durance.'

dusty death, vii. 67: When, in my Few Notes, &c. 1853, p. 133, I observed that this very striking expression—which Shakespeare's commentators evidently supposed was found for the first time in Macbeth—occurs in a poem published more than a dozen years before the appearance of that tragedy,

"Time and thy graue did first salute thy nature, Euen in her infancie and cradle-rightes, Inuiting it to dustie deaths defeature," &c.

A Fig for Fortune, 1596, by Anthony Copley, p. 57 [49],

I was not aware that Mr. Collier had already made the same quotation in the first edition of his Shakespeare.

easy ?—Was this, iv. 391 : "That is, was this not grievous?" (JOHNSON) : "May mean—was this a slight offence?" (STEEVENS).

eche, to eke out, to lengthen out, viii. 34.

ecstasy, alienation of mind, i. 217 ; ii. 39, 100 ; vi. 326 ; vii. 36, 58, 152, 169 ; 171 (twice), 438 ; viii. 269, 441 ; ecstasies, vi. 335. ("Ecstasy. . . . In the usage of Shakespeare and some others, it stands for every species of alienation of mind, whether temporary or permanent, proceeding from joy, sorrow, wonder, or any other exciting cause : and this certainly suits with the etymology, ἐκστασις." Nares's Gloss.)

Edward shovel-boards, the broad shillings of Edward VI., used for playing at the game of shovel-board, i. 348 : and see shove-groat shilling : "At shuffle-board the shilling is placed on the extreme edge of the table, and propelled towards the mark by a smart stroke with the palm of the hand." Gifford's note on Jonson's Works, vol. i. p. 86.

eels—Thunder shall not so awake the beds of, viii. 52 : "Thunder is not supposed to have an effect on fish in general, but on eels only, which are roused by it from the mud, and are therefore more easily taken. So, in Marston's Satires ;

'They are nought but eeles, that never will appeare Till that tempestuous winds or thunder teare Their slimy beds.' L. ii. Sat. vii. p. 204 [ed. 1764]."

egma, Costard's blunder for enigma, ii. 184.

Egypt—The first-born of, "A proverbial expression for high-born persons" (JOHNSON), iii. 29.

Egyptian thief at point of death—Like to th', iii. 388: "In this simile a particular story is presupposed; which ought to be known to show the justness and propriety of the comparison. It is taken from Heliodorus's Æthiopics, to which our author was indebted for the allusion. This Egyptian thief was Thyamis, who was a native of Memphis, and at the head of a band of robbers. Theagenes and Chariclea falling into their hands, Thyamis fell desperately in love with the lady, and would have married her. Soon after, a stronger body of robbers coming down upon Thyamis's party, he was in such fears for his mistress that he had her shut into a cave with his treasure. It was customary with those barbarians, when they despaired of their own safety, first to make away with those whom they held dear, and desired for companions in the next life. Thyamis, therefore, benetted round with his enemies, raging with love, jealousy, and anger, went to his cave; and calling aloud in the Egyptian tongue, so soon as he heard himself answered towards the cave's mouth by a Grecian, making to the person by the direction of her voice, he caught her by the hair with his left hand, and (supposing her to be Chariclea) with his right hand plunged his sword into her breast" (THEOBALD): "There was a translation of Heliodorus by Thomas Underdowne, of which the second edition appeared in 1587" (MALONE).

eight and six—Written in, Written in lines alternately of eight and six syllables (in fourteen-syllable measure), ii. 287.

eisel, vinegar, vii. 199 (see note 145, vii. 239); viii. 404,—on which passage Malone observes that "vinegar was esteemed very efficacious in preventing the communication of the plague and other contagious distempers." eke, also, i. 355, 374; ii. 288.

eld, old age, i. 402, 477; vi. 33.

elder, grief, untwine His perishing root with the increasing vine!—Let the stinking, "Let grief, the elder, cease to entwine its root with patience, the vine" (Nares's Gloss. sub "Elder"), vii. 696.

element, initiation, rudimentary knowledge: no element In such a business, v. 485.

element, the heaven, the sky: The element itself, iii. 328; I might say element, iii. 361; the cinders of the element, iv. 374; the complexion of the element, vi. 629.

elements P—Does not our life consist of the four, iii. 345; the elements So mix'd in him, vi. 687; my other elements I give to baser life, vii. 595: "Man was supposed to be composed of the four elements, the due proportion and commixture of which, in his composition, was what produced in him every kind of perfection, mental and bodily." Nares's Gloss. sub "Elementa."

elements be kind to thee—The, vii. 539: "Seems to mean, 'May the different elements of the body, or principles of life, maintain such proportion and harmony as may keep you cheerful'" (JOHNSON): "'The elements be kind to thee' (i.e. the elements of air and water). Surely this expression means no more than 'I wish you a good voyage': Octavia was going to sail with Antony from Rome to Athens" (HOLT WHITE).

elephants [betray'd] with holes, vi. 636: "Elephants were seduced into pitfalls, lightly covered with hurdles and turf, on which a proper bait to tempt them was exposed. See Pliny's Natural History, B. viii." (STEEVENS.)

elf, to entangle, to mat together, as if the work of elves or fairies (see the next article): elf all my hair in knots, vii. 283.

elf-locks in foul sluttish hairs—Bakes the, vi. 403: Locks so clotted together were supposed to be the operation of fairies; a superstition which, as Warburton suggests, may have had its rise from the disease called Plica Polonica.

elves of hills, brooks, standing lakes, and groves—Ye, i. 227: In this speech Shakespeare had an eye to that of Medea in Golding's translation of Ovid's Metamorphoses, Book vii.;

"Ye ayres and windes, ye elues of hilles, of brookes, of woods alone, Of standing lakes, and of the night, approche ye everychone.
Through helpe of whom (the crooked bankes much wondring at the thing)
I haue compelled streames to run cleane backward to their spring:
By charmes I make the calme seas rough, and make the rough seas playne,
And couer all the skie with clouds, and chase them thence againe:
By charmes I raise and lay the windes, and burst the vipers iaw,
And from the bowels of the earth both stones and trees do draw.
Whole woods and forrests I remooue, I make the mountaines shake,
And euen the earth itselfe to grone and fearefully to quake.
I call vp dead men from their graues, and thee, O lightesome moone,
I darken oft, through [though] beaten brasse abate thy perill soone.
Our sorcerie dimmes the morning faire, and darkes the sun at noone.
The flaming breath of fierie bulles ye quenched for my sake,
And caused their vnwiely neckes the bended yoke to take.
Among the earth-bred brothers you a mortall warre did set,
And brought asleepe the dragon fell, whose eyes were neuer shet."

Fol. 81, ed. 1608.

To the preceding quotation in the Var. Shakespeare Boswell appends the remark, "It would be an injustice to our great poet, if the reader were not to take notice that Ovid has not supplied him with anything resembling the exquisite fairy imagery with which he has enriched this speech."

elvish-mark'd, marked by the elves or fairies, v. 369.

emballing, the carrying the ball at a coronation, v. 515.

embarquements, embargoes, impediments ("Embarquement . . . an imbarquing," Ootgrave's Fr. and Engl. Dict.), vi. 158.

embassade, an embassy, v. 294.

embossed, a hunting term, properly applied to a deer when foaming at the mouth from fatigue: the poor cur is emboss'd, iii. 106; the boar of Thessaly Was never so emboss'd (foaming from rage), vii. 575; we have almost embossed him (made him foam at the mouth, hunted him to his fall), iii. 254.

embossed, swollen, protuberant: emboss'd sores, iii. 32; embossed rascal, iv. 262; emboss'd froth, vi. 572; emboss'd carbuncle, vii. 290.

embowel, to draw out the bowels, to eviscerate: if thou embowel [=embalm] me to-day, iv. 286; the schools, embowell'd of their doctrine ("exhausted of their skill," STEEVENS), iii. 221; Embowell'd [=Embalmed] will I see thee by and by, iv. 286; In your embowell'd bosoms, v. 441.

embrasures, embraces, vi. 68.

embrewed, drenched in blood, vi. 308.

Emmanuel, v. 171: Formerly prefixed (from feelings of piety, it would seem) to letters and deeds: "We can refer to one Ms. alone in the British Museum (Add. Mss. 19,400) which contains no less than fourteen private epistles headed 'Emanewell' or 'Jesus Im-manuel'" (STAUNTON).

emmew—Follies doth, Doth mew up follies (a term in falconry: see mew),—"Forces follies to lie in cover, without daring to show themselves" (JOHNSON), i. 479.

empale, to encircle (the same as impale), vi. 97.

empierial, the Clown's blunder for emperor, vi. 334.

emperor coming in behalf of France—The, iv. 496: "The emperor Sigismond, who was married to Henry's second cousin" (MALONE).

emperry, a kingdom: fasten'd to an emperry, vii. 654.

empiricutic, empirical, quackish, vi. 162.

emulation, malicious rivalry or contention: worthless emulation, v. 59; emulation now, who shall be nearest, v. 389; pale and bloodless emulation, vi. 20; Whilst emulation in the army crept, vi. 36; A gory emulation, vi. 75; Out of the teeth of emulation, vi. 644; Such factious emulations, v. 53.

emulous, maliciously rival or contending: emulous factions, vi. 38; He is not emulous, vi. 42; Made emulous missions 'mongst the gods themselves, And drave great Mars to faction ("Mission means the descent of deities to combat on either side; an idea which Shakspeare very probably adopted from Chapman's translation of Homer. In the Fifth Book Diomed wounds Mars, who on his return to heaven is rated by Jupiter for having interfered in the battle. This disobedience is the faction which, I suppose, Ulysses would describe." STEEVENS), vi. 58.

enactures, actions, effects, vii. 158.

enchantingly beloved, beloved to a degree that looks like the consequence of enchantment, iii. 9.

encounter so uncurrent I have strain'd, t' appear thus—With what, iii. 451: This would seem to mean "With what unwarrantable familiarity of intercourse I have so far exceeded bounds, or gone astray, that I should be forced to appear thus in a public court as a criminal."

encounters mounted are, ii. 213: see note 142, ii. 254.

end all his—Which he did, vi. 234: see note 256, vi. 276.

endear'd to it than now—When you were more, iv. 339: Here endear'd is equivalent to "engag'd, bound." (The word is used much in the same sense by Day;

"You did indeare him to society Of careless wantons," &c. Law-Trickes, &c., 1608, sig. H 2.)

enemy, the Devil: O cunning enemy, that, to catch a saint, &c. i. 469.

enfeoff'd, granted out as a feoff or estate, gave up, iv. 255.

enforce, to press, to urge strongly: enforce them against him, i. 514; enforce his pride, vi. 177; Enforce the present execution, vi. 195; nor his offences enforced, vi. 656.

enforce with, to press with a charge: Enforce him with his envy to the people, vi. 195.

engag'd in Wales—To be, iv. 272; Westmoreland, that was engag'd, did bear it, iv. 279: see note 124, iv. 304.

engine, an instrument of torture, the rack: like an engine, wrench'd my frame of nature, vii. 270.

engine, a military implement, an engine of war: Sword, pike, knife, gun, or need of any engine, i. 197; he moves like an engine, vi. 231; his eye is like an engine bent, viii. 203.

engineer, an engineer, vi. 36; vii. 172.

engines for my life—Devise, vii. 450: "Seems to mean, contrive racks, tortures, &c." (RITSON): Does it not rather signify "Contrivartful means to destroy my life"? ("An Engine [device], Artificium, Ingenium." Coles's Lat. and Engl. Dict.) engines with advice—And she shall file our, vi. 300: "i.e. remove all impediments from our designs by advice. The allusion is to the operation of the file, which, by conferring smoothness, facilitates the motion of the wheels which compose an engine or piece of machinery" (STEEVENS): "Here file our engines is equivalent to 'sharpen our wits'" (BOLTON CORNEY): The latter explanation is, I believe, the true one,—engine being formerly common enough in the sense of "genius, wit, contrivance" ("Very homely poets, such also as made most of their workes by translation out of the Latine and French tounge, and few or none of their owne engine, as may easely be knowne to them that list to looke vpon the poemes of both languages." Puttenham's Arte of English Poesie, 1589, p. 68).

engross, to make gross, to fatten: engross his idle body, iv. 411.

engross, to gather together, to heap up, to amass: Percy is but my factor . . . I engross up glorious deeds on my behalf, iv. 257; they have engrossed and pil'd up The canker'd heaps, &c. iv. 382.

engrossments, accumulations, iv. 382.

enkindle, to incite, to stimulate: enkindle you unto the crown, vii. 11.

ensconce, to protect or cover as with a sconce or fort: ensconce your rags . . . under the shelter of your honour, i. 366; I must get a sconce for my head, and ensconce it too, ii. 16; Against that time do I ensconce me here, viii. 373; ensconcing ourselves into (=in) seeming knowledge, iii. 230.

ensconce, to hide: I will ensconce me behind the arras, i. 383; And therein so ensconcd his secret evil, viii. 330.

enseamed, greasy, filthy, vii. 169: see seam.

ensear, or ensere, to dry up, to make sterile (according to Johnson, in his Dict., "to cauterise, to stanch or stop with fire"), vi. 555.

enshield, enshielded, i. 473: see note 72, i. 531.

ensign here of mine was turning back—This, vi. 680: "Here the term ensign may almost be said to be used with the double meaning of both the standard and the standard-bearer" (CRAIK): compare ancient.

entame, to tame, to subjugate, iii. 52.

entertain, entertainment: your entertain shall be, viii. 9; to make his entertain more sweet, viii. 28.

entertain, to receive into service: entertain him to be my fellow-servant, i. 283; entertain him for your servant, ibid.; for this I entertain thee, i. 312; I will entertain Bardolph, i. 353; As many devils entertain ("Do you retain in your service as many devils as she has angels," MALONE), i. 354; I will entertain them, vi. 686; So please you entertain me, vii. 706; I have entertained thee, i. 312.

entertainment, the state of being in military pay: 'the adversary's entertainment, iii. 257; already in the entertainment, vi. 204; strain his entertainment ("press hard his re-admission to his pay and office," JOHNSON), vii. 423.

entitled in thy parts do crown'd sit, viii. 367: "Entitled means, I think, ennobled" (MALONE): Perhaps.

entrails were hairs—He bounds from the earth, as if his, iv. 464: "Alluding to the bounding of tennis-balls, which were stuffed with hair, as appears from Much Ado about Nothing, 'And the old ornament of his cheek hath already stuffed tennis-balls'" (WARBURTON).

entrance of this soil, &c.—The thirsty, iv. 207: "The thirsty entrance of the soil is nothing more or less than the face of the earth parched and cracked as it always appears in a dry summer; and Mr. Steevens came nearer the mark than he was aware of when he mentioned the porous surface of the ground. As to its being personified, it is certainly no such unusual practice with Shakspeare. Every one talks familiarly of Mother Earth; and they who live upon her face may without much impropriety be called her children. Our author only confines the image to his own country. The allusion is to the Barons' Wars" (RITSON).

entreat, to treat: Entreat her not the worse, v. 141; Entreat her fair, vi. 70; fairly let her be entreated, iv. 141.

entreat, to entertain: severally entreat him, vi. 79.

enviously, maliciously, pettishly, vii. 179.

envy, malice, hatred, ill-will: Out of his envy's reach, ii. 395; thy sharp envy, ii. 398; Either envy, therefore, or misprision, iv. 216; envy breeds unkind division, v. 55; Exempt from envy, v. 284; no black envy, v. 507; what envy reach you, v. 512; Envy and base opinion, v. 526; You turn the good we offer into envy, v. 528; what envy can say worst, vi. 50; his envy to the people, vi. 195; The cruelty and envy of the people, vi. 208; and envy afterwards, vi. 635; Addition of his envy, vii. 591; Cleón's wife, with envy rare, viii. 45; There is but envy in that light, viii. 202.

envy, to bear malice, hatred, or ill-will to: Not Afric owns a serpent

I abhor More than thy fame, I envy, vi. 154; Rather than envy ("import ill-will to," MALONE) you, vi. 197.

enwheel, to encompass, to encircle, vii. 607.

Ephesian, a cant term, which seems to have been equivalent to "toper, jolly companion:" thine Ephesian, i. 404; Ephesians, my lord,—of the old church (of the old sort), iv. 337.

epileptic visage, vii. 280: Johnson's explanation is, "the frightened countenance of a man ready to fall in a fit:" but the context shows that it means "visage distorted by grinning." *

equal, to match with: If this foul deed were by to equal it, v. 315.

equal, just, impartial: The gods have been most equal, viii. 210.

equivocator who committed treason enough for God's sake—
An, vii. 25: "Meaning a Jesuit; an order so troublesome to the state in Queen Elizabeth's and King James the First's time. The inventors of the execrable doctrine of equivocation" (WARBURTON): "This allusion to the times is certainly unlike Shakespeare. It strengthens Coleridge's hypothesis of the spuriousness of part of this soliloquy" (WALKER).

Ercles, Hercules, ii. 272 (twice).

erring, wandering: erring pilgrimage, iii. 39; erring spirit, vii. 107; erring barbarian, vii. 393.

escape, an act of lewdness: Rome will despise her for this foul escape, vi. 330: compare second scape.

escapen, escape, viii. 20.

escoted, paid ("Escot. A shot . . . Escotter. Every one to pay his shot," &c. Cotgrave's Fr. and Engl. Dict.), vii. 140.

esperance, hope, iv. 231, 280; vi. 87; vii. 312: In the first and second of the passages above referred to, esperance (as French) is the motto of the Percy family (So, in the concluding stanza of the Legend of Henry Percy Earl of Northumberland, Hotspur's father, in A Mirrour for Magistrates, &c. the Earl mentions "esperance my word" (i. e. my motto), p. 307, ed. 1610).

espials, spies, v. 57; vii. 148.

estate—'Twas of some, vii. 198: Here, with the present reading, "estate" means "high rank" (not, as Johnson explains it, "person of high rank," though that meaning would suit the reading of the folio, "'Twas some estate"):

estate, to settle as a possession, i. 220; ii. 267; iii. 67.

esteem Was made much poorer by it—Our, iii. 276: "Esteem is here reckoning or estimate. Since the loss of Helen, with her virtues and qualifications, our account is sunk; what we have to reckon ourselves king of, is much poorer than before" (JOHNSON): "Meaning that his esteem was lessened in its value by Bertram's misconduct; since a person who was honoured with it could be so ill treated as Helena had been, and that with impunity" (MASON): "Johnson's explanation is the true one" (WALKER).

estimable wonder, iii. 343: Has been explained as equivalent to "esteeming wonder:" see note 27, iii. 400.

estimate—My dear wife's, "Beyond the rate at which I value my dear wife" (JOHNSON), vi. 198.

estimation, supposition, conjecture: I speak not this in estimation, iv. 222.

estridge, an ostrich, vii. 562; estridges, iv. 266.

eterne, eternal, vii. 36, 144.

Euphrates, vii. 502: Our early poets, with very few exceptions, make the penult of Euphrates short: e.g. in The Warres of Cyrus, King of Persia, &c. 1594;

"And brought me to the bankes of Euphrates, the ratling harmonie

Which Euphrates his gliding streames did keepe." Sig. E 3:

and in Fairfax's translation of Tasso's Gerusalemme;

"To Euphrates we come, that sacred flood." B. viii. st. 69.

"Whence Euphrates, whence Tygresse spring, they vew."

B. xiv. st. 38.

"And thence with Euphrates' ritch flood embrast." B. xvii. st. 5.

even Christian, fellow Christian, vii. 193.

even, to equal, to make equal, to make even: we'll even All that good time will give us ("we'll make our work even with our time, we'll do what time will allow," JOHNSON), vii. 684; Till I am even'd with him, vii. 403.

even o'er the time he has lost—'Tis danger To make him, vii. 332: "i. e. To reconcile it to his apprehension" (WARBURTON): "I believe Dr. Warburton's explanation is just . . . The speaker's meaning therefore I conceive to be—it is dangerous to render all that passed during the interval of his insanity even (i. e. plain or level) to his understanding, while it continues in its present state of uncertainty" (STEEVENS).

even your content—To, iii. 215: see note 31, iii. 293.

even-pleach'd, &c.—Her hedges, iv. 500: "The construction is, 'Her even-pleached hedges [hedges evenly intertwined, so woven together as to have an even surface] put forth disordered twigs, resembling persons in prison, whose faces are from neglect overgrown with hair'" (MALONE): see pleached.

ever—Not: see not ever, &c.

ever-among, ever amidst, ever at intervals (an expression common in our earliest poetry), iv. 394.

everlasting garment—An, ii. 34: see durance, &c.

evil—The, vii. 57: Perhaps it is unnecessary to notice that this means the scrofulous disease known by the name of the King's Evil, because the sovereigns of England were supposed to possess the power of curing it "without other medicine, save only by handling and prayer" (as Laneham says, quoted here by Reed); and probably many readers will recollect that Dr. Johnson, when a child, was carried by his mother to London to be "touched" by Queen Anne.

evils there—Pitch our, i. 469; build their evils on the graves of great men, v. 506: see note 56, i. 529: On the first of these passages Steevens observes, "Evils, in the present instance [as Dr. Grey has remarked], undoubtedly stands for foricæ;" and Henley, "The desecration of edifices devoted to religion, by converting them to the most abject purposes of nature, was an eastern method of expressing contempt. See 2 Kings, x. 27."

examin'd, questioned, doubted: that I have not heard examin'd, iii. 250.

examples Of every minute's instance, "Are, I believe, examples which every minute supplies, which every minute presses on our notice" (STEEVENS), iv. 365.

exasperate, exasperated, vii. 45.

except before excepted—Let her, iii. 330: "This, says Dr. Farmer, should probably be 'as before excepted,'—a ludicrous use of the formal law-phrase. But the ingenious critic might have spared his remark, the formal law-phrase being more usually as in the text" (RITSON).

excrement, hair, beard: so plentiful an excrement, ii. 17; dally with my excrement, ii. 209; valour's excrement, ii. 382; my pedler's excrement, iii. 486; Your bedded hair, like life in excrements, Starts up ("The hairs are excrementitious, that is, without life or sensation; yet those very hairs, as if they had life, start up, &c." POPE), vii. 170. ("And albeit hayre were of it selfe the most abiect excrement that were, yet should Poppæas hayre be reputed honourable. I am not ignorant that hayre is noted by many as an excrement, a fleeting commodity . . . An excrement it is, I deny not," &c. Chapman's Justification of a strange action of Nero, &c. 1629, sig. B 2.) executors, executioners: Delivering o'er to executors pale, iv. 430.

exempt, "separated, parted" (JOHNSON), "taken away" (BOSWELL, Add. to Malone's Shakespeare): you are from me exempt, ii. 20.

exercise, a religious lecture, a sermon : I'm in your debt for your last exercise, v. 401 ("The puritans," observes Nares, "had week-day sermons, which they made a great point of frequenting, and termed exercises." Gloss.: but here the context, "the next Sabbath," seems to show that Hastings is not alluding to a week-day sermon).

exhale, to draw out : Therefore exhale (out with your sword), iv. 436 (where exhale is most erroneously explained by Steevens "breathe your last, or die"); exhale, v. 360; exhal'd, iv. 274; exhales, v. 357; vi. 422; Exhal'st, ii. 199.

exhaust, to draw forth : Whose dimpled smiles from fools exhaust their mercy, vi. 553.

exhibition, an allowance, a pension : Like exhibition thou shalt have, i. 273; Confin'd to exhibition! vii. 258; Due reference of place and exhibition, vii. 390; any petty exhibition, vii. 453; hir'd with that self exhibition (that very allowance or pension), vii. 654.

exhibition to examine, ii. 127 : "Blunder for examination to exhibit. See [ante] p. 117, 'Take their examination yourself, and bring it me'" (STEEVENS).

exigent, an exigence : Why do you cross me in this exigent? vi. 676; when the exigent should come, vii. 578.

exigent, an extremity, an end : drawing to their exigent, v. 33.

exion, the Hostess's blunder for action, iv. 329, 330.

exorciser, a person who can raise spirits (not one who can lay them), vii. 703.

exorcisms, conjurations for raising spirits (not for laying them), v. 125.

exorcist, a person who can raise spirits (not one who can lay them), iii. 285; vi. 639.

expect, expectation, vi. 18 : but see note 19, vi. 104.

expedience, expectation, haste, dispatch : with all due expedience, iv. 130; with all expedience, iv. 481; The cause of our expedience, vii. 504.

expedience, an expedition, an enterprise, an undertaking : In forwarding this dear expedience, iv. 208.

expedient, expeditions, immediate : His marches are expedient, iv. 14; with much expedient march, iv. 18; Expedient manage, iv. 122; with all expedient duty, v. 361; a quick-expedient stop, v. 150.

expediently, expeditiously, iii. 36.

expense, spending, expenditure : To have th' expense and waste of his revenues, vii. 277.

expiate, v. 402 ; viii. 360 : see note 48, v. 463.

expire, to bring to an end, to conclude : expire the term Of a despoised life, vi. 403.

expostulate, to discuss : The time now serves not to expostulate, i. 297 ; to expostulate ("to show by discussion, to put the pros and cons, to answer demands upon the question," CALDECOTT) What majesty should be, vii. 134.

expuls'd, expelled, v. 47.

exsufficate, swollen, puffed out, vii. 421 (For my own part, I can see no reason to doubt that such was Shakespeare's word, and such the meaning he intended it to convey).

extend, to extend the praise of a person : I do extend him, sir, within himself (short of his merit), vii. 636 ; the approbation of those are wonderfully to extend him, vii. 644.

extend, to seize (a law-term) : Extended Asia from Euphrates, vii. 502 : see the next article.

extent upon his house and lands—Make an, Make a seizure upon, &c. ("To make an extent of lands' is a legal phrase, from the words of a writ—extendi facias—whereby the sheriff is directed to cause certain lands to be appraised to their full extended value, before he delivers them to the person entitled under a recognizance, &c., in order that it may be certainly known how soon the debt will be paid," MALONE), iii. 36 ; extent against thy peace, violent attack (as in serving an extent) on thy peace, iii. 379.

extirp, to extirpate, to root out, i. 486 ; extirped, v. 47.

extracting frenzy—A most, iii. 392 : see note 124, iii. 413.

extraught, extracted, derived, v. 261.

extravagant, straying beyond bounds, vagrant, roving about : Th' extravagant and erring spirit, vii. 107 ; an extravagant and wheeling stranger, vii. 379.

extremity, the utmost of calamity : And top extremity, vii. 342 ; and smiling extremity out of act, viii. 66.

eyases, young hawks just taken from the nest ("Niais : A nestling, a young bird taken out of a nest; hence a youngling, novice," &c. Cotgrave's Fr. and Engl. Dict.), vii. 140.

eyas-musket, a young male sparrow-hawk (Fr. mouchet), i. 381 : see the preceding article.

eye of death—An, "An eye menacing death" (JOHNSON and STEEVENS), "an eye expressing deadly fear" (MASON), iv. 219.

eye of green—An, A slight tint of green, i. 194.

eye, presence : We shall express our duty in his eye, vii. 177.

yes their carriage ride—Her levell'd, viii. 440 : "The allusion is to a piece of ordnance" (MALONE).

yne, eyes, ii. 216, 271, 284, 316 ; iii. 62, 173 ; vii. 536 ; viii. 34.

F.

face P—With that, ii. 174 : A cant bantering phrase, which, I understand, is hardly obsolete now-a-days : Fielding (as Steevens remarks) has put it into the mouth of Beau Didapper ; see Joseph Andrews, B. iv. ch. 3.

face, "to carry a false appearance, to play the hypocrite" (JOHNSON) : That Suffolk doth not flatter, face, or feign, v. 73.

face, to oppose with impudence, to bully : Face not me, iii. 162.

face, to turn up with facings : face the garment of rebellion, iv. 276 ; Thou hast faced many things, iii. 162.

face, to patch, to "mend with a different colour" (STEEVENS) : an old faced ancient, iv. 268.

face-royal—He may keep it still as a, iv. 321 : "That is, a face exempt from the touch of vulgar hands" (JOHNSON) : "Perhaps this quibbling allusion is to the English real, rial, or royal. The poet seems to mean that a barber can no more earn sixpence by his face-royal, than by the face stamped on the coin called a royal ; the one requiring as little shaving as the other" (STEEVENS) : "If nothing be taken out of a royal, it will remain a royal as it was. This appears to me to be Falstaff's conceit. A royal was a piece of coin of the value of ten shillings" (MASON) : see royal.

fac'd it with a-card of ten, iii. 139 : "A common phrase, which we may suppose to have been derived from some game (possibly primero), wherein the standing boldly upon a ten was often successful. A card of ten meant a tenth card, a ten. . . I conceive the force of the phrase to have expressed, originally, the confidence or impudence of one who with a ten, as at brag, faced or outfaced one who had really a faced card against him. To face meant, as it still does, to bully, to attack by impudence of face." Nares's Gloss. (Compare Skelton's Bowge of Courte ; facinorous, wicked, iii. 230.

fact, a deed, a doing,—an evil doing : his fact, till now, . . . came not to an undoubtful proof, i. 497 ; Those of your fact, iii. 452 (see note 64, iii. 515) ; a fouler fact, v. 123 ; damned fact, vii. 44 ; Becoming well thy fact, viii. 53 ; The powers to whom I pray abhor this fact, viii. 297.

factionary, one of a faction, an adherent, vi. 222.

factious for redress of all these griefs—Be, vi. 629 : "Factionous seems here to mean active [or urgent]" (JOHNSON).

faculties inclusive were, &c.—Notes whose: see notes, whose faculties, &c.

fade, &c.—Nothing of him that doth, i. 189: "The meaning is—Every thing about him, that is liable to alteration, is changed" (STEEVENS).

fadge, to suit, to fit, to agree, ii. 210; iii. 345.

fadings, iii. 471, on the page after which see foot-note: "This word [fading], which was the burden of a popular Irish song, gave name to a dance, frequently noticed by our old dramatists. Both the song and the dance appear to have been of a licentious kind." Gifford's note on Jonson's Works, vol. vii. p. 240: "The Fading is the name of an Irish dance, but With a fading (or fadding) seems to be used as a nonsense-burden, like Derry down, Hey nonny, nonny no, &c." Chappell's Popular Music of the Olden Time, &c. vol. i. p. 235, sec. ed.

fail, a failure: the fail Of any point in't, iii. 448; sense withal Of its own fail, vi. 570; From thy great fail, vii. 681.

fair, fairness, beauty: My decayed fair, ii. 15; heresy in fair, ii. 188; Demetrius loves your fair, ii. 270; That fair, for which love groan'd for, vi. 408; Having no fair to lose . . . to rob him of his fair, viii. 275; Neither in inward worth, nor outward fair, viii. 357; that fair thou owest, viii. 358; these bastard signs of fair, viii. 383; to your fair no painting set, viii. 390.

fair-betrothed, "fairly contracted, honourably affianced" (STEEVENS), viii. 73.

fairies' midwife—The, vi. 402: "Does not mean the midwife to the fairies, but that she was the person among the fairies, whose department it was to deliver the fancies of sleeping men of their dreams, those children of an idle brain" (STEEVENS): "Shakespeare, by employing her [Mab] here, alludes at large to her midnight pranks performed on sleepers; but denominates her from the most notorious one, of her personating the drowsy midwife, who was usually carried away into some distant water, and substituting a new birth in the bed or cradle" (T. WARTON).

fairy, an enchantress: this great fairy, vii. 571.

faith'd, possessed of credibility, credited, vii. 276.

faltors, vagabonds, idle livers, (as a general term of reproach) rapscals ("Vagabond. A vagabond, roamer, ~~fallator~~," &c. Cotgrave's Fr. and Engl. Dict.), iv. 344.

falcon as the tercel, for all the ducks & the river—The: see tercel, &c.

Falconbridge commands the narrow seas—Stern, v. 242: "The person here meant was Thomas Nevil, bastard son to the Lord Falconbridge; 'a man,' says Hall, 'of no less courage than Andronicus, who, for his equal conditions was such an inveterate enemy to' more meter could not be chosen to set all the worlde in a broyle, and to put the estate of the realme on an yl hazard.' He had been appointed by Warwick vice-admiral of the sea, and had in charge so to keep the passage between Dover and Calais, that none which either favoured King Henry or his friends should escape untaken or undrowned: such at least were his instructions with respect to the friends and favourers of King Edward after the rupture between him and Warwick. On Warwick's death, he fell into poverty, and robbed, both by sea and land, as well friends as enemies. He once brought his ships up the Thames, and with a considerable body of the men of Kent and Essex, made a spirited assault on the city, with a view to plunder and pillage, which was not repelled but after a sharp conflict and the loss of many lives; and, had it happened at a more critical period, might have been attended with fatal consequences to Edward. After roving on the sea some little time longer, he ventured to land at Southampton, where he was taken and beheaded. See Hall and Holinshed" (RITSON).

fall, to let fall: To fall it on Gonzalo, i. 201; Than fall, and bruise to death, i. 457; as easy mayst thou fall A drop of water, ii. 18; her mantle she did fall, ii. 316; Fall parti-colour'd lambs, ii. 355; Here did she fall a tear, iv. 156; make him fall His crest, vi. 26; They fall their crests, vi. 666; Fall not a tear, vii. 555; Her twinning cherries shall their sweetness fall, viii. 128; falling a lip of much contempt, iii. 431; Falls not the axe, iii. 51; Each drop she falls, vii. 443; For every tear he falls, viii. 331 (Yet Mr. Craik, in a note on They fall their crests—Julius Caesar, act iv. sc. 2—most unaccountably says "This use of fall, as an active [sic] verb, is not common in Shakespeare").

fall, to fall away, to shrink: A good leg will fall, iv. 503.

fall—At, At an ebb, vi. 530.

fallow, light brown, with a yellow or reddish tinge: your fallow greyhound, i. 347.

false, to falsify, to "violate by failure of veracity" (Johnson's Dict.): Makes Diana's rangers false themselves, vii. 662.

falsing, ii. 18: see note 31, ii. 58.

familiar, a demon attendant on a witch or conjuror: Love is a familiar, ii. 175; I think her old familiar is asleep, v. 46; he has a familiar under his tongue, v. 180.

fan—When Miss Bridget lost the handle of her, i. 365; brain him with his lady's fan, iv. 230. The fans used by ladies in Shakespeare's time consisted generally of ostrich or other feathers stuck into handles, which were sometimes very costly, being made of silver, gold, or ivory inlaid: "In the Sidney Papers, published by Collins, a fan is presented to Queen Elizabeth for a new-year's gift, the handle of which was studded with diamonds" (T. WARTON).

Fancies or his Goodnights—Sung those tunes . . . that he heard the carmen whistle, and swore they were his, iv. 362 : "Fancies and Goodnights were the titles of little poems. One of Gascoigne's Goodnights is published among his Flowers" (STEEVENS) : "The Carmen of the sixteenth and seventeenth centuries appear to have been singularly famous for their musical abilities ; but especially for whistling their tunes. Falstaff's description of Justice Shallow is, that ' he came ever in the rear-ward of the fashion,' and ' sang the tunes he heard the carmen whistle, and swore they were his Fancies or his Goodnights.' Note. Goodnights are ' Last dying speeches,' made into ballads. See Essex's last Goodnight." Chappell's Popular Music of the Olden Time, &c. vol. i. p. 138, sec. ed. (where may be found a good deal more concerning the musical performances of the carmen).

fancy, love : no appearance of fancy in him, ii. 107 ; fancy's followers, ii. 269 ; where is fancy bred, ii. 382 ; fancy dies, ibid. ; fancy's knell, ibid. ; in fancy following me, ii. 309 ; the power of fancy, iii. 51 ; sweet and bitter fancy, iii. 63 ; As all impediments in fancy's course Are motives of more fancy, iii. 282 ; and by my fancy, iii. 480 ; my fancy may be satisfied, v. 71 ; What a mere child is fancy, viii. 185 ; soft fancy's slave, viii. 293 ; this afflicted fancy (love-sick fair one), viii. 441 ; partial fancy, viii. 462 ; wounded fancies, viii. 445.

fancy, to love : never did young man fancy With so eternal and so fix'd a soul, vi. 88.

fancy-free, love-free, exempt from the power of love, ii. 279.

fancy-monger, love-monger, iii. 45.

fancy-sick, love-sick, ii. 294.

fang, to gripe, to seize, vi. 551.

fangled world—Our, vii. 719 : Here fangled is, I apprehend, the same, or nearly the same, in meaning as new-fangled ; but Malone (referring to Johnson's Dick.) explains it " gaudy, vainly decorated," and Nares (in his Gloss.) " trifling."

fantastical, belonging to fantasy, imaginary : Are ye fantastical (" creatures of fantasy or imagination," JOHNSON), vii. 9 ; whose murder yet is but fantastical, vii. 12.

fantasticoes, fantastic, coxcomical persons, vi. 418.

fap, fuddled, drunk, i. 349.

far', farther : Far' than Deucalion off, iii. 478 ; stand far' off, vi. 659 ; fly far' off, vi. 680 ; From the far' shore, viii. 180.

far—You speak him, " You praise him extensively" (STEEVENS), vii. 636.

farce, to stuff : The farced (= tumid, pompous) title, iv. 476 ; that she farces every business withal, viii. 189.

fardel, a burden, a bundle, a pack : iii. 486 (twice), 487 (three times), 497, 500 ; fardels, vii. 149.

far-fet, far-fetched, v. 150.

farrow, a litter of pigs, vii. 47.

fartuous, Mrs. Quickly's blunder for virtuous, i. 367.

fashions—The, The farcy (Ital. farcina, Fr. farcin), a disease, in horses, of the absorbents of the skin, closely connected with glanders, iii. 144.

fast, fasted: I fast and prayed, vii. 705.

fast, settled, fixed: 'tis our fast intent, vii. 250.

fast and loose, ii. 174, 185; iv. 35; vii. 574: "A term to signify a cheating game, of which the following is a description. A leathern belt is made up into a number of intricate folds, and placed edge-wise upon a table. One of the folds is made to resemble the middle of the girdle, so that whoever should thrust a skewer into it would think he held it fast to the table; whereas, when he has so done, the person with whom he plays may take hold of both ends, and draw it away. This trick is now known to the common people by the name of pricking at the belt or girdle, and perhaps was practised by the gypsies in the time of Shakespeare" (SIR J. HAWKINS).

fast bind, fast find, ii. 368: "Bon guet chasse malaventure: Pro. Good watch prevents misfortune; (fast bind, fast find, say we)."
Cotgrave's Fr. and Engl. Dict.:

"Time is tickle: and out of sight out of minde, Than catch and hold while I may, fast binde, fast finde."

Heywood's Dialogue on Proverbs, Part First,—Workes, sig. A 8 verso, ed. 1598.

fat and fulsome, iii. 388: see note 118, iii. 412.

fat and scant of breath—He's, vii. 208: It seems highly probable that this description was intended to apply to Burbadge, the original representative of Hamlet.

fat paunches have lean pates, ii. 164: This (with the variation of "make" for have) is given by Ray, who adds, "Pinguis venter non gignit sensum tenuem. This Hierom mentions in one of his Epistles as a Greek proverb. The Greek is more elegant,—Παχέα γαστήρ λεπτόν οὐ τίκτει νόον." Proverbs, p. 144, ed. 1768.

fatigate, made weary, exhausted with labour, vi. 170.

fault, misfortune: 'Tis your fault, 'tis your fault, i. 347; 'Tis my fault, Master Page, i. 386; The more my fault to scape his hands, viii. 50.

Faustuses—Three Doctor, i. 405: Faustus was well known to the audiences of our poet's days, from the popular (fabulous) History of Doctor Faustus, and more especially from Marlowe's drama, founded on that history.

favour, countenance, aspect, appearance: a good favour you have, i. 494; discover the favour, i. 498; When I like your favour, ii. 87; for your favour, sir, ii. 110; Her favour turns the fashion of the days, ii. 204; My favour were as great (with a quibble), ii. 212; O, were "favour so, ii. 270; Of female favour, iii. 63; my daughter's favour, iii. 72; Carries no favour in't, iii. 209; his sweet favour, ibid.; some favour that it loves, iii. 352; I know your favour, iii. 376; vi. 78; In favour was my brother, iii. 377; known by garment, not by favour, iii. 498; the favour and the form Of this most fair occasion, iv. 71; stain my favour in a bloody mask, iv. 257 (In this passage I ought to have retained the old reading favours; and in my note on it, iv. 300, I have too hastily asserted that the plural, meaning "features," was not applied to a single face); our former favour, iv. 500; your favour is well approved by your tongue, vi. 203; your outward favour, vi. 619; In favour's like the work, vi. 629; any mark of favour, vi. 632; To alter favour, vii. 16; to this favour she must come, vii. 197; defeat thy favour, vii. 393; in favour as in humour alter'd, vii. 433; so tart a favour, vii. 525; His favour is familiar to me, vii. 724; favour, savour, hue, and qualities, viii. 264; The most sweet favour, viii. 405; The favours of these men, vi. 161.

favour, generally meant "a love-token" ("A favour worn, munusculum amoris indicium." Coles's Lat. and Engl. Dict.), consisting of a glove to be worn in the hat, a scarf, &c.: but, as Steevens remarks, "it was anciently the custom to wear gloves in the hat on three distinct occasions, viz. as the favour of a mistress, the memorial of a friend, and as a mark to be challenged by an enemy:" Rosaline, you have a favour too, ii. 212; this favour thou shalt wear, ii. 214; he wears next his heart for a favour, ii. 231; give a favour from you, iii. 278; wear it as a favour, iv. 173; Here, Fluellen; wear thou this favour for me (the glove which Henry pretended he had plucked from the helmet of Alençon), iv. 491; given him for a favour, ibid.; the favour of his lady, viii. 188; By favours several, ii. 214; change you favours too, ibid.; the favours most in sight, ibid.; Therefore change favours, ii. 219; The ladies did change favours, ii. 224; Your favours, the ambassadors of love, ii. 232; fairy favours, ii. 275; Seeking sweet favours, ii. 306; let my favours hide thy mangled face, iv. 285; the painted favours of their ladies, viii. 139; A thousand favours from a maund she drew, viii. 440 (where Steevens strangely failed to see that the words, Of amber, crystal, and of beaded jet, describe the favours, and not, as he supposed, the maund or basket).

fay—By my, By my faith, iii. 112; vi. 407; vii. 138.

fear, personified: O, let my lady apprehend no fear: in all Cupid's pageant there is presented no monster, vi. 49; thy angel Becomes a fear, vii. 523; indent with fears, iv. 217; all these bold fears, iv. 385.

fear, cause of, or reason for, fear: There is no fear in him, vi. 636.

fear, to fear for: I promise you, I fear you, ii. 392; his physicians fear him mightily, v. 355; Fear not thy sons, vi. 310; much fear'd by his physicians, iv. 264.

fear, to terrify, to frighten: to fear the birds of prey, i. 457; fear boys with bugs, iii. 126; The people fear me, iv. 380; go fear thy king withal, v. 287; to fear, not to delight, vii. 382; Thou canst not fear us, Pompey, with thy sails, vii. 529; because he would not fear him, viii. 275; Hath fear'd the valiant, ii. 358; more fear'd than harm'd, iv. 429; a bug that fear'd us all, v. 309; something fears me to think of, vii. 304; only this fears me, viii. 172.

fear no colours: see colours—Fear no.

fearful, timid: Pursue these fearful creatures, viii. 261.

fearful—He's gentle, and not, i. 191: "'fearful,' i.e. terrible, producing fear. In our author's age to fear signified to terrify (see Minshew in verb. [and first article in this page]), and fearful was much more frequently used in the sense of formidable than that of timorous" (MALONE): "He is mild and harmless, and not in the least terrible or dangerous" (RITSON).

fearful bravery—With: "With a gallant show of courage, carrying with it terror and dismay" (MALONE): With "bravery in show or appearance, which yet is full of real fear or apprehension" (CRAIK), vi. 676.

fears his widow—Hortensio, iii. 174: Here Petruchio means "Hortensio is afraid of his widow;" but the Widow understands him to mean "Hortensio frightens his widow."

feast-finding minstrels, viii. 310: "Our ancient minstrels were the constant attendants on feasts" (STEEVENS): see note 10, viii. 342.

feat, dexterous, ready, neat, trim: So feat, so nurse-like, vii. 723; Much feater than before, i. 200.

feated, formed, fashioned, moulded (with a reference perhaps both to appearance and manners), vii. 636. "I am well feted or shapen of my lymmes, Je suis bien aligné." Palsgrave's Lesclarcissement de la Lang. Fr., 1530, fol. cxlviii. (Table of Verbes).

feather, that they got in France—Those remnants Of fool and, v. 498: This passage, as Mr. Fairholt remarks, "alludes to the extravagant follies of the French fashions exhibited at the Field of the Cloth of Gold:" among the bas-reliefs of the Hotel Bourgtheroulde is a figure of one on the English side, which has "a close skull-cap of velvet worn upon the head, and the bonnet or hat slung at the back of it, with an enormous radiation of feathers set around it."

featly, dexterously, neatly, i. 189; iii. 471 (The expression "foot it featly," which is now so familiar to us from the former of these passages, was not a usual one in the days of Shakespeare, who probably caught it from a line in Lodge's Glaucus and Scilla, 1589; "Footing it featlie on the grassie ground." Sig. A 2 verso).

feature, form, person in general: He is complete in feature, i. 282; Cheated of feature, v. 351; complete in mind and feature, v. 532; the features of Octavia, vii. 528; for features ("grace and dignity of form," STANFORD) laming The shrine of Venus, &c. vii. 726.

fedary, i. 474; iii. 437; vii. 674: "Fedary and federary in Shakespeare are the same word differently written (having no connection whatever with feud or foudatory), and signify a colleague, associate, or confederate." Richardson's Dict. is v.: But Richardson ought to have said that the form federary, which the folio gives only in one passage (iii. 437), is undoubtedly an error of the scribe or printer.

fee—At a pin's, At the value of a pin, vii. 121.

fee—Three thousand crowns in annual, "a feud or fee (in land) of that yearly value" (RITSON), vii. 183.

feeder, a servant, a menial: your very faithful feeder, iii. 27; riotous feeders, vi. 529; By one that looks on feeders (By one, i.e. Cleopatra, who condescends to look with unbecoming kindness on servants), vii. 560.

feeding—A worthy, iii. 471: see note 104, iii. 521.

fee-farm!—A kiss in, "Is a kiss of a duration that has no bounds; a fee-farm being a grant of lands in fee, that is, for ever, reserving a certain rent" (MALONE), vi. 49.

fee-grief, "a peculiar sorrow, a grief that hath a single owner" (JOHNSON), vii. 59.

fee-simple, with fine and recovery—In, i. 400: "Fee-simple, feodum simplex, is that of which we are seised in these general words, To us and our heirs for ever" (Cowell's Law-Dict., sub "Fee," ed. 1727); fine and recovery is "the strongest assurance known to English law" (RITSON); fee-simple, iii. 268; v. 185; vi. 81, 427; And was my own fee-simple ("Had an absolute power over myself, as large as a tenant in fee has over his estate," MALONE), viii. 443.

feet,—but that's a fable—I took down towards his, vii. 467: "To see if, according to the common opinion, his feet be cloven" (JOHNSON).

fell, skin, vii. 336; fells, iii. 37.

fell of hair, skin covered with hair,—hairy scalp, vii. 67.

fellow, a companion: to be your fellow You may deny me, i. 210; fellow! not Malvolio, iii. 370 (where Malvolio chooses to understand fellow in the sense of "companion").

fellow, an equal: my brother's servants Were then my fellows, i. 200; princely fellows, vii. 681.

fellow of this walk—My shoulders for the, i. 411: The forester, or park-keeper, used to receive, as his perquisite, one or both of the shoulders of the buck.

fellow with the great belly, &c.—The, iv. 324: An allusion to some individual well known at that time,—some fat blind beggar who was led about by his dog.

fellowly, sympathetic, i. 228.

female fairies will his tomb be haunted—With, vii. 701: “i. e. harmless and protecting spirits, not fairies of a mischievous nature” (DOUCE).

fencing, fencing—Drinking, vii. 128: “Fencing, I suppose, means piquing himself on his skill in the use of the sword, and quarrelling and brawling in consequence of that skill” (MALONE).

fennel for you, and columbines, vii. 184: Fennel was an emblem of flattery (“Dare finocchio, to flatter or give Fennell.” Florio’s Ital. and Engl. Dict.), and was also considered as a provocative (see conger, &c.); and in the present passage, where Ophelia seems to address the King, we may certainly suppose that she offers him “flattery,” though we do not agree with Mr. Staunton in supposing that here fennel signifies “lust” also (fennel, moreover, was thought to have the property of clearing the sight; but there appears to be no allusion to that property here, though Mr. Beisly, in his Shakspeare’s Garden, &c. p. 158, positively states that there is): columbines, having no particular virtues or properties ascribed to them, perhaps are emblematical of ingratitude: Chapman, in his All Fools, 1605, calls columbine “a thankless flower.” (Holt White quotes Browne’s Britannia’s Pastorals to show that “columbine was emblematical of forsaken lovers:” but here Ophelia is not assigning the columbines to herself, and except herself, there is no “love-lorn” person present.)

ferre, a companion, a mate (husband or wife), vi. 325 (husband); viii. 6 (wife); viii. 195 (wife).

fern-seed—The receipt of, iv. 226: “The ancients, who often paid more attention to received opinions than to the evidence of their senses, believed that fern bore no seed. Our ancestors imagined that this plant produced seed which was invisible. Hence, from an extraordinary mode of reasoning, founded on the fantastic doctrine of signatures, they concluded that they who possessed the secret of wearing this seed about them would become invisible” (HOLT WHITE).

fescue, “A small wire, [stick, straw, &c.] by which those who teach to read point out the letters” (Johnson’s Dict.), viii. 149. (Peele, in his Honour of the Garter, describing the Englishmen of former days, says,

“They went to school to put together towns,
And spell in France with fescues made of pikes.”

Works, p. 586, ed. Dyce, 1861).

festinately, speedily, quickly, ii. 182.

festival terms, holiday language, fine phraseology, ii. 139.

fet, fetched, iv. 450; v. 387.

fetch of warrant—A, A warranted, sanctioned, or approved artifice or device, vii. 129.

feckle, to prepare, to put in order, to get ready ("To feckle, to set up about any thing, to dress or prepare. A word much used." Bay's North Country Words, p. 28, ed. 1768), vi. 446.

few—In, In few words, i. 181, 488; iv. 317, 481; vii. 119.

few—In a, In a few words, iii. 122.

fewness and truth, In few words and those true, i. 455.

fico for the phrase—A, i. 353; fico for thy friendship, iv. 461: In these passages, where fico, of course, means "fig," there does not seem to be any allusion either to the gesticulation mentioned in the article fig me, &c. or to the poisoning noticed in the article fig of Spain!—The.

field is honourable—The, v. 170: "Perhaps [Certainly] a quibble between field in its heraldic, and in its common acceptation, was designed" (STEEVENS).

field—In her fair face's, viii. 289: "Field is here equivocally used.
The war of lilies and roses requires a field of battle; the heraldry in the preceding stanza demands another field, i.e. the ground or surface of a shield or escutcheon" (STEEVENS).

fielded friends, friends who are in the battle-field, vi. 148.

fierce, vehement, precipitate, excessive, violent: With all the fierce endeavour of your wit, ii. 234; fierce extremes, iv. 74; fierce vanities, v. 485; fierce wretchedness, vi. 549; fierce ("terrible," WARBURTON, "extreme, excessive—terrible, bloody," CALDECOTT) events, vii. 106; This fierce ("vehement, rapid," JOHNSON) abridgment, vii. 732.

fifteens—He that made us pay one-and-twenty, v. 178: "A fifteen was the fifteenth part of all the movables or personal property of each subject" (MALONE).

fig me, like The bragging Spaniard, iv. 397: "The practice of thrusting out the thumb between the first and second fingers, to express the feelings of insult and contempt, has prevailed very generally among the nations of Europe, and for many ages been denominated making the fig, or described at least by some equivalent expression. There is good reason for believing that it was known to the ancient Romans," &c. (DOUCE): Gifford notices the gesticulation in question as "forming a coarse representation of a disease to which the name of figus has always been given. This is the true import of the act," &c. Note on Jonson's Works, vol. i. p. 52.
("FICHA. Ficham facere, Ital. Fare le fiche, Hispan. Hacer la higa, nostris Faire la figue, Medium unguem ostendere, signum deri-sionis et contemptus." Du Cange's Gloss.: from which a person unacquainted with Spanish would naturally conclude that higa meant "a fig;" but the name of that fruit in Spanish is higo: Connelly's Span. and Engl. Dict., Madrid, 4to, furnishes what follows; "Higa. La accion que se hace con la mano, cerrado el puño, sacando el dedo pulgar por entre el índice y el de en medio. The act of thrusting out the thumb between the fore and middle fingers that are clenched. . . . Por higa. Hacer desprecio de una persona ó cosa. To despise a person or thing. . . . Higo. La fruta que da la higuera. Fig, the fruit of a fig-tree. . . . Higo. Cierta especie de almorranas. A certain species of piles.") fig of Spain!—The, iv. 461: Here "Pistol, after spurning out his 'figo [fico] for thy friendship' [see fico, &c.]; as if he were not satisfied with the measure of the contempt expressed, more emphatically adds, 'the fig of Spain.' This undoubtedly alludes to the poisoned figs mentioned in Mr. Steevens's note, because [as Steevens observes] the quartos read 'the fig of Spain within thy jaw,' and 'the fig within thy bowels and thy dirty maw.' Or, as in many other instances, the allusion may be twofold; for the Spanish fig, as a term of contempt only [see the preceding article], must have been very familiar in England in Shakspeare's time" (DOUCE): In the note to which Douce refers above, Steevens, to illustrate "the custom of giving poisoned figs to those who were the objects either of Spanish or Italian revenge," cites, among other passages,

"I do look now for a Spanish fig, or an Italian salad, daily."

Webster's White Devil,—Works, p. 30,
ed. Dyce, 1857:

"I must poison him;

One fig sends him to Erebus."

Shirley's Brothers,—Works, vol. i. p. 231,
ed. Gifford and Dyce.

figs—I love long life better than, vii. 500: A proverbial expression.

fight the course—Bear-like, I must: see course—bear-like, &c.

fight—Up with your, i. 368: Phillips thus explains *figh*ts; "(In sea-affairs) the waste-cloaths that hang round about the ship in a fight, to hinder the men from being seen by the enemy: also any place wherein men may cover themselves, and yet use their fire-arms." The New World of Words, ed. 1706.

figures, "pictures created by imagination or apprehension" (CRAIK): to scrape the figures out of your husband's brains, i. 400; He apprehends a world of figures here, iv. 221; Thou hast no figures nor no fantasies, vi. 637.

file, a number, a list: the greater file of the subject, i. 487; the valu'd file (the list in which is set down the value of each), vii. 34; a file of all the gentry, vii. 63.

file, to polish: his tongue filed, ii. 207; when your countenance fil'd up his line, viii. 392 (see note 46, viii. 431); fil'd talk, viii. 462.

file, to defile: have I fil'd my mind, vii. 33.

file, to keep equal pace : Yet fil'd with my abilities, v. 586 : see note 94, v. 585.

file our engines with advice—And she shall : see engines with advice, &c.

fill-horse, (phill-horse or thill-horse) shaft-horse, ii. 361.

fills, shafts of a cart or waggon : put you i' the fills, vi. 49.

filth, used as a term of reproach and contempt : Filth as thou art, i. 187 ; Filth, thou liest! vii. 466 ; to general filths Convert o' th' instant, green virginity, vi. 547 ; Filths savour but themselves, vii. 316 : in the third of these passages Steevens explains general filths by "common sewers;" but surely the meaning is "common whores:" and so in the second passage "Filth" seems from Iago's preceding speech to be equivalent to "whore." (Compare Greene's Notable Discovery of Coosnage, &c. 1592 ; "To him will some common filth (that neuer knew loue) faine an ardent and honest affection," &c. Sig. c 4.)

find forth, to find out : falling there to find, his fellow forth, ii. 10 ; To find the other forth, ii. 349.

find him not—If she, If she do not make him out, vii. 152.

fine, a conclusion, an end : and the fine is, ii. 80 ; the fine's the crown, iii. 271.

fine, to end : Time's office is to fine the hate of foes, viii. 314.

fine and recovery, i. 400 ; ii. 17 : see fee-simple, &c.

fine his title with some show of truth—To, iv. 427 : Here fine has been explained "refine," "embellish," &c. : but see note 8, iv. 509.

fine in thy evidence, full of finesse, artful, in thy evidence, iii. 284.

fine issues—To, "To great consequences, for high purposes" (JOHNSON), i. 446.

fineless, endless, vii. 421.

Finsbury—As if thou ne'er walk'dst further than, iv. 253 : "In 1498, all the gardens which had continued time out of mind without Moorgate, to wit, about and beyond the lordship of Finsbury, were destroyed, and of them was made a plain field to shoot in. It was called Finsbury field, in which there were three windmills, and here they usually shoot at twelve score : Stow, 1633, p. 913. In Jonson's time, this was the usual resort of the plainer citizens. People of fashion, or who aspired to be thought so, probably mixed but little in those parties ; and hence we may account for the indignation of Master Stephen at being suspected of such vulgarity [see Jonson's Every Man in his Humour, act i. sc. 1]. An idea of a similar kind occurs in Shakespeare, 'As if thou ne'er walk'dst,' &c." Gifford's note on Jonson's Works, vol. i. p. 10.

firago—I have not seen such a, iii. 374 : "firago . . . a corruption for virago, like fagaries for vagaries" (MALONE): Sir Toby means, "I never saw one that had so much the look of woman with the prowess of man" (JOHNSON): "The word virago is certainly inapplicable to a man, a blustering hectoring fellow, as Sir Toby means to represent Viola; for he cannot possibly entertain any suspicion of her sex: but it is no otherwise so than Rounceval is to a woman, meaning a terrible fighting blade; from Ronceval or Roncesvalles, the famous scene of that fabulous combat with the Saracens, 'When Charlemagne and all his peerage fell, By Font-arabia'" (RITSON).

fire is in mine ears?—What, ii. 106: "Alluding to a proverbial saying of the common people, that their ears burn when others are talking of them" (WARBURTON).

fire, fire; cast on no water, iii. 150: "There is an old popular catch of three parts in these words;

'Scotland burneth, Scotland burneth.
Fire, fire;—Fire, fire;
Cast on some more water'

(BLACKSTONE).

firebrand brother—Our, vi. 33: "Hecuba, when pregnant with Paris, dreamed she should be delivered of a burning torch" (STEEVENS).

fire-drake—That, v. 568: The word fire-drake had several meanings—viz. a fiery dragon, a meteor, and a sort of fire-work: that here it is used to describe a person with a red nose is proved by what immediately precedes.

fire-new, (newly come from the fire) bran-new, ii. 167; iii. 365; v. 370; vii. 340.

firk, iv. 484 (twice): Seems to mean "beat:" "The word firk is so variously used by the old writers, that it is almost impossible to ascertain its precise meaning" (STEEVENS).

first son—My, vi. 200: Here first is explained by Warburton "no-blest and most eminent of men."

fish lives in the sea—The, vi. 400: see note 22, vi. 478.

fish—Here's another ballad, Of a, &c. iii. 474: Mr. Collier is, I believe, right when, in opposition to Malone, he denies that here we have an allusion to a particular publication: Shakespeare, he thinks, does not refer to any one of the many productions of this kind, but to the whole class.

fishmonger—You are a, vii. 136: "Perhaps a joke was here intended. Fishmonger was a cant term for a wench" (MALONE).

fit or two o' the face—A, A grimace or two, v. 498.

fits—Well, you say so in, vi. 45: "A quibble is intended. A fit was a part or division of a song [or ballad] or tune. The equivoque lies between fits, starts or sudden impulses, and fits in its musical acception" (SINGER).

fitchew, a polecat, vi. 82 ; vii. 325 ; (as a cant term for a strumpet), vii. 440.

fitly, exactly : even so most fitly As you malign our senators, vi. 138.

five-finger-tied—Knot, "A knot tied by giving her hand to Diomed" (JOHNSON), vi. 88.

five wits : see wits, &c.

fives—The, An inflammation of the parotid glands in horses (Fr. avives), iii. 144.

fixure, fixture, fixedness, iii. 503 ; vi. 19.

flap-dragon—A, ii. 208 ; flap-dragons, iv. 348 : "A flap-dragon is some small combustible body, fired at one end, and put afloat in a glass of liquor. It is an act of a toper's dexterity to toss off the glass in such a manner as to prevent the flap-dragon from doing mischief" (JOHNSON) : In former days gallants used to vie with each other in drinking off flap-dragons to the health of their mistresses,—which flap-dragons were generally raisins, and sometimes even candles' ends, swimming in brandy or other strong spirits, whence, when on fire, they were snatched by the mouth and swallowed.

flap-dragoned it, swallowed it as gallants in their revels swallow a flap-dragon, iii. 459.

flap-jacks, pancakes, viii. 22.

flask, a soldier's powder-horn : The carved-bone face on a flask, ii. 228.

flaunts, fineries, showy attire : in these my borrow'd flaunts, iii. 466.

flaw, a sudden and violent blast of wind ("A flaw (or gust) of wind. Tourbillon de vent." Cotgrave's Fr. and Engl. Dict. : "A flaw of wind is a gust, which is very violent upon a sudden, but quickly endeth." Smith's Sea Grammar, 1627, p. 46 : the second of these quotations I owe to Mr. Bolton Corney) : standing every flaw, vi. 227 ; the winter's flaw, vii. 197 ; I do not fear the flaw, viii. 37 ; foul flaws, viii. 254.

flaw, a tempestuous uproar, a stormy tumult : this mad-bred flaw, v. 151.

flaw, a sudden commotion of mind : O, these flaws and starts, vii. 40.

flaw—How Antony becomes his, "How Antony conforms himself to this breach of his fortune" (JOHNSON), vii. 556.

flaws, congealed in the spring of day, iv. 377 : Here Edwards rightly explains flaws to mean "small blades of ice : " I have myself heard the word used to signify both "thin cakes of ice" and "the bursting of those cakes."

flecked, spotted, dappled, vi. 415.

fleet, to float: Have knit again, and fleet, vii. 562.

fleet, to make to pass: fleet the time, iii. 8.

fleeting, inconstant: false, fleeting ("changing sides," JOHNSON), perjur'd Clarènce, v. 374; the fleeting moon, vii. 594 (The word fleeting applied to a person, as in the first of the above passages, is of very rare occurrence: I therefore notice that Sir John Harington, in his Orlando Furioso, has

"But Griffin (though he came not for this end,
For praise and bravery at tilt to run, But came to find his fleeting female friend)," &c. B. xvii. st. 18).

fleshment, "pride, encouraged by a successful attempt; being fleshed with, or having tasted success" (Nares's Gloss.), vii. 281.

flew'd, having large hanging flews or chaps, ii. 308.

Flibbertigibbet, vii. 301, 314: This fiend is called Fliberdigibbet and Fliberdigibet in Harsnet's Declaration of egregious Popish Impostures, 1603, pp. 49, 119; which book Shakespeare is supposed to have used for the names of several fiends in King Lear.

flight—At the, At the shooting with flights, long and light-feathered arrows that went straight to the mark, ii. 76.

firt-gills, flirting gills,—wenches of light behaviour, vi. 422.

Florentius' love—Be she as foul as was, Be she as ugly as was, &c. iii. 122: "The allusion is to a story told by Gower in the First Book De Confessione Amantis. Florent is the name of a knight who had bound himself to marry a deformed hag, provided she taught him the solution of a riddle on which his life depended" (STEEVENS): The story is of great antiquity.

flote, flood, wave, sea (now generally referred to the Anglo-Saxon; but Minshew has "A flote or waue. G. Flot. L. Fluctus." The Guide into Tongues, ed. 1617), i. 184.

fool and death—To please the, viii. 40: "I have seen (though present means of reference to it are beyond my reach) an old Flemish print in which Death is exhibited in the act of plundering a miser of his bags, and the Fool (discriminated by his bauble, &c.) is standing behind, and grinning at the process" (STEEVENS): "Cerimon in most express terms declares that he feels more real satisfaction in his liberal employment as a physician, than he should in the uncertain pursuit of honour, or in the mere accumulation of wealth; which would assimilate him to a miser, the result of whose labour is merely to entertain the fool and death . . . The allusion therefore is to some such print as Mr. Steevens happily remembered to have seen, in which death plunders the miser of his money-bags, whilst the fool is grinning at the process. It may be presumed that these subjects were common in Shakespeare's time. They might have ornamented the poor man's cottage in the shape of rude prints, or have been introduced into halfpenny ballads long since consigned to oblivion. The miser is at all times fair game; and to prove that this is not a chimerical opinion, and at the same time to show the extensive range of this popular subject, a few prints of the kind shall be mentioned. 1. Death and the two misers, by Michael Pregel. 2. An old couple counting their money, death and two devils attending, a mezzotint by Vander Bruggen. 3. A similar mezzotint by Meheux without the devils. 4. An old print on a single sheet of a dance of death, on which both the miser and the fool are exhibited in the clutches of the grim monarch. The rear may be closed with the same subject as represented in the various dances of death that still remain. Nor should it be concluded that because these prints exhibit no fool to grin at the impending scene, others might not have done so. The satirical introduction of this character on many occasions supports the probability that they did. Thus in a painting of the school of Holbein, an old man makes love to a girl, attended by a fool and death, to show, in the first instance, the folly of the thing, and, in the next, its consequences. It is unnecessary to pursue the argument, as every print of the above kind that may in future occur will itself speak much more forcibly than any thing which can here be added" (DOUCE).

fool—Merely, thou art death's, i. 477: The allusion in this passage is to a struggle between Death and the Fool; and would certainly seem to have no connection with the allusion in the passage of Pericles,—"To please the fool and death:" "Bishop Warburton and Mr. Malone have referred to old Moralities, in which the fool escaping from the pursuit of Death is introduced. Ritson has denied the existence of any such farces, and he is perhaps right with respect to printed ones; but vestiges of such a drama were observed several years ago at the fair of Bristol by the present writer [See what follows]" (DOUCE): "Mr. Douce, to whom our readers are indebted for several happy illustrations of Shakespeare, assures me that some years ago, at a fair in a large market-town, he observed a solitary figure sitting in a booth, and apparently exhausted with fatigue. This person was habited in a close black vest painted over with bones in imitation of a skeleton. But my informant being then very young, and wholly uninitiated in theatrical antiquities, made no inquiry concerning so whimsical a phenomenon. [Douce observes that the following additional circumstances communicated by him to Steevens had probably escaped his recollection,—"that his informant concerning the skeleton character at the fair remembered also to have seen another personage in the habit of a fool; and that arriving when the performances at the booth were finished for the evening, he could not succeed in procuring a repetition of the piece, losing thereby the means of all further information on the subject."'] Indeed, but for what follows, I might have been induced to suppose that the object he saw was nothing more or less than the hero of a well-known pantomime, entitled Harlequin Skeleton. This circumstance, however, having accidentally reached the ears of a venerable clergyman who is now more than eighty years of age, he told me that he very well remembered to have met with such another figure, above fifty years ago, at Salisbury. Being there during the time of some public meeting, he happened to call on a surgeon at the very instant when the representative of Death was brought in to be let blood on account of a tumble he had had on the stage, while in pursuit of his antagonist, a Merry Andrew, who very anxiously attended him (dressed also in character) to the phlebotomist's house. The same gentleman's curiosity, a few days afterwards, prevailed on him to be spectator of the dance in which our emblem of mortality was a performer. This dance, he says, entirely consisted of Death's contrivances to surprise the Merry Andrew, and of the Merry Andrew's efforts to elude the stratagems of Death, by whom at last he was overpowered; his finale being attended with such circumstances as mark the exit of the Dragon of Wantley. . . . It should seem that the general idea of this serio-comic pas-de-deux had been borrowed from the ancient Dance of Machabre, commonly called The Dance of Death, a grotesque ornament of cloisters, both here and in foreign parts. The aforesaid combination of figures, though erroneously ascribed to Hans Holbein, was certainly of an origin more remote than the times in which that eminent painter is known to have flourished" (STEEVENS): "The letter [representing a struggle between Death and the Fool] that occurs in Stowe's Survey of London, edit. 1618, 4to, is only an enlarged but imperfect copy from another belonging to a regular Dance of Death used as initials by some of the Basil printers in the sixteenth century, and which, from the extraordinary skill that accompanies their execution, will ever rank amongst the finest efforts in the art of engraving on blocks of wood or metal. Most of the subjects in this Dance of Death have undoubtedly been supplied by that curious pageant of mortality which, during the middle ages, was so great a favourite as to be perpetually exhibited to the people either in the sculpture and painting of ecclesiastical buildings, or in the books adapted to the service of the church: yet some of them but ill accord with those serious ideas which the nature of the subject is calculated to inspire. In these the artist has indulged a vein of broad and satirical humour which was not wholly reserved for the caricatures of modern times; and in one or two instances he has even overleaped the bounds of decency. The letter in Stowe's Survey is the only one that appears to have been imitated from the above alphabet. . . . It is to be remembered that in most of the old dances of death the subject of the fool is introduced; and it is, on the whole, extremely probable that some such representation might have suggested the image before us [in the letter copied from Stowe's Survey]" (DOUCE).

fool—Poor, a sort of term of endearment: I thank it, poor fool, ii. 93; Alas, poor fool, iii. 395; my poor fool (i.e. Cordelia) is hang'd! vii. 345; poor venomous fool, vii. 596; The poor fool, viii. 258; the poor dappled fools, iii. 21; the poor fools, v. 265. (With poor dappled fools compare "Then he stroking once or twice his prettie goate (which hee yet held fast by the hornes) said thus, Lie downe, pide foole, by me, for we shall haue time enough to returne home againe." Shelton's transl. of Don Quixote, Part First, p. 556, ed. 1612.)

"cause;" so that, according to his explanation of the word, the cause of Lucetta's taking up the papers was that they might not catch cold; the cause of the Captain's damming-up Pole's mouth was that it might not swallow the treasure of the realm; the cause of Pericles's being advised to desist was that he might not go on death's net; and the cause of the rich man not every hour surveying his treasure is that he may not blunt the fine point of seldom pleasure; philologists, however, are far from agreed about the etymology of for; see Webster's Dict., Latham's ed. of Johnson's Dict. &c.

forfeits, penalties, punishments: Remit thy other forfeits, i. 521.

forfeits in a barber's shop—Like the, i. 515: "[Barbers'] shops were places of great resort, for passing away time in an idle manner. By way of enforcing some kind of regularity, and, perhaps, at least as much to promote drinking, certain laws were usually hung up, the transgression of which was to be punished by specific forfeitures. It is not to be wondered, that laws of that nature were as often laughed at as obeyed." Nares's Gloss. in "Forfeits," &c.: Steevens pronounced the metrical list of forfeits published by Kenrick to be a forgery: but it would seem that they are not wholly so. "Upwards of forty years ago," says Moor, "I saw a string of such rules at the tonsor's of Alderton, near the sea. I well recollect the following lines to have been among them; as they are also in those of Nares [i.e. those cited from Kenrick by Nares in his Gloss.], said to have been copied in Northallerton in Yorkshire; forks presages snow—Whose face between her, vii. 325: "Whose face between her forks, i. e. her hand held before her face, in sign of modesty, with the fingers spread out, forky" (WARBURTON): "The construction is not 'Whose face between her forks, &c., but 'Whose face presages snow, &c. The following expression, I believe, every body but Mr. Warburton understands; and he might, if he had read a little farther; which would have saved him this ingenious note. See in Timon, act iv. sc. 3;

"Whose blush doth thaw the consecrated snow That lies on Dian's lap"

(EDWARDS): "To preserve the modesty of Mr. Edwards's happy explanation, I can only hint a reference to the word fourcheure in Cotgrave's Dictionary" (STEEVENS): Warburton's interpretation of this passage has more recently been adopted by a gentleman (Mr. W. C. Jourdain—in Transactions of the Philological Society, 1857, p. 134), who maintains that the lady in our text is looking through her fingers just as a woman is represented doing at the drunken and naked Noah in a picture by Gozzoli in the Campo Santo, and as maids are said to do at a certain object in Jonson's Sad Shepherd: but qq. if Whose face between her forks—i. e. "Whose face half concealed by her fingers"—presages snow reads as a complete sentence? and if it be considered as such, can presages snow mean anything else than "presages a fall of snow"? Besides, does not Whose face presages snow between her forks, i. e. "Whose face presages that snow lies inter femora," agree better than the other construction and explanation of the passage with what presently follows,—Down from the waist, &c.?

form that they cannot sit at ease on the old bench—Who stand so much on the new, A quibble on the double meaning of form, vi. 419.

formal, "retaining the proper and essential characteristic" (Johnson's Dict.), rational, sane: To make of him a formal man again ("to bring him back to his senses, and the forms of sober behaviour. So, in Measure for Measure, 'informal women,' for just the contrary," STEEVENS), ii. 46; any formal capacity ("any one in his senses, any one whose capacity is not disarranged, or out of form," STEEVENS), iii. 357; the formal Vice (the Vice who "puts on a formal demeanour," THEOBALD; "perhaps means the shrewd, the sensible Vice," MALONE; "the regular Vice, according to the form of the old dramas," Nares's Gloss., sub "Iniquity;" "the Vice who conducts himself according to a set form," KNIGHT), v. 394 (see Vice—Like to the old, &c.); Not like a formal man (a "decent, regular" man, JOHNSON; "a man in his senses," STEEVENS; "a man in form, i. e. shape," MALONE; a man "in a right form, an usual shape," Nares's Gloss.), vii. 526.

France, Young gentlemen would be as sad as night, Only for wantonness—When I was in, iv. 46: "I doubt whether our author had any authority for attributing this species of affectation to the French. He generally ascribes the manners of England to all other countries" (MALONE): The French may or may not have been the inventors of this singular mark of gentility, which, it is well known, was once highly fashionable in England. But Nash, in one of his tracts, expressly mentions an assumed melancholy as among the follies which "idle travellers" brought home from France. The passage is very curious; "What is there in Fraunce to be leard more than in England, but falshood in fellowship, perfect slouenrie, to loue no man but for my pleasure, to sweare Ah par la mort Dieu when a mans hammes are scabd? For the idle traueller (I meane not for the souldiour), I haue knowen some that haue continued there by the space of halfe a dozen yeare, and when they come [came] home, they haue hyd a little weerish leane face vnder a broad French hat, kept a terrible coyle with the dust in the streete in their long cloakes of gray paper, and spoke English strangely. Nought else haue they profited by their trauell, saue learnt to distinguish of the true Burdeaux grape, and knowe a cup of neate Gascoygne wine from wine of Orleance; yea, and peraduenture this also, to esteeme of the poxe as a pimple, to weare a veluet patch on their face, and walke melancholy with their armes folded." The Vnfortunate Traveller, Or, The Life of Jacke Wilton, 1594, sig. L 4.

Germany, can dearly witness—The upper, v. 563: "Alluding to the heresy of Thomas Muntzer, which sprung up in Saxony in the years 1521 and 1522. See an account of his tenets in Alexander Ross's View of all Religions in the World, 6th edit. p. 398, &c." (GREY.)

germens, germs, seeds, vii. 47, 294.

gest prefia'd for's parting—To let him there a month behind the, To detain him there a month beyond the time prescribed for his departure, iii. 421: In a royal "progress" the lodgings and stages for rest were called gests (from the Fr. giste); and, as Nares (in Gloss.) remarks, the table of the gests limited not only the places, but the time of staying at each.

gests, exploits, vii. 571.

get within him, get within his guard, close with him, ii. 44.

ghost, a dead body: see timely-parted ghost.

ghosted, haunted as a ghost, vii. 529.

giant—Some mollification for your, iii. 340: "Ladies, in romance, are guarded by giants, who repell all improper or troublesome advances. Viola, seeing the waiting-maid so eager to oppose her message, entreats Olivia to pacify her giant" (JOHNSON): "Viola likewise alludes to the diminutive size of Maria" (STEEVENS).

gib—A, vii. 172; as melancholy as a gib-cat, iv. 212: A gib or a gib-cat is an old male cat,—gib being the contraction of Gilbert ("A gibbe (or old male cat). Macou." Cotgrave's Fr. and Engl. Dict.: "A Gib-cat, Catus, felis mas." Coles's Lat. and Engl. Dict.): Ray gives "As melancholy as a gib'd [a corruption of gib] cat." Proverbs, p. 224, ed. 1768.

gibbets on the brewer's bucket—He that, iv. 361: "This alludes to the manner of carrying a barrel, by putting it on a sling, which is thus described by R. Holme: 'The slings are a strong, thick, yet short pole, not above a yard and an half long: to the middle is fixed a strong plate with a hole, in which is put a hook . . . on this hook is [are] fastened two other short chains, with broad-pointed hooks, with them clasping the ends of the barrels above the heads, the barrel is lifted up, and borne by two men to any place, as is shewed Chap. V. No. 146.' Acad. of Armory, B. iii. chap. vii. § 121. Most people who live in London have seen the operation, in taking a barrel from the dray, which is exactly represented by Holme's figure. It is evident, that to hang or gibbet a barrel on the pole, in this manner, must be done by a quick movement, so as to attach both hooks at once." Nares's Gloss.

gig, a kind of top ("Moscolo . . . a top, a gigge or twirle that children play with." Florio's Ital. and Engl. Dict.: "Toupie. A gig, or casting-top." Cotgrave's Fr. and Engl. Dict.), ii. 201, 209 (twice).

"Gadrouillette: A minx, gigue, flirt, callet, Gizie; (a fained word, applyable to any such cattell)." Cotgrave's Fr. and Engl. Dict.: "A Giglet, fæmina petulans." Coles's Lat. and Engl. Dict.).

gild the faces of the grooms withal; For it must seem their guilt—I'll (with a quibble on gild and guilt), vii. 24; gilt with Frenchmen's blood, iv. 21: "To gild any thing with blood is a very common phrase in the old plays" (STEEVENS): "At this we shall not be surprised, if we recollect that gold was popularly and very generally styled red." Nares's Gloss.: and see golden blood, &c.

gilded 'em—This grand liquor that hath, i. 234: Gilded is a cant expression for "drunk;" and in grand liquor there is an allusion to the grand elixir of the alchemists: compare medicine hath With his tinct gilded thee—That great.

gilded puddle, vii. 509: "On all puddles, where there is much mixture of urine, as in stable-yards, &c. there is formed a film, which reflects all the prismatic colours, and very principally yellow, and other tinges of a golden hue." Nares's Gloss.

gillyvors—Carnations and streak'd, iii. 468; gillyvors, iii. 469: "Gillofer or Gelofer. The old name for the whole class of carnations, pinks, and sweet-williams; from the French girofle, which is itself corrupted from the Latin cariophyllum. See an ample account of them in Lyte's Dodoens, pp. 172-175. In Langham's Garden of Health they are called galofers. See p. 281. Our modern word gillyflower is corrupted from this. See Stocks Gillofer in Lyte's Dodoens, p. 168. They were called stock from being kept both summer and winter." Nares's Gloss.: "Carnations and Gillovers, or gilloflowers, belong to the genus Dianthus, and were well known in the time of Shakspeare. Parkinson, in his 'Garden of all sorts of Pleasant Flowers,' dedicated to the Queen of Charles I., and published in 1629, says that 'carnations and gilloflowers be the chiefest flowers of account in all our English gardens;' and he calls them the pride of our English gardens, and the queen of delight and of flowers, and adds: 'They flower not until the heat of the year, which is in July, and continue flowering until the colds of the autumn check them, or until they have wholly outspent themselves; and these fair flowers are usually increased by slips.' He also distinguishes them from the gilloflower called stock gillover. Gerard, in his 'Herball,' describing the carnation-gilloflower, says: 'On the top of the stalks do grow very fair flowers, of an excellent sweet smell, and pleasant carnation colour, whereof it took his name.' Tusser, in 'Five Hundred Points of Good Husbandry,' notices gilloflowers red, white, and carnation, as distinct from wall gilloflowers and stock gilloflowers, and adds;

* 'The gilloflower also, the skilful doe know, Doth look to be covered in frost and in snow.'

Spenser, in 'Hobbinol's Dittie' [The Shepheards Calender, April] has the following;

'Bring hither the pink and purple cullumbine, With gillyflowers;
Bring sweet carnations [Bring coronations], and sops in wine, Worn of paramours.'

Sir W. J. Hooker's 'British Flora,' vol. i. p. 177, under Dianthus Caryophyllus (clove-pink carnation, or clove gillyflower), says; 'Few persons, on seeing this plant, as it grows on old walls, would suppose it was the origin of one of the 'fairest flowers of the season,'"

'The curious choice clove July flower,' or carnation of our gardens, with its endless diversity of colour and form; yet such it is always considered to be.' The streaked gillovors, noticed by Perdita, are produced by the flowers of one kind being impregnated by the pollen of another kind, and this art (or law) in nature Shakspeare alludes to in the delicate language used by Perdita, as well as to the practice of increasing the plants by slips." Beisly's Shakspeare's Garden, &c. p. 82.

gilt, gilding, golden show, display of gold: the double gilt of this opportunity, iii. 365; Our gayness and our gilt, iv. 482; Than gilt his trophy, vi. 145; Iron of Naples hid with English gilt, v. 261; when thou wast in thy gilt, vi. 559.

gilt, money: for the gilt of France—O guilt indeed! (with a quibble on gilt and guilt), iv. 434.

gimmel-bit, iv. 479: This was a sort of double bit, in which the parts were united as in a gimmel-ring (derived by most from the Latin gemellus): "There came into fashion, towards the sixteenth century, a class of rings which were called gimmel rings or gimmals, and which, as the name implies, consisted at first of two rings united in one, but which were afterwards formed of three, and sometimes even of four separate rings. When the rings were closed together, the place at which they fastened was covered externally with the representation of two hands clasped, and hence the term gimmel is often applied to a single ring when it bears this particular device" (WRIGHT): Compare joint-ring.

gimmers, ~~a~~ gimcrack, a quaint contrivance (akin to, if not a corruption of, gimmel: see the preceding article), v. 11.

gin, to begin, vii. 68; gins, i. 217; vii. 6, 124, 661; viii. 41.

gingerly, nicely, carefully, i. 269.

gipsy's lust—To cool a, vii. 497; Like a right gipsy, hath, at fast and loose, &c. vii. 574: In the first of these passages "gipsy is used both in the original meaning for an Egyptian, and in its accidental sense for a bad woman" (JOHNSON): in the second passage "There is a kind of pun arising from the corruption of the word Egyptian into gipsy. The old law-books term such persons as ramble about the country, and pretend skill in palmistry and fortune-telling, Egyptians" (SIR J. HAWKINS); and see fast and loose.

gird, a sarcasm, a gibe, iii. 175; v. 40 (see kindly).

gird, to gibe, to taunt, iv. 320; vi. 142.

girdle break—I pray God my, iv. 262: "Alluding to the old adage, 'ungirt, unblest'" (STEEVENS).

girdle—He knows how to turn his, ii. 133: "Large belts were worn with the buckle before; but for wrestling the buckle was turned behind, to give the adversary a fairer grasp at the girdle. To turn the buckle behind, therefore, was a challenge" (HOLT WHITE): "A proverbial phrase, given in this form by Ray—'If you be angry, you may turn the buckle of your girdle behind you,' ed. 1678, p. 226 [p. 175, ed. 1768]; in other words, you may change your temper or humour, alter it to the opposite side. It seems to have no connexion with either challenging or wrestling, as some have supposed; and it not unfrequently occurs in the form—'you may turn your buckle,' without any mention of the girdle" (HALLIWELL).

Gis, a corruption of Jesus, vii. 181.

give, to give, to show, as armorial bearings: give sheep in lions' stead, v. 21; the hearts of old gave hands; But our new heraldry is hands, not hearts (with a quibble on the word gave, and certainly without any allusion, as Warburton supposed, to the new order of baronets created by King James), vii. 431.

glad—To give him, viii. 20: Here glad would seem to be a substantive,—gladness.

gleek, a joke, a jeer, a scoff: First Mus. What will you give us? Pet. No money, on my faith; but the gleek,—I will give you the minstrel, vi. 460; gleeks, v. 46: "In some of the notes on this word it has been supposed to be connected with the card-game of gleek; but it was not recollected that the Saxon language supplied the term Glig, ludibrium, and doubtless a corresponding verb. Thus glee signifies mirth and jocularity; and gleeman or gligman, a minstrel or jocular. Gleek was therefore used to express a stronger sort of joke, a scoffing. It does not appear that the phrase to give the gleek was ever introduced in the above game, which was borrowed by us from the French, and derived from an original of very different import from the word in question. . . . To give the minstrel is no more than a punning phrase for giving the gleek. Minstrels and jesters were anciently called gleekmen or gligmen (DOUCE): "To give the gleek meant to pass a jest upon, to make a person appear ridiculous. To give the minstrel, which follows, has no such meaning. Peter only means, 'I will call you minstrel, and so treat you;' to which the musician replies, 'Then I will give you the serving creature,' as a personal retort in kind." Nares's Gloss. in "A Gleek."

gleek, to joke, to jeer, to scoff, ii. 290; gleeking, iv. 498.

Glendower is dead—A certain instance that, iv. 354: "Glendower did not die till after King Henry IV. Shakespeare was led into this error by Holinshed, who places Owen Glendower's death in the tenth year of Henry's reign" (MALONE).

glib, to gild, iii. 438.

Nares's Gloss., in "Den : " and see good den.

God's a good man : see man.

God's sories—By, ii. 360 : Is this a corruption of By God's saints ? or of By God's sanctity ? or By God's santé (i. e. health) ?

godfathers : Had I been judge, thou shouldst have had ten more, &c. —In christening shalt thou have two, ii. 405 : "ten more, i. e. a jury of twelve men, to condemn thee to be hanged" (THEOBALD) : This, as Malone observes, appears to have been an old joke.

gold kept by a devil—A mere hoard of, iv. 376 : "It was anciently supposed that all the mines of gold, &c. were guarded by evil spirits" (STEEVENS).

gold—He does sit in, "He is enthroned in all the pomp and pride of imperial splendour" (JOHNSON), vi. 221.

golden blood—His silver skin lac'd with his, vii. 28 : "The allusion is to the decoration of the richest habits worn in the age of Shakespeare, when it was usual to lace cloth-of-silver with gold, and cloth-of-gold with silver. The second of these fashions is mentioned in Much Ado about Nothing, act iii. sc. 4, 'Cloth-o'-gold . . . laced with silver' (STEEVENS): and see gild the faces, &c.

good even and twenty, twenty times good even, i. 364.

good fortune come to thee! For thou wast got i' the way of honesty, iv. 10: "Alluding to the proverb, 'Bastards are born lucky.' Philip wishes his brother good fortune, because Robert was not a bastard" (COLLIER).

good goose, bite not, a jocular proverbial expression, vi. 420: Ray gives "Good goose, do not bite." Proverbs, p. 56, ed. 1768.

good leave, ready assent: he gives them good leave to wander, iii. 7; Good leave, good Philip, iv. 11; You have good leave to leave us, iv. 216; Ay, good leave have you, v. 276.

good life, And observation strange—With, i. 217: "With good life may mean 'with exact presentation of their several characters,' with observation strange 'of their particular and distinct parts.' So we say, 'he acted to the life'" (JOHNSON).

good life—A song of, iii. 346: Here I believe, with Malone, that a song of good life means "a song of a moral turn;" but Steevens thinks that, though Sir Andrew accepts it in that signification, the Clown means a song "of harmless mirth and jollity."

good lord, a patron, a friend: he is my good lord, iii. 236; Stand my good lord, iv. 375.

good man: see second good.

good masters, patrons: we'll be thy good masters, iii. 501.

good my complexion! iii. 41: "Is a little unmeaning exclamatory address to her beauty, in the nature of a small oath" (RITSON).

good that did it—The, v. 551: Here the good is generally explained "the goodness" (see note 127, v. 590); but qy. does it mean "the good man"?

good time—In, i. 272, 481; v. 381, 393, 395, 416; vi. 396: "A la bonne heure. Happily, luckily, fortunately, in good time, in a good hour." Cotgrave's Fr. and Engl. Dict.

Good-nights: see Fancies, &c.

good-year, a corruption of goujeer (which see): What the good-year! ii. 83; iv. 342, 345 (It is spelt variously; "What a gudyere aile you, mother?" Day's Ile of Guls, ed. 1606, sig. H 2 verso: Mr. Collier and Mr. Grant White are, I believe, altogether mistaken when they deny that in this expression there is any allusion to the morbus Gallicus).

gorbellied, swag-bellied, paunchy, iv. 228.

gorge, throat, swallow,—stomach (Fr. gorge), iii. 435; vi. 551; vii. 197, 401.

gospell'd, &c.—So, "Of that degree of precise virtue," &c. (JOHNSON), so "kept in obedience of that precept of the gospel, which teaches us 'to pray for those that despitefully use us'" (STEEVENS), vii. 34.

GOSS—Sharp furzes, pricking, i. 223: "I know not how Shakespeare distinguished goss from furze; for what he calls furze is called goss or gorse in the midland counties" (STEEVENS): "By the latter, Shakespeare means the low sort of gorse that only grows upon wet ground, and which is well described by the name of whins in Markham's Farewell to Husbandry. It has prickles like those of a rose-tree or a gooseberry. Furze and whins occur together in Dr. Farmer's quotation from Holinshed" (TOLLET): "Minshew, in his Dictionary, at the word gorse, refers the reader to whinns." Nares's Gloss. sub "Gorse."

gossamer, "the long white filament which flies in the air in summer" (STEEVENS), vi. 426; vii. 323 (where Nares in Gloss. takes it to mean "cotton wool").

gossips—Yet 'tis not a maid, for she hath had, i. 298: "Gossips not only signify those who answer for a child in baptism, but the tattling women who attend lyings-in. The quibble between these is evident" (STEEVENS).

GOT that which we have—We have not, "We have not secured, we are not sure of retaining, that which we have acquired" (MALONE), v. 196.

got-den, Fluellen's corruption of god-den, good e'en, iv. 453.

Gough—Matthew, v. 178: "'A man of great wit [i. e. wisdom] and much experience in feats of chivalrie, the which in continuall warres had spent his time in serving [service] of the king and his father.' Holinshed, p. 635" (STEEVENS).

goujeer or goujeers, the venereal disease (from "Gonge . . . a Souldiers Pug or Punke; a Whore that follows the Camp." Cotgrave's Fr. and Engl. Dict.), vii. 336.

gourd and fullam hold, And high and low beguile the rich and poor, i. 355; The odds for high and low's alike (with a quibble), iii. 496: Gourds, it would seem, were false dice, which had a secret cavity (scooped out like a gourd?); fullams, false dice, which, on the contrary, were loaded with metal on one side, so as either to produce high throws, or to turn up low numbers, as was required, and were hence named high men or low men, also high fullams and low fullams: "Whalley says that false dice were called fullams, either because Fulham was the resort of sharpers, or because they were chiefly manufactured there. The last supposition is not improbable." Gifford's note on Jonson's Works, vol. ii. p. 111: Douce also states that fullams were so called, being chiefly made at Fulham: but Nares (Gloss. in v.) thinks it unlikely.

gouts, drops (Fr. gouttes), vii. 22.

government, regularity and decency of behaviour, forbearance, self-control: men of good government (with a quibble), iv. 211; Defect of manners, want of government, iv. 251; 'Tis government that makes them seem divine, v. 250; wife-like government, v. 522; smiling government ("complacency arising from the passions being under the command of reason," MALONE), viii. 327.

grace, physical virtue: mickle is the powerful grace that lies In herbs, vi. 415.

grace, at meat, was sometimes said in metre in our poet's time: What, in metre? i. 448: and see Apemantus' grace, vi. 517.

grace, of God, sir, and he hath enough—You have the, ii. 363: "The proverb referred to is [?] 'The grace of God is better than riches,' or, in the Scots form of it, 'God's grace is gear enough'" (STAUNTON).

grace, to favour, to honour, to bless: To grace us with your royal company, vii. 39: That ever grac'd me in thy company ("To grace seems here to mean the same as to bless, to make happy. So, gracious is kind, and graces are favours," JOHNSON), v. 429; the grac'd person of our Banquo, vii. 39.

gracious, lovely, attractive, graceful, beautiful: makes the faults gracious, i. 300: never shall it more be gracious, ii. 120; make it the more gracious, ii. 310; one shamed that was never gracious ("socapable, CALDECOTT), iii. 13; a gracious creature, iv. 43; his gracious parts, iv. 43; To make it gracious, vi. 34; My gracious silence, vi. 163; no face so gracious is as mine, viii. 380.

grained, ingrained: grained ("dyed in grain," JOHNSON,—an interpretation which, Malone observes, is confirmed by the words spots and tinct spots, vii. 169.

grained, furrowed, rough: this grained ("furrowed like the grain of wood," STEEVENS) face of mine, ii. 51; My grained ash (ashen spear), vi. 209; his grained bat (where, as in the preceding passage, Steevens explains grained "on which the grain of the wood was visible"), viii. 441.

gramercy, great thanks (Fr. grand merci), ii. 362; v. 401; vi. 297, 327, 526; gramercies, iii. 115, 118; vi. 526.

grand-guard, viii. 170: Meyrick, describing a suit of armour at Goodrich Court, tells us that "It has, over the breast, for the purpose of justing, what was called the grand garde, which is screwed on by three nuts, and protects the left side, the edge of the breast, and the left shoulder." Critical Inquiry into Ancient Armour, &c. vol. ii. p. 164, ed. 1842.

grand liquor: see gilded 'em, &c.

grange—At the moated, i. 483; the grange or mill, iii. 474; this is Venice; My house is not a grange, vii. 378: "Granges were the chief farm-houses of wealthy proprietors. The religious houses had granges on most of their estates. The officer who resided in them was called the Grangiarus. He superintended the farm, and at the grange the produce was laid up. The grange in Shakespeare [see the first of the above passages] was moated, therefore of some importance. This was occasionally done for defence. They were well-built stone houses, often of considerable extent and height, and, being placed in a central position to a large estate, they must often have been, as Shakespeare's grange, solitary, while the windows being small (as they were in all the edifices of that age), they would be gloomy also: fit scene for the moaning Mariana." Hunter's New Illust. of Shakespeare, vol. ii. p. 345: On the third of the above passages T. Warton remarks; "That is, 'you are in a populous city, not in [beside] a lone house, where a robbery might easily be committed. . . . In Lincolnshire, and in other northern counties, they call every lone house, or farm which stands solitary, a grange.'" grant is the necessity—The fairest, ii. 82: "'Grant' is—cause of granting: The fairest argument you can urge to prevail on me to be your advocate, is the necessity you stand in of one to do you that service" (CAPELL). *

grants scarce distinction—That Without the which a soldier, and his sword, vii. 538: see note 88, vii. 611.

grate, the iron-barred window of a prison : you had looked through the grate, i. 366.

grate, "to rub hard,—to offend, as 'by oppression or importunity" (Johnson's Dict.), to disturb, to vex : What peer hath been suborn'd to grate on you, iv. 365 ; I have grated upon my good friends, i. 365 ; Grates me ("offends me, is grating to me," KNIGHT), vii. 498 ; Grating so harshly all his days of quiet, vii. 147.

gratulate, to congratulate, v. 416 ; vi. 289, 519.

gratulate, to be rejoiced at, worthy of gratulation : that is more gratulate, i. 521.

gree, to agree, ii. 362 ; greed, i. 285, 492 ; iii. 135, 136 ; vii. 529 ; greeing, viii. 406.

Greece upon thee—The plague of, vi. 27 : "Alluding perhaps to the plague sent by Apollo on the Grecian army" (JOHNSON) : Malone supposes that Shakespeare was thinking here of Lydgate's Auncient Historie of the Warres between the Trojans and the Grecians (see vi. 2) ; Steevens, that he had an eye to Hall's or Chapman's Iliad.

Greek—A merry, vi. 12 ; the merry Greeks, vi. 69 : "Græcari among the Romans signified to play the reveller" (STEEVENS) : Hence our proverbial expression, "As merry as a Greek."

Greek—Foolish, iii. 378 : "Means certainly nothing more than 'foolish jester : ' pergræcor is translated by Coles 'to revel, to play the merry Greek or boon companion'" (MALONE) : see the preceding article.

green, so quick, so fair an eye—So, vi. 448 ; thy rare green eye, viii. 196 ; His eyes were green as leeks ("as green as a leek" being a not uncommon expression), ii. 320 : "Green eyes were considered as peculiarly beautiful . . . The Spanish writers are peculiarly enthusiastic in the praise of green eyes. So Cervantes, in his novel El Zeloso Extremeno : 'Ay que ojos tan grandes y tan rasgados ! y por el siglo de mi madre, que son verdes, que no parecen sino que son de esmeraldas" (WEBER): Gifford, after observing that he has "seen many Norwegian seamen with eyes of this hue, which were invariably quick, keen, and glancing," and that the expression "green eyes" is common in our early poets, cites the following sonnet by Drummond of Hawthornden;

"When Nature now had wonderfully wrought
 All Auristella's parts, except her eyes,
 To make those twins two lamps in beauty's skies
 She counsel of the starry synod [v. l. "her starry senate"] sought.
 Mars and Apollo first did her advise
 To wrap in colours black those comets bright,
 That Love him so might soberly disguise,
 And, unperceived, wound at every sight:
 Chaste Phœbe spake for purest azure dyes:
 But Jove and Venus green about the light,
 To frame thought best, as bringing most delight,
 That to pin'd hearts hope might for aye arise.
 Nature, all said, a paradise of green
 There plac'd, to make all love which have them seen."

Note on translation of Juvenal, Sat. xiii. 223.

green, indeed, is the colour of lovers, ii. 173: Here the commentators variously explain the allusion,—to green eyes (as reckoned beautiful), to jealousy, to the willow worn by unsuccessful lovers, and to their melancholy: but qy. if all these explanations be not equally wrong? Compare Browne's Shepherds Pipe;

"Greene well befits a louters HEATE, But blacke beseemes a mourner."

Fourth Eglogue, sig. 15, ed. 1620.

green, unripe, inexperienced: How green you are, iv. 44; green virginity, vi. 547; green in judgment, vii. 512; folly and green minds, vii. 401; his greener days, iv. 448.

green, new, fresh: whiles your boots are green, iii. 148; since griefs are green, iv. 385; Tybalt, yet but green in earth, vi. 455; The memory be green, vii. 108.

green, sickly: to look so green and pale, vii. 19.

greenly, novice-like, awkwardly, foolishly, iv. 502; vii. 181.

Gregory de Cássalis: see Cassalis, &c.

Gregory—Turk: see Turk Gregory.

grief, pain: Out of my grief, iv. 216; the grief of a wound, iv. 277; Weaken'd with grief, iv. 318.

grief, grievance: To build a grief on, iv. 366; particulars of our grief, iv. 370; I here forget all former griefs, i. 323; The nature of your griefs, iv. 270; our griefs heavier than our offences, iv. 365; To know your griefs, iv. 367; these griefs shall be with speed redress'd, iv. 371; since griefs are green, iv. 385; redress of all these griefs, vi. 629; Speak your griefs softly, vi. 666; The griefs between ye, vii. 518.

grievances—I pity much your, i. 310: Here grievances is explained by Johnson to mean "sorrows, sorrowful affections : " but see note 77, i. 335.

grime, dirt, sullyng blackness, ii. 19, 28.

grime, to dirt, to sully deeply, vii. 283.

gripe, a griffin (γρῖψ), viii. 302 (This word frequently means "a vulture ;" but such does not seem to be its signification in the present passage).

grise, a step, iii. 363 ; vi. 550 ; vii. 389 ; viii. 138.

(" She gan anone by greces to assende
Of a Touret in to an hye pynacle."

Lydgate's Warres of Troy, B. i. sig. æ 1 verso, ed. 1555.)

Grissel—For patience she will prove a second, iii. 136 : The allusion is to Chaucer's Griselda in The Clerk of Oxenford's Tale. Chaucer took the story from Boccaccio ; but it is much older than Boccaccio's time.

groat—A half-fac'd, iv. 7 : A sneer (as Theobald observes) at the meagre visage of the elder brother, which is compared to a silver groat that bore the king's face in profile : but there is an anachronism here ; for in the time of King John there were no groats ; and groats with a half-face, or profile, were first issued by King Henry VII.

gross, palpable : to all sense 'tis gross You love my son, iii. 219 ; if 'tis not gross in sense, vii. 383.

grossly, palpably : Working so grossly in a natural cause, iv. 440 ; with what poor judgment he hath now cast her off appears too grossly, vii. 257.

ground, a musical term,—the subject or air on which variations or descants were to be raised : on that ground I'll make a holy descant, v. 410.

groundlings—The, The spectators who stood on the ground in that part of the theatre which answered to the pit in a modern playhouse, vii. 153.

grow, to accrue : knowing how the debt grows, ii. 41 ; the sum that I do owe to you Is growing to me, ii. 30.

grow to a point, proceed to a conclusion, to business, ii. 272.

guard, to face, to trim, to ornament : To guard a title, iv. 50 ; guarded with fragments, ii. 81 ; a livery more guarded than his fellows', ii. 363 ; guarded with rags, iv. 364 ; guarded with yellow, v. 483.

guards, facings, trimmings : priestly guards, i. 479 ; the guards are but slightly basted on neither, ii. 81 ; guards on wanton Cupid's hose, ii. 198.

guards of th' ever-fixed pole—The, vii. 395 : "Alluding to the star Arctophylax" (JOHNSON) : "I wonder that none of the advocates for Shakspeare's learning has observed that Arctophylax literally signifies the guard of the bear" (STEEVENS).

guerdon, a reward, a recompense, ii. 140, 187.

guerdon'd, rewarded, recompensed, v. 126, 286.

guidon, iv. 479 : see note 120, iv. 525. (The word was not unfamiliar to our early dramatists ; g.

" Caesar o nullo written in my guydon, When with my troopes victoriously I ride on."

Barnes's Divils Charter, 1607, sig. c 4 verso.)

guiled shore, ii. 382 : see note 43, ii. 421.

guiltless blood-shedding—These hands are free from, v. 180 : "Guiltless is not an epithet to blood-shedding, but to blood. These hands are free from shedding guiltless or innocent blood" (MALONE).

guinea-hen, a cant term for a prostitute, vii. 392.

Guinever—Queen, "King Arthur's queen, not over famous for fidelity to her husband," &c. (STEEVENS), ii. 191.

gules, the heraldic term for "red," vi. 552 ; vii. 143.

gulf, swallow : gulf Of the ravin'd salt-sea shark, vii. 46.

gull—A naked, vi. 524 : Wilbraham, in his Attempt at a Glossary of some Words used in Cheshire, gives "Gull, s. A naked gull ; so are called all nestling birds in quite an unfledged state : " Here is a play on the word gull, meaning both "a bird" and "a dupe."

gull, the cuckoo's bird—That ungentle, iv. 275 : see note 129, iv. 305.

gull, a trick, an imposition : I should think this a gull, ii. 99.

gummed velvet—He frets like a, iv. 226 : Velvet, when stiffened with gum to make it sit well, was very apt to fret.

gun-stones, iv. 432 : "When ordnance was first used, they discharged balls, not of iron, but of stone" (JOHNSON) : Even after the introduction of iron shot for heavy artillery, the term gun-stone was retained in the sense of "bullet : " "Gonne-stone—plombée, boulet, bovie de fonte." Palsgrave's Lesclarcissement de la Lang. Fr., 1530, fol. xxxvii. (Table of Subst.).

gurnet—A soused, A pickled gurnet,—a not uncommon term of reproach (perhaps because it was reckoned a coarse and vulgar sort of food), iv. 267.

gust, to taste, to perceive, iii. 427.

Guy—Sir, Guy of Warwick, a well known hero of romance, v. 568.

H.

H—For the letter that begins them all, ii. 115 : "Margaret asks Beatrice for what she cries hei, h-ho ; Beatrice answers, for an H, that is, for an ache or pain [the word ache being formerly pronounced like the letter H]" (JOHNSON).

habit, "conduct, behaviour" (CAPELL): If I do not put on a sober habit, ii. 364.

habit—You know me by my, iv. 462: "That is, by his herald's coat. The person of a herald being inviolable, was distinguished in those times of formality by a peculiar dress, which is likewise yet worn on particular occasions" (JOHNSON): see herald's coat, &c.

hack—To hick and to, i. 394: Here, according to Steevens, Mrs. Quickly uses hack in the sense of "do mischief."

hack—These knights will, i. 361: A very obscure passage, about the meaning of which sundry conjectures have been offered; the most probable one perhaps being that there is an allusion to the extravagant number of knights created by King James, and that hack is equivalent to "become cheap or vulgar."

haggard, a wild, untrained hawk ("Faulcon haggard. A Haggard; a Faulcon that preyed for herself long before she was taken." Cotgrave's Fr. and Engl. Dict. sub "Hagard:" and see Latham's Faulconry, &c. 1658, concerning the Haggard Faulcon, the Haggard Goshawk, the Haggard Lanner, and—in his First Book, chap. iii.—"the manner of reclaiming your Haggard"), iii. 155, 156, 361; haggards, ii. 104.

haggard, wild, wanton, libertine (see the preceding article): If I do prove her haggard, vii. 424.

haggish, deformed, or deforming, iii. 214.

hag-seed, offspring of a hag or witch, i. 188.

hair, grain, texture, character: against the hair of your professions, i. 373; The quality and hair of our attempt, iv. 265 (see note 106, iv. 301); merry against the hair, vi. 10; to stop in my tale against the hair, vi. 420. ("Against the hair, Invitâ Minervâ, aversante naturâ." Coles's Lat. and Engl. Dict.) hair on's head but 'tis a Valentine—There's not a, i. 296: "Launce is still quibbling. He is now running down the hare that he started when he entered" (MALONE).

hair than wit—She hath more, i. 300: A proverbial expression, founded on the notion that much hair indicated a lack of brains: Ray gives "Bush natural, more hair than wit." Proverbs, p. 180, ed. 1768.

hair to stare—That mak'st my blood cold, and my, vi. 675; With hair up-staring, i. 183: Formerly this expression not only found a place in the most serious poetry, but belonged to the phraseology of daily life: "Les cheveux luy dressent. His hair stares, or stands annend." Cotgrave's Fr. and Engl. Dict. sub "Dresser;" and compare Florio's Ital. and Engl. Dict. sub "Arricciare."

hair, &c.—The courser's: see courser's hair, &c.

halcyon beaks with every gale—Turn their, vii. 280: "The halcyon is the bird otherwise called the king-fisher. The vulgar opinion was, that [the dead body of] this bird, if hung up, would vary with the wind [turn its breast to the wind], and by that means show from what point it blew" (STEEVENS,—who compares passages from Marlowe's Jew of Malta, Storer's Life and Death of Wolsey, and Lupton's Notable Things): see also Browne's Vulgar Errors, Book iii. Chap. x., "That a King-fisher, hanged by the bill, sheweth where the wind lay." (That very pleasing writer, Charlotte Smith—though herself a poetess and well acquainted with English poetry—appears not to have remembered the present line of Shakespeare when she concluded her account of the halcyon as follows: "I have once or twice seen a stuffed bird of this species hung up to the beam of a cottage ceiling. I imagined that the beauty of the feathers had recommended it to this sad preëminence, till on inquiry I was assured that it served the purpose of a weather-vane; and though sheltered from the immediate influence of the wind, never failed to show every change by turning its beak from [to] the quarter whence the wind blew. So that some superstition as to the connexion between the wind and the Halcyon seems, like many other relicts of almost forgotten prejudices, to linger still in our cottages." A Natural History of Birds, &c. p. 88, ed. 1807.) half-caps, caps half-taken-off,—slight salutations, vi. 530.

half-fac'd groat—A: see groat, &c.

half-fac'd sun—Our: see sun—Our half-fac'd.

half-kirtles: see kirtle.

half-pence—She tore the letter into a thousand, ii. 99: Here half-pence means minute pieces: "the half-pence of Elizabeth," as Douce remarks, "were of silver, and about the size of a modern silver penny."

halidom, holiness, faith, sanctity, i. 309; iii. 177; v. 558; vi. 399: "Halidome or Holidome, an old word, vsed by old countrey-women, by manner of swearing: by my halidome, of the Saxon word Halig-dome, ex halig, i. sanctum, et dome, i. dominium aut iudicium." Minsheu's Guide into Tongues, ed. 1617.

hall, a hall!—A, An exclamation formerly common, to make a clear space in a crowd, vi. 404.

Hallowmas—To speak puling, like a beggar at, i. 274; at Hallowmas, i. 460 (twice); like Hallowmas, iv. 168: Hallowmas is the mass or feast-day of All-Hallows or All-Saints: "It is worth remarking, that on All-Saints-Day the poor people in Staffordshire, and perhaps in other country places, go from parish to parish a souling, as they call it, i.e. begging and puling (or singing small, as Bailey's Dict. explains puling) for [a sort of cakes called] soul-cakes, or any good thing to make them merry. This custom is mentioned by Peck, and seems a remnant of Popish superstition to pray for departed souls, particularly those of friends. The souler's song in Staffordshire is different from that which Mr. Peck mentions, and is by no means worthy publication" (TOLLET): "Several of these terms clearly point out the condition of this benevolence, which was, that the beggars should pray for the souls of the giver's departed friends on the ensuing day, Nov. 2, which was the feast of All Souls." Nares's Gloss.

Ham's Castle, v. 313 : "A castle in Picardy, where Oxford was confined for many years" (MALONE).

hand—At any, and in any hand, At any rate, in any case, iii. 124, 253.

hand, quoth pickpurse—At, iv. 225 : A proverbial expression of frequent occurrence in our early writers.

hands—As tall a man of his, i. 356 ; thou art a tall fellow of thy hands, iii. 501 ; a proper fellow of my hands, iv. 336 : "Of his hands was a phrase equivalent to 'of his inches' or 'of his size,' a hand being the measure of four inches. 'As tall a man of his hands' [=as bold or able a man of his hands], &c. was a phrase used, most likely, for the sake of a jocular equivocation in the word tall, which meant either bold or high." Nares's Gloss, in v. "Hand," &c. : "A man of his hands, Homo strenuus, impiger, manu promptus." Coles's Lat. and Engl. Dict. ● hands—Of all, On all hands, ii. 203.

hands—With the help of your good, "By your applause, by clapping hands" (JOHNSON), i. 236.

handsaw—I know a hawk from a, vii. 141 : A very old proverbial expression, in which it would certainly seem that handsaw is a corruption of hernshaw (i.e. heron) : Ray gives "He knows not a hawk from a hand-saw." Proverbs, p. 196, ed. 1768, hand-fast, a contract, a betrothal, a marriage-engagement : to hold The hand-fast to her lord, vii. 650.

hand-fast—In, In custody (properly—in mainprise, in the custody of a friend on security given for appearance) : If that shepherd be not in hand-fast, iii. 488.

handy-dandy, vii. 326 : A very old game among children : Florio has "Bazzichiare, to shake betweene two hands, to play at handie dandie." Ital. and Engl. Dict. : As it is now played—a child hides something in his hand, and makes his play-fellow guess in which hand it is : if the latter guesses rightly, he wins the article, if wrongly, he loses an equivalent : "Sometimes," says Mr. Halliwell, "the game is played by a sort of sleight of hand, changing the article rapidly from one hand into the other, so that the looker-on is often deceived, and induced to name the hand into which it is apparently thrown. This is what Shakespeare alludes to by changing places."

hang it first, and draw it afterwards—You must, ii. 106 : "Alluding probably to the method sometimes practised of drawing teeth by means of a waxed string" (TALBOT).

hanged an hour—Be, i. 516: A petty imprecation, in which the words "an hour" are little more than expletive.

hangers, vii. 204 (three times): "i.e. the fringed loops appended to the girdle, in which the dagger or small sword usually hung." Gifford's note on Jonson's Works, vol. ii. p. 154: "Under this term were comprehended four graduated straps, &c., that hung down in a belt on each side of its receptacle for the sword. I write this with a most gorgeous belt, at least as ancient as the time of James I. before me. It is of crimson velvet embroidered with gold, and had belonged to the Somerset family" (CALDECOTT).

hangman, an executioner: the hangman's axe, ii. 388 (So in Fletcher's Prophetess, act iii. sc. 1, Dioclesian, who had stabbed Aper, is called "the hangman of Volusius Aper;" and in Jacke Drums Entertainment, Brabant Junior, being prevented by Sir Edward from stabbing himself, declares that he is too wicked to live;

"And therefore, gentle knight, let mine owne hand Be mine own hangman." Sig. B 3 verso, ed. 1616:

compare, too, a play of a much later date, the Duke of Buckingham's Rehearsal, where Bayes says; "I come out in a long black veil, and a great huge hangman behind me, with a furr'd cap, and his sword drawn; and there tell 'em plainly, that if, out of good nature, they will not like my play, I'gad, I'll e'en kneel down, and he shall cut my head off." Buckingham's Works, vol. i. p. 21, ed. 1775).

hangman—The little, ii. 106: Farmer says that this character of Cupid is from Sidney's Arcadia (B. ii. p. 156, ed. 1598), where we are told that Jove appointed Cupid

"In this our world a hangman for to be Of all those fooles that will have all they see."

Perhaps so; and see the preceding article: But qy. does Shakespeare use hangman here as equivalent to "rascal, rogue"? (In Johnson's Dict. sub "Hangman," the present passage is cited to exemplify the word employed as a term of reproach): it is at least certain that "hangman" having come to signify "an executioner in general," was afterwards used as a general term of reproach (So in Guy Earl of Warwick, a Tragedy, printed in 1661, but acted much earlier; "Faith, I doubt you are some lying hangman" (i.e. rascal); sig. B 3 verso).

hangman, rascally (see the preceding article): the hangman boys in the market-place, i. 312.

Hannibal—wicked, Elbow's blunder for wicked Cannibal, i. 461.

Hannibal, &c.—A witch by fear, not force, like, v. 21: "See Hannibal's stratagem to escape by fixing bundles of lighted twigs on the horns of oxen, recorded in Livy, lib. xxii. c. 16" (HOLT WHITE).

happiest hearers of the town—The first and, v. 483: "happy appears in the present instance to have been used with one of its Roman significations, i.e. propitious or favourable" (STEEVENS).

happily, haply : Happily you something know, i. 496 ; happily we might be interrupted, iii. 166 ; a gentleman that happily knows more, iii. 497 ; Might happily have prov'd, v. 150 ; happily, For my example, v. 549 ; Happily you may catch her, vi. 332 ; Which, happily, fore-knowing may avoid, vii. 107 ; Happily, he's the second time come to them, vii. 141 ; And happily repent, vii. 423 ; who may happily be a little angry, vii. 694 ; Though happily her careless wear, viii. 134.

happiness, good fortune : happiness prefer me to a place, viii. 150.

happy, accomplished : tell him Wherein you're happy, vii. 684.

happy man be his dole ! i. 388 ; iii. 117, 425 ; iv. 228 : Means properly, "Let his share or lot be the title 'happy man,' or prove happiness." "It was, however, used as a general wish for good success in a manner which makes it difficult to give it any literal construction ; particularly as an exclamation before a doubtful contest, where it seems equivalent to 'Happy be he who succeeds best.'" Nares's Gloss. sub "dole." Ray gives "Happy man happy dole, or Happy man by his dole." Proverbs, p. 116, ed. 1768.

hard, unpleasant : Fearing some hard news from the warlike band, viii. 294.

hardiment, hardiness, bravery, deeds of bravery, iv. 218 ; vi. 72 ; vii. 717.

hare—What sayest thou to [the melancholy of] a? iv. 212 : "The following extract from Turberville's Book on Hunting and Falconry is a better explanation of this passage than any given by the commentators ; 'The Hare first taught us the use of the hearbe called Wyld Succory, which is very excellent for those which are disposed to be melancholicke : shee herselfe is one of the most melancholicke beasts that is, and to heale her own infirmitie she goeth commonly to sit under that hearbe'" (STAUNTON).

hare of whom the proverb goes—The, &c. iv. 16 : "The proverb alluded to is 'Mortuo leoni et lepores insultant.' Erasmii Adag." (MALONE) : There Erasmus cites a Greek epigram—"cujus argumentum sump-tum est ex Homericæ Iliad. x, ubi Hectorem ab Achille jam interfectum circumstant Græci, mortuo insultantes," &c. :

Βάλλετε νῦν μετὰ πότμον ἐμὸν δέμας, ὅττι καὶ αὐτοὶ Νεκροῦ σώμα λεόντος ἐφωβρίζουσι λαγῶαι.

Strike ye-my body, now that life is fled :
So hares insult the lion when he's dead.

harlot, base, depraved : the harlot king, iii. 442.

harlots, base, depraved persons : While she with harlots feasted in my house, ii. 48.

harlotry, a term of reproach for a woman,—slut: a peevish self-will'd harlotry, iv. 251; vi. 453; He sups to-night with a harlotry, vii. 451.

harlotry, as an adjective: harlotry (=ribald) players, iv. 242.

harness, armour, iv. 256; vi. 90, 517; vii. 68, 571.

harnessed, armed, iv. 67; vi. 9.

harp—The miraculous, The harp of Amphion, to the sound of which the walls of Thebes arose, i. 195.

harried, used roughly, ill-treated, vii. 542.

Harry ten shillings, iv. 360: "This is an anachronism; there were no coins of ten shillings value in the reign of Henry the Fourth. Shakespeare's Hurry ten shillings were those of Henry the Seventh or Eighth; but he thought these might do for any other Harry" (DOUCE).

"haste—At Ardea to my lord with more than," viii. 325: According to the formula on old English letters, which (as Steevens observes) were superscribed—"With post post haste."

hatch—O'er the, iv. 9: A proverbial expression applied to illegitimate children (Compare window—In at the).

hatch—Take the, Leap the hatch (or half-door), iv. 67.

hatch'd in silver—Venerable Nestor, vi. 18: a passage, says Gifford, "on which the commentators have wasted so many words. Literally, to hatch is to inlay; metaphorically, it is to adorn, to beautify, with silver, gold, &c." Note on Shirley's Works, vol. ii. p. 801.

hatched—To keep our door, viii. 49: It appears that a hatch (or half-door) with spikes upon it was a distinguishing mark of a brothel.

hatchet, The help of, v. 180: see note 166, v. 223.

hateful, full of hate, malignant: The hateful commons, iv. 134.

haught, haughty, v. 120, 256, 389; haught-insulting, iv. 163.

haughty, high, elevated, high-spirited: this haughty-great attempt, v. 35; these haughty words of hers, v. 48; full of haughty courage, v. 51.

haunt—Out of, "Out of company" (STEEVENS), vii. 173.

have, to conceive, to understand: You have me, have you not? vii. 130.

having; possessions, estate, fortune: The gentleman is of no having, i. 380; your having in beard, iii. 45; my having is not much, iii. 376; of what having, iii. 486; our best having, v. 515; great prediction Of noble having, vii. 9; Or scant our former having ("our former allowance of expense," JOHNSON), vii. 454; my present havings, v. 535; Whose rarest havings made the blossoms dote (but explained by Malone, "Whose accomplishments were so extraordinary that the flower of the young nobility were passionately enamoured of her"), viii. 446.

aviour, behaviour, i. 355; iii. 373; iv. 115; vi. 412; vii. 110, 679.

avock—Cry, the signal for indiscriminate slaughter, no quarter being given, iv. 22; vi. 188, 654.

ay, the Italian hai, "you have it,"—an exclamation in fencing when a thrust or hit is received by the antagonist: the punto reverso! the hay! vi. 418.

ay—Let them dance the, ii. 211: "This dance was borrowed by us from the French. It is classed among the brawls in Thoinot Arbeau's Orchesographie [1588]" (DOUCE): "To dance the hay, ad figuram sepius choreas ducere!" Coles's Lat. and Engl. Dict. (Sir John Davies writes

"Thus when at first Loue had them marshalled,
As earst he did the shapelesse masse of things,
He taught them rounds and winding Heyes to tread,
And about trees to cast themselves in rings," &c.
Orchestra, &c. st. 64.)

eadsman, an executioner, iii. 269.

health, "welfare, or safety generally" (CRAIK): Have mind upon your health, vi. 667.

heap, a mass, a body: thy whole heap, viii. 7: see note 10, viii. 76.

heart of mine in thee—He started one poor, iii. 379: Here is a manifest quibble between heart and hart.

hearted throne, "the heart on which thou wast enthroned" (JOHNSON), vii. 429.

heart's all—The, "The intention with which the entertainment is given" (JOHNSON) is all, iv. 394.

eat—If you take not the, iv. 349; We must do something, and i' the heat, vii. 258: "Alluding, I suppose, to the proverb, 'Strike while the iron is hot'" (STEEVENS).

eat, to run a heat or course, as in a race: With spur we heat an acre. But to the goal, iii. 423; on which line Capell remarks, "The expressions [sic], 'But, to the goal,' answer to these at present in use with us—But, to come to the point: . . . her phrase immediately before it, 'heat an acre,' has not been trac'd any where; yet is it not therefore false, and an object for alterers, implying clearly—o'er-run it:" see note 8, iii. 508.

eat, heated: though heat red-hot, iv. 47.

heaven defend, heaven forbid, vii. 391.

heaven to earth, iv. 280: see note 141, iv. 306.

heaven's benediction com'st To the warm sun!—Thou out of, vii. 282: This proverbial expression, meaning to quit a better for a worse situation, is found in various authors from Heywood down to Swift: the former has

"In your running from him to me, yee runne Out of Gods blessing into the warme sunne."

Dialogue on Prouerbs, P. 2,—Workes, sig. a2 ver. ed. 1598; and the latter,

"Lord Sparkish. They say, marriages are made in heaven; but I doubt, when she was married, she had no friend there.

Neverout. Well, she's got out of God's blessing into the warm sun." . . .
Polite Conversation, Dialogue 1,—Works, vol. ix.
 p. 428, Scott's sec. ed.:

Ray gives "Out of God's blessing into the warm sun. Ab equis ad asinos." Proverbs, p. 192, ed. 1768: We must suppose that Kent alludes to Lear's being worse treated by Regan than he had been by Goneril.

heavens—For the, A petty oath, equivalent to "By heavens," ii. 86, 360: see note 15, ii. 148.

heavy, thick, cloudy, dark: the heavy middle of the night, i. 492; it is a heavy night, vii. 456.

hebenon—juice of cursed, vii. 124: It has been disputed whether hebenon means here "henbane" or "ebony:" Grey suggests (very improbably) that it was "designed by a metathesis, either of the poet or transcriber, for henebon, that is henbane;" and (what is more to the purpose) quotes a passage of Pliny where we are told that the oil of the seeds of henbane dropped into the ears will injure the understanding (Nat. Hist. lib. xxv. cap. 4): on the other hand, a passage of Marlowe's Jew of Malta, cited by Steevens, shows that the juice or sap of hebon (ebony) was accounted poisonous;

"the blood of Hydra, Lerna's bane,
 The juice of hebon, and Cocytus' breath."

Works, p. 164, ed. Dyce, 1858;

and Douce observes that "in the English edition by Batman of Bartholomæus de proprietatibus rerum, the article for the wood ebony is entitled 'Of Ebeno, chap. 52.' This comes so near to the text, that it is presumed very little doubt will now remain on the occasion. It is not surprising that the dropping into the ears should occur, because Shakspeare was perfectly well acquainted with the supposed properties of henbane as recorded in Holland's translation of Pliny, and elsewhere, and might apply this mode of use to any other poison" (In Beisly's Shakspeare's Garden, &c, p. 4, it is suggested that here Shakspeare may have written "enoron," i. e. nightshade—a villanous conjecture).

hedge, "to creep along by the hedge; not to take the direct and open path, but to steal covertly through circumvolutions" (JOHNSON); "Hedging is by land what coasting is by sea" (MASON): am fain to shuffle, to hedge (creep slyly, shift, skulk), and to lurch, i. 366; Or hedge (sheer off, swerve) aside from the direct forthright, vi. 57; how he coasts And hedges his own way, v. 532.

hedge, and hedge in, to shut in: And hedg'd ("confined," JOHNSON) me by his will, ii. 358; you forget yourself, To hedge me in ("to limit my authority by your direction or censure," JOHNSON; but Mr. Craik suggests, very improbably I think, that Cassius may have used this expression in consequence of the preceding word bay,—"that there may have been some degree of confusion in the minds of our auditors between bait and bay, and that both words, imperfectly conceived in their import and origin, were apt to call up a more or less distinct notion of encompassing or closing in"), vi. 667.

hedge out, to shut out : Nay, this shall not hedge us out (put us off), vi. 45.

hedge-pig, a (young?) hedge-hog, vii. 45.

heels—I scorn that with my, ii. 115 ; scorn running with thy heels, ii. 359 : A not uncommon proverbial expression ; which is manifestly alluded to in the line, Beating his kind embracements with her heels, viii. 249.

hefts, heavings, retchings, iii. 435.

hell—One that, before the judgment, carries poor souls to, One that, on meane process, carries poor souls to prison (hell being a cant term for the worst dungeon in the prisons of our poet's time), ii. 35.

helmed—The business he hath, The business he hath steered through, i. 487.

helpless, affording no help : helpless patience, ii. 13 ; the helpless balm of my poor eyes, v. 356 ; helpless berries, viii. 259 ; helpless smoke of words, viii. 316.

hence, henceforward : Make less thy body, hence, and more thy grace, iv. 400.

henchman, a page, ii. 277.

hent, a hold, an opportunity to be seized, vii. 166.

hent, to seize, to take possession of, to take hold of, iii. 466 ; i. 506 (the participle).

herald's coat without sleeves—A, The coat or vest called a tabard, iv. 268.

herb of grace, iii. 271 : see rue, &c.

Herculean Roman does become The carriage of his chafe—How this, vii. 507 : "Antony traced his descent from Anton, a son of Hercules" (STEEVENS). (I must notice here, what has only recently met my eye,—the alteration of the very Shakespearian expression The carriage of his chafe, to "The carriage of his chief," made by Mr. Staunton in his edition of our poet : "Can any one," he says, "who considers the epithet 'Herculean,' which Cleopatra applies to Antony, and reads the following extract from Shakespeare's authority, hesitate for an instant to pronounce chafe a silly blunder of the transcriber or compositor for 'chief,' meaning Hercules, the head or principal of the house of the Antonii? 'Now it had bene a speech of old time, that the family of the Antonij were descended from one Anton the son of Hercules, whereof the family took the name. This opinion did Antonius seeke to confirme in all his doings: not only resembling him in the likenesse of his body, as we have said before, but also in the wearing of his garments. Life of Antonius. North's Plutarch:"

1. I am aware that the term chief is used in the Highlands of Scotland to signify the head of a family or clan (as "the chief of the Campbells," "the chief of the Macleods," &c.); but I think it utterly improbable that Shakespeare would have employed it in the sense of "an illustrious ancestor" without the addition of some other words to render his meaning clear.

2. Cleopatra is here jeering at Antony for putting himself into such a passion; and if we read "does become The carriage of his chief," must we not understand that the said chief, or ancestor, was a grave and dignified personage, who, not being himself subject to fits of passion, would have disapproved them in his descendant? But is Hercules described to have been such a personage?

Hercules and his load too, vii. 141: "The allusion may be to the Globe playhouse on the Bankside, the sign of which was Hercules carrying the Globe" (STEEVENS): "I suppose Shakespeare meant that the boys drew greater audiences than the elder players of the Globe theatre" (MALONE).

Hercules—The shaven, "Hercules when shaved to make him look like a woman, while he remained in the service of Omphale, his Lydian mistress" (STEEVENS), ii. 112.

hereby—That's, That's as it may happen, ii. 174.

hermits, beadsmen, persons bound to pray for you: We rest your hermits, vii. 17.

Herne the hunter, i. 402 (twice). 411, 412, 413; Herne's oak, i. 402, 407, 408, 410: The legend of Herne the hunter would seem to have been anciently current at Windsor; and his "oak" has caused not a little controversy; but I believe my venerable friend Mr. Jesse is the only one who now maintains that the withered trunk in the Home Park, which was blown down a few years ago, was the identical tree always known as Herne's oak, and immortalized by Shakespeare: "The general opinion is that it was accidentally destroyed in the year 1796, through an order of George III. to the bailiff Robinson that all the unsightly trees in the vicinity of the Castle should be removed; an opinion confirmed by a well-established fact that a person named Grantham, who contracted with the bailiff for the removal of the trees, fell into disgrace with the King for having included the oak in his gatherings," &c. (HALLIWELL). (Herne's Oak, so long an object of much curiosity and enthusiasm, is now no more. The old tree was blown down, August 31st, 1863; and a young oak was planted by her Majesty, September 12th, 1863, to mark the spot where Herne's Oak stood." Windsor Guide, p. 6.)

Herod—It out-herods, vii. 153 : Herod was a favourite character in our early Miracle-plays : Chaucer, speaking of the parish-clerk Absolon, says,

"He plaieith Herode on a skaffold hie." The Miller's Tale, v. 3884, ed. Tyr. (If the reader wishes to know what a swaggering uproarious tyrant Herod was represented to be in those old dramatic performances, let him turn to "Magnus Herodes" in The Towneley Mysteries, p. 140, ed. Surtees Soc., to "King Herod" in The Coventry Mysteries, p. 288, ed. Shake. Soc., and to "The Slaughter of the Innocents" in The Chester Plays, vol. i. p. 172, ed. Shake. Soc.)

Hesperides—In the, ii. 206 ; this fair Hesperides, viii. 7 : In these passages Hesperides is used to signify the garden wherein the golden apples were kept (Greene, who was a tolerably good scholar, has

"— the garden call'd Hesperides."

Friar Bacon and Friar Bungay,—Works, p. 167, ed. Dyce, 1861 : and Baxter writes

"Loves mountaines, apples of Hesperida."

Sir P. Sydney's Ourania, 1606, sig. m.2 verso).

hest, a command, i. 208, 220 ; iv. 231 ; hests, i. 185 ; ii. 212.

hic jacet—Or, "Or die in the attempt" (MALONE), iii. 253.

hid, &c.—All : see all hid, all hid, &c.

hide and you alone—An 'a may catch your, iv. 16 : "The ground of the quarrel of the Bastard to Austria is no where specified in the present play [though it is in the older play,—The Troublesome Raigne of Iohn, &c.,—see vol. iv. 3]. But the story is, that Austria, who killed King Richard Cœur-de-lion, wore, as the spoil of that prince, a lion's hide, which had belonged to him" (POPE) : "Shakespeare having familiarised the story to his own imagination, forgot that it was obscure to his audience ; or, what is equally probable, the story was then so popular, that a hint was sufficient, at that time, to bring it to mind" (JOHNSON) : see, in this Glossary, the article Richard . . . By this brave duke came early to his grave.

hide fox, and all after, vii. 175 : "Said by Sir Thomas Hanmer to be the name of a sport among children, which must doubtless be the same as hide and seek, whoop and hide, &c." Nares's Gloss. : compare all hid, all hid, &c.

high and low, two kinds of false dice, properly high-men and low-men : see gourd and fullam hold, &c.

high-day wit, holiday terms, ii. 376.

high-repented blames, "faults repented of to the height, to the utmost" (STEEVENS), iii. 277.

high-vic'd, "enormously wicked" (Johnson's Dict.), vi. 553.

hight, called, named, ii. 167, 169, 316 ; viii. 44.

hild, a form of held, used for the sake of the rhyme, vii.

But now (made free from them) next her, before, Peacefull and young, Herculean silence bore
His craggie club; which vp aloft hee hild;
With which and his forefingers charme he stild
All sounds in ayre," &c.

Chapman's Eubymia Raptus, or the Teares of Peace, &c. 1609, sig. z 4 verso.

"And in the black and gloomy arts so skild, That he euen Hell in his subiection hild."

Drayton's Moone-Calfe, p. 174, ed. 1627.

But we not unfrequently find "hild" employed when no rhyme is in question;

"I hild such valiantnes but vaine."

Warner's Albions England, p. 88, ed. 1596.

hilding, a low, degenerate wretch (a term applied to both sexes, and sometimes used adjectively), iii. 129, 252; iv. 316, 478; vi. 447; vii. 664; viii. 164; hildings, vi. 419.

hilts, applied (as it often was formerly) to a single weapon, iv. 237, 433, 436; v. 376; vi. 681; sword-hilts, vi. 685.

him, himself: To one that can my part in him aduertise, i. 446; Who for this seven years hath esteemed him, iii. 109.

himself—To die by, To die by his own hands, vi. 224.

Hinckley fair, iv. 387: Hinckley is a parish and market-town in Leicestershire.

hint, suggestion: it is a hint That wrings mine eyes to't, i. 181; Our hint of woe Is common, i. 193 (where Johnson remarks, "Hint is that which recalls to the memory. The cause that fills our minds with grief is common"); Upon this hint I spake, vii. 388.

hip—Catch upon the, or Have on the hip, to have the complete advantage, the upper hand of one (a phrase derived from wrestling), ii. 354; vii. 403.

- ("And Michaels Terme, lawes harvest, now begins,
Where many losers are, and few that wins;
For law may well be cal'd contentions whip,
When for a scratch, a cuffe, for pointes or pins,
Will Witlesse gets his neighbour on the hip."

"He had got me o' the hip once; it shall go hard, friends, But he shall find his own coin."

Beaumont and Fletcher's Bonduca, act v. sc. 2.)

hipped, iii. 144 : The context seems to show that here hipped means "lamed or hurt in the hips:" "Hipped, Delumbatus." Coles's Lat. and Engl. Dict. (though, from the words which immediately follow it, we might suppose it to mean "covered on the hips").

Hiren, iv. 344 ; where see foot-note.

hit, to agree : let us hit together, vii. 257.

hitherto, to this spot : from Trent and Severn hitherto, iv. 248 (Here Mortimer is pointing to the map).

ho, stop, hold, desist : 'Ware pencils, ho ! ii. 212 ; Ho, there, doctor ! viii. 197 ; and Steevens supposes (wrongly, I apprehend) that such is the meaning of the exclamation in Ho, ho, ho ! Now the witch take me, &c. vii. 565.

hoar, to make white, to infect with leprosy : hoar the flamen, vi. 554.

hoar, to become mouldy : When it hoars ere it be spent, vi. 421.

Hobbididance, vii. 314 : A slight variation of Hoherdidance, a fiend mentioned in Harsnet's Declaration of egregious Popish Impostures, 1603, p. 49 ; a work which seems to have been consulted by Shakespeare for several names of fiends in King Lear.

hobby-horse is forgot—The, ii. 183 ; the hobby-horse, whose epitaph is, "For, O, for, O, the hobby-horse is forgot," vii. 156 ; that will founder the best hobby-horse, viii. 199 : "Hobby-horse. . . . A personage belonging to the ancient morris-dance, when complete, and made, as Mr. Bayes's troops are on the stage, by the figure of a horse fastened round the waist of a man, his own legs going through the body of the horse, and enabling him to walk, but concealed by a long foot-cloth ; while false legs appeared where those of the man should be, at the sides of the horse. . . . Latterly the hobby-horse was frequently omitted, which appears to have occasioned a popular ballad, in which was this line or burden,

'For O, for O, the hobby-horse is forgot.'

Nares's Gloss. : Many readers will probably recollect the spirited description of the Hobby-horse in Sir W. Scott's Monastery : but, since Mr. Bayes's troops have been long banished from the stage, it may be necessary to mention here that they are part of the dramatis personæ in the Duke of Buckingham's once-celebrated satirical play called The Rehearsal.

hobby-horse, a silly fellow : which these hobby-horses must not hear, ii. 108.

hobby-horse, a loose woman : My wife's a hobby-horse, iii. 428 ; give it your hobby-horse, vii. 440.

hob-nob, iii. 373 : Explained by some "Hob, nob, or hab, nab, that is, habbe or nabbe, have or have not, hit or miss ;" by others (less probably), "hap ne hap, happen or not happen." hodge-pudding, i. 414: Does this mean something akin to haggis? see note 135, i. 439.

hoist with his own petar, vii. 172: Here hoist is for hoised or hoisted (not, as Caldecott explains it, "i. e. mount. Hoist is used as a verb neuter").

hold hook and line, a sort of cant proverbial expression which sometimes occurs in our early writers, iv. 344.

hold in—Such as can, iv. 225: "May mean such as can curb old father antick the law, or such as will not blab" (STEEVENS): "May mean, such companions as will hold in, or keep and stick close to one another, and such as are men of deeds, and not of words" (TOLLER): "To hold in, I believe, meant to 'keep their fellows' counsel and their own;' not to discover their rogueries by talking about them" (MALONE).

hold taking, bear handling, vi. 520.

hold, or hold thee, take thou, have thou, receive thou (a common formula): Hold, therefore, Angelo, i. 446; hold thee, there's some boot, iii. 484; Hold, my hand, vi. 629; But, hold thee, vi. 682; Hold, sir, vii. 340: and see note 4, i. 523.

hold, or cut bow-strings, ii. 274: A proverbial phrase: "When a party was made at butts, assurance of meeting was given in the words of that phrase; the sense of the person using them being, that he would 'hold' or keep promise, or they might 'cut his bow-strings,' demolish him for an archer" (CAPELL): Whether or not this be the true explanation of the phrase, I am unable to determine.

hold-fast is the only dog, iv. 444: "Alluding to the proverbial saying,—'Brag is a good dog, but hold-fast is a better'" (DOUCE).

holding, the burden of a song: The holding every man shall bear, vii. 536.

holding, consistency, fitness: this has no holding, iii. 260.

holland of eight shillings an ell, iv. 260: Shakespeare, of course, was thinking of the price of shirts in his own time: according to Stubbes, in the second edition of his Anatomy of Abuses, 1583, some shirts cost five pounds, or even ten pounds each.

holy, pure, just, righteous: Holy Gonzalo, i. 228; Holy, fair, and wise is she, i. 307; You have a holy father, iii. 495: and see note 124, i. 255.

holy-ales, rural festivals, viii. 5.

home, to the utmost : I will pay thy graces Home, i. 228 ; Accuse him home and home, i. 503 ; the sense to know Her estimation home, iii. 276 ; I cannot speak him home, vi. 169 ; That, trusted home, vii. 11 ; he charges home My unprovided body, vii. 276 ; will be revenged home, vii. 297 ; satisfy me home, vii. 688 ; That confirms it home, vii. 704.

honest, chaste : she is pretty, and honest, i. 359 ; If I find her honest, i. 365 ; though she appear honest, i. 370 ; Wives may be merry, and yet honest too, i. 397 ; honest woman, i. 398, 459 ; ii. 360, 393 ; she scarce makes honest, iii. 10 ; you say she's honest, iii. 254 ; are you honest? vii. 150 ; if you be honest, ibid. ; I do not think but Desdemona's honest, vii. 423 ; I think my wife be honest, vii. 427 ; She may be honest yet, vii. 428 ; wager she is honest, vii. 444 ; if she be not honest, ibid. ; Swear thou art honest, vii. 445 ; esteems me honest, vii. 446 ; of life as honest, vii. 458 ; if she'll be honest, viii. 198 ; do you think she is not honest, air? ibid.

honesty, chastity : out of honesty, i. 354 ; wrangle with mine own honesty, i. 361 ; the chariness of our honesty, i. 362 ; the honesty of this Ford's wife, i. 371 ; honesty coupled to beauty, iii. 47 ; to cast away honesty upon a foul slut, ibid. ; think my honesty, ranker than my wit, iii. 57 ; no legacy is so rich as honesty, iii. 249 ; your honesty should admit no discourse to your beauty, vii. 150 ; better commerce than with honesty, ibid. ; transform honesty, ibid. ; the force of honesty, ibid. ; I the way of honesty, viii. 197, 199 ; Ne'er cast your child away for honesty, viii. 197 ; her honesty! viii. 198.

honesty, decency : You have as little honesty as honour, v. 539.

honesty, liberality, generosity : Every man has his fault, and honesty is his, vi. 532.

honey-seed, the Hostess's blunder for homicide, iv. 331 ; honey-seed (homicidal) rogue, ibid.

honey-stalks, according to Johnson, "clover flowers, which contain a sweet juice," vi. 337.

honey-suckle villain, the Hostess's blunder for homicidal villain, iv. 330.

honorificabilitudinitatibus, ii. 208 : "Is of some antiquity. I have seen it on an Exchequer record, apparently in a hand of the reign of Henry the Sixth ; and it may be seen, with some additional syllables, scribbled on one of the leaves of a manuscript in the Harleian Library, No. 6,113." Hunter's New. Illust. of Shakespeare, vol. i. p. 264.

hood my unmann'd blood, bating in my cheeks, vi. 433 : Metaphors derived from falconry : the hawk was hooded till let fly at the game ; an unmanned hawk was one not yet made tame and tractable (see man my haggard—To); and bating means fluttering with the wings (see bate).

hoodman-blind, the game which we now call blind-man's-buff, vii. 169.

hoodman comes, iii. 264: An allusion to the game mentioned in the preceding article.

hoods make not monks—All, v. 526: “Cucullus non facit monachum” (STEEVENS).

hoops—The three-hooped pot shall have ten, v. 171: “The old drinking-pots, being of wood, were bound together, as barrels are, with hoops; whence they were called hoops. Cade promises that every can which now had three hoops shall be increased in size so as to require ten. What follows in the notes [to the Var. Shakespeare] about ‘burning of cans,’ does not appear to relate to the subject” (DOUCE).

Hopdance, vii. 306: Perhaps a variation of Hobbididance, q. v.

hope, to expect: Some of them will fall to-morrow, I hope, iv. 466; I hope he is much grown, v. 390; I cannot hope Caesar and Antony shall well greet together, vii. 514.

hope—I died for, v. 448: see note 110, v. 473.

hopes, expectations: shall I falsify men's hopes, iv. 215.

horn is a foot—Thy, An allusion to Curtis being a cuckold, iii. 150.

horn is dry—Poor Tom, thy, vii. 307: see the quotation from Aubrey under Tom o' Bedlam, &c.

horn—No staff more reverend than one tipped with: see staff more reverend, &c.

horologe, a clock (Lat. horologium), vii. 407.

horse—The dancing, ii. 172: An allusion to a horse mentioned by numerous contemporary writers, and even noticed by Sir Walter Raleigh in The History of the World (B. i. ch. 2). This celebrated animal was called Marocco, and belonged to a Scotchman named Banks, who, it appears, taught him to perform such feats as neither Astley nor Ducrow in our own time has been able to teach his horses:—the most remarkable exploit of Marocco was his ascending to the top of St. Paul's Cathedral in 1600. Banks exhibited his wonderful horse in various parts of Europe; and we are told that at last they were both brought to the stake at Rome as magicians (according to Ben Jonson in his cxxxiii^d Epigram, they were “beyond sea, burned for one witch;” and according to a note in the mock-romance Don Zara del Fogd, “they were both burned by the commandment of the Pope”). But, in opposition to all this, Mr. Halliwell has adduced an extract from one of the Ashmolean Mss. to show that Banks was alive in 1637.

hose, breeches, or stockings, or both in one: i. 275, 290, 376, 381; ii. 134, 198, 351; iii. 25, 34, 41, 45; iv. 236, 465; v. 179; vii. 25, 684: and see round hose.

host, to lodge: to the Centaur, where we host, ii. 9; Where you shall host, iii. 251.

hot livers and cold purses, iv. 240: "That is, drunkenness and poverty. To drink was, in the language of those times, to heat the liver" (JOHNSON).

hot-house, a bagnio (which was often a brothel), i. 458.

house—Do you but mark how this becomes the, vii. 288: "Fathers are not the heads only of a house or a family, but its representatives; they are the house, what affects them affects the rest of its body: Regan therefore is call'd upon to observe an action in which she is concern'd, and then say her opinion of it; and she does accordingly shew herself hurt by it, and declares it 'unsightly,' unbecoming her and her father, i. e. the house" (CAPELL): I suspect that Lear is now thinking much more of himself as head of the house than of Regan as a member of it; and that, though she chides him for such "unsightly tricks," she is not of a nature to be "hurt" by them.

housewife or huswife (a term of reproach), a hussy, a wanton, a minx, a strumpet: Doth Fortune play the huswife ("jilt," JOHNSON; but compare Out, out, thou strumpet, Fortune! vii. 144) with me now? iv. 498; A housewife that, by selling her desires, &c. vii. 439; the false housewife Fortune, vii. 582; the overscuted huswives, iv. 362 (see overscuted, &c.); housewives in your beds, vii. 398.

how, for what price may be had? How a good yoke of bullocks at Stamford fair? iv. 356; How a score of ewes now? ibid.; How a dozen of virginities? viii. 56.

how and which way,—how or which way, pleonastic expressions not uncommon in our early writers: I'll take the sacrament on't, how and which way you will, iii. 265; If I Know how or which way t'order these affairs, iv. 133; Then how or which way should they first break in? v. 24; How or which way, ibid.

however, any way: However, but a folly bought with wit, i. 264.

hulk, a ship, generally a heavy or large ship ("A Hulk, great ship. Corbita." Coles's Lat. and Engl. Dict.): Provokes the mightiest hulk against the tide, v. 79; though greater hulks draw deep, vi. 43.

hull, to float, to swim, as borne along or driven by wind or water: iii. 340; v. 436; hulling, v. 523.

human as she is, and without any danger, i. e. not a phantom, but the real Rosalind, without any of the danger generally conceived to attend the rites of incantation" (JOHNSON), iii. 69.

humorous, perverse, capricious : The duke is humorous, iii. 15 ; the humorous duke, iii. 23 ; her humorous ladyship, iv. 32 ; As humorous as winter, iv. 377 ; a vain, giddy, shallow, humorous youth, iv. 445.

humorous, humid, damp : the humorous night, vi. 409.

humour—That's my, i. 348 ; the nuthook's humour, i. 349 ; is not the humour conceited? i. 353 ; The good humour is, &c., ibid. ; will that humour pass? i. 354 ; The humour rises, ibid. ; I thank thee for that humour, ibid. ; I will run no base humour, i. 355 ; take the humour-letter, ibid. ; the humour of this love, ibid. ; My humour shall not cool, ibid. ; that is my true humour, ibid. ; I like not the humour of lying, i. 362 ; the humour of bread and cheese, i. 363 ; there's the humour of it, ibid. ; a fellow frights humour out of his wits, ibid. ; I have a humour to knock you, iv. 436 ; that's the humour of it (twice), ibid. ; iv. 437 (twice), 444 ; the humour of it is too hot, iv. 451 ; pass good humours, i. 349 ; humours of revenge, i. 355 ; With both the humours, ibid. ; He hath wronged me in some humours, i. 362 ; The king hath run bad humours on the knight, iv. 437 ; he passes some humours, ibid. ; humours do abound, iv. 451 ; These be good humours!—your honour wins bad humours, ibid. : On a passage of Jonson's Every Man out of his Humour Whalley remarks ; "What was usually called the manners in a play or poem, began now to be called the humours. The word was new ; the use, or rather abuse, of it, was excessive. It was applied upon all occasions, with as little judgment as wit. Every coxcomb had it always in his mouth ; and every particularity he affected was denominated by the name of humour," &c. : Gifford adds ; "The abuse of this word is well ridiculed by Shakespeare, in that amusing creature of whimsey, Nym. Merry Wives of Windsor [and King Henry V.]." Jonson's Works, vol. ii. p. 16, ed. Gifford.

Humour of Forty Fancies—The, iii. 144 : Is generally understood to mean some collection of the short poems called Fancies, which Petruchio had stuck into his lackey's hat ; see Fancies, &c. : but, according to Mr. Halliwell, the allusion is to a bunch of ribbons, which appear to have been occasionally called fancies.

Humphrey Hour, v. 429 : No satisfactory explanation, as far as I am aware, has yet been given of these words. In old St. Paul's was a monument wrongly supposed to be that of Humphrey Duke of Gloucester (who really was buried at St. Alban's), from which a part of the church was known by the name of Duke Humphrey's Walk ; and there, as St. Paul's was a place of public resort, those who were unable to procure a dinner used to saunter, perhaps in the hope of receiving an invitation from some of their acquaintances. This was the origin of the expression dining with Duke Humphrey ; and Steevens conjectures that "Shakespeare might by this strange phrase, Humphrey Hour, have designed to mark the hour at which the good Duchess was as hungry as the followers of Duke Humphrey." Malone, on the other hand, says: "Humphrey Hour is merely used in ludicrous language for hour, like Tom Troth for truth, and twenty more such terms. So, in Gabriel Harvey's Letter to Spenser, 1580; 'Tell me in Tom Trothe's earnest.'" hundred-pound, filthy, &c., vii. 278: The epithet hundred-pound is occasionally found as a term of reproach in our early writers.

Hundred Merry Tales—The, ii. 88: see Tales—The Hundred Merry.

Hungarian wight, i. 353: Hungarian is a cant term of doubtful origin; perhaps from hungry, perhaps from the free-booters of Hungary, or perhaps it is equivalent to gipsy, for "the parts of Europe in which it is supposed that the gipsies originally appeared were Hungary and Bohemia" (DOUCE).

hungry beach—The, vi. 226: see note 237, vi. 273.

hungry prey—Their, v. 10: "Appears to signify 'the prey for which they are hungry'" (STEEVENS).

hunt counter—You, iv. 322: see note 11, iv. 404 ("Hunt Counter, when Hounds hunt it by the Heel." R. Holme's Academy of Armory and Blazon, B. iii. ch. iii. p. 76).

huntsmen—Like a jolly troop of, &c. iv. 21; here thy hunters stand, &c., vi. 652: "It was, I think [it certainly was], one of the savage practices of the chase, for all to stain their hands in the blood of the deer as a trophy" (JOHNSON).

hunt's-up, vi. 443: "Any song intended to arouse in the morning—even a love-song—was formerly called a hunt's-up . . . and the name was of course derived from a tune or song employed by early hunters. Butler, in his Principles of Musik, 1636, defines a hunt's-up as 'morning music;' and Cotgrave defines 'Resveil' as a hunt's-up, or Morning Song for a new-married wife." Chappell's Popular Music of the Olden Time, &c. vol. i. p. 61, sec. ed.

hurly, an uproar, a tumult, iii. 155; iv. 45, 352.

hurlyburly, meaning the same as hurly ("A Hurly-burly, Turbæ, Tumultus." Coles's Dict.), v. 16 (in the stage-direction); vii. 5; iv. 276 (as an adjective=tumultuous).

hurricano, a water-spout, vi. 88; hurricanoes, vii. 294.

hurt—Thou hast not half that power to do me harm As I have to be, vii. 464: "She means to say,—I have in this cause power to endure more than thou hast power to inflict" (JOHNSON).

hurtled, clashed, made a sound like clashing, vi. 640.

hurtling, a clashing together,—a violent conflict, iii. 64.

husband, a husbandman: your serving-man and your husband, iv. 393; and see note 101, iv. 415.

husband now, Pompey; you will keep the house—You will turn good, i. 485: "Alluding to the etymology of the word husband" (MALONE): and there is an obvious quibble, keep the house.

husbandry, economical government, thrift, economical prudence: The husbandry and manage of my house, ii. 390; healthful and good husbandry, v. 469; like as there were husbandry in war ("alludes to Hector's early rising," MALONE), vi. 9; If you suspect my husbandry, vi. 529; there's husbandry in heaven, vii. 20; borrowing dulls the edge of husbandry, vii. 117; Which husbandry in honour might uphold, viii. 355.

huswife: see housewife.

hyen, a hyena, iii. 58.

Hyperion, Apollo, vii. 112, 168.

Hyrcan, Hyrceanian, vii. 41.

I.

I, the old spelling of the affirmative adverb ay, was frequently used with a quibble, as in the following passage; say thou but "I," And that bare vowel "I" shall poison more Than the death-darting eye of cockatrice: I am not I, if there be such an "I," &c. vi. 433.

ice-brook, a cold or icy brook: It is a sword of Spain, the ice-brook's temper, vii. 466: "Steel is hardened by being put red-hot into very cold water" (JOHNSON): According to Steevens, who cites Martial and Justin, the ice-brook of our text is "undoubtedly the brook or rivulet called Salo (now Xalon), near Bilbilis in Celtiberia."

Iceland dog! thou prick-ear'd cur of Iceland! iv. 435: A sort of shaggy, white, sharp-eared dog from Iceland, a great pet with ladies ("We have sholts or curs daily brought out of Iceland, and much made of among vs, bicause of their sawcinesse and quarrelling." Harrison's Description of England, prefixed to Holinshed, vol. i. p. 389, reprint).

idle, trifling: an idle banquet, vi. 520.

idle, vain, weak: an idle and fond ("weak and foolish," JOHNSON) bondage, vii. 259.

idle, useless, infertile, unfruitful, barren: idle moss, ii. 20; idle weeds, v. 395; deserts idle, vii. 387; idle pebbles, vii. 322: With respect to the second of these passages, You said that idle weeds are fast in growth, Dounce observes, "it is clear that infertility is out of the question; but useless and unprofitable will denote the poet's meaning, or rather that of the inventor of the proverb, which was afterwards corrupted into 'ill weeds,' &c.:" The line just cited is sufficient to show that Mr. Beisly is mistaken when, in his Shakspeare's Garden, &c. p. 35, he explains idle moss by "moss stationary and slow in growth."

i'fecks, most probably a corruption of in faith, iii. 424.

ignomy, ignominy, i. 474; iv. 286; vi. 100, 330.

ignorant in what I am commanded—I'm, "I am unpractised in the arts of murder" (STEEVENS), vii. 674.

ignorant fumes—The, "The fumes of ignorance" (HEATH), i. 228.

ild: see God ild you.

Ilion: see the next article.

Ilium and where she resides—Between our, vi. 8; When were you at Ilium? vi. 10; ere ye came to Ilium, ibid.; as they pass toward Ilium, vi. 13; nor goodly Ilion stand, vi. 33; As Priam's is in Ilion, vi. 70; in great Ilion, vi. 75; yourself and Diomed In Ilion, vi. 78; So, Ilion, fall thou next! vi. 98: "Ilium or Ilion (for it is spelt both ways) was, according to Lydgate, and the author of The Destruction of Troy [see vi. 2], the name of Priam's palace, which is said by these writers to have been built upon a high rock" (MALONE).

ill-erected tower—To Julius Caesar's, iv. 166: "By ill-erected, I suppose, is meant erected for bad purposes" (STEEVENS).

ill-favoured, ill-looking, i. 290, 352, 387; iii. 10, 52, 73, 122; vi. 322.

ill-favouredly, in an ugly or bad way, i. 391; iii. 42; iv. 478.

ill-inhabited, ill-lodged, iii. 47.

ill-nurtur'd, ill-brought-up, v. 117; viii. 243.

illustrate, illustrious, ii. 189, 210.

imaginary forces, "imaginative forces, powers of fancy" (JOHNSON), iv. 421.

imagined, belonging to imagination: with imagin'd speed, ii. 391; with imagin'd wing, iv. 449.

imbare, iv. 427: see note 9, iv. 509.

immanity, savageness, barbarity, v. 67.

immediacy, "immediate representation, the deriving a character directly from another, so as to stand exactly in his place" (Nares's Gloss.), vii. 338.

immoment, of no moment, unimportant, vii. 591.

immures, wall-enclosures, fortifications, vi. 5.

imp, a shoot, a graft,—an offspring, ii. 171, 227; iv. 399, 471.

imp out our drooping country's broken wing, iv. 130; imp a body with a dangerous physic, vi. 184 (see note 112, vi. 256): An expression borrowed from falconry: "when the wing-feathers [or tail-fea-them] of a hawk were dropped, or forced out [or broken], by any accident, it was usual to supply [or repair] as many as were deficient [or damaged]. This operation was called to imp a hawk' (STEEVENS).

impale, to encircle, v. 286; vi. 97; impalèd, v. 279.

impartial, neutral: In this I'll be impartial, i. 511.

impartment, a communication, vii. 121.

impasted, formed into a paste, vii. 143.

impawn, to pawn, to pledge: impawn our person ("To impawn seems here to have the same meaning as the French phrase se commettre," MALONE), iv. 425.

impeach, an impeachment, an accusation: an intricate impeach, ii. 50; impeach of valour, v. 248.

impeach, to bring into question, to call in question: impeach your modesty, ii. 280; impeach my height (=nobleness), iv. 110.

impeachment, an imputation, a reproach: great impeachment to his age, i. 271.

impeachment, an obstruction, a hindrance: to march on to Calais Without impeachment, iv. 463.

imperceiverant, vii. 694: see note 121, vii. 755.

imperious, imperial: Those high-imperious thoughts, i. 283; most imperious Agamemnon, vi. 77; be thy thoughts imperious, vi. 337; Imperious Caesar, vii. 197; th' imperious show Of the full-fortun'd Caesar, vii. 581; Imperious supreme of all mortal things, viii. 272: and see note 141, vii. 238. (I may add here, that, though Shakespeare and sundry of his contemporaries make no distinction between "imperious" and "imperial," yet, as Mr. Singer has observed, "Bullokar carefully distinguishes them: 'Imperial, royal or chief, emperor-like: imperious, that commandeth with authority, lord-like, stately.'") impeticos thy gratillity, iii. 346: This jargon, according to Hanmer, means "impoCKET thy gratuity:" Johnson proposed to read "impeticOAT thy gratuity," observing that "fools were kept in long coats, to which the allusion is made;" and hence the remark of Douce (in opposition to Ritson) that the allowed fool was occasionally (like the idiot fool) dressed in petticoats. (When a boy at Aberdeen, I remember seeing a full-grown man, an idiot, who wore a long petticoat, and was led about the streets, as an object of charity, by his mother): I quite agree with Malone that here "the reading of the old copy should not be disturbed." impleach'd, interwoven, intertwined, viii. 445: see pleached.

imponed, vii. 204: This would seem to be Osrick's affected pronunciation of impawned.

importance, importunity : at Sir Toby's great importance, iii. 395 ; At our importance, iv. 13 ; upon importance of so slight and trivial a nature, vii. 644 (where Johnson, in his Dict., explains importance "matter, subject").

importance, the thing imported or implied,—the import : if the importance were joy or sorrow ("if their [before-mentioned] passion were of joyful or sorrowful import," GRANT WHITE), iv. 497.

important, importunate : At your important letters, ii. 46 ; if the prince be too important, ii. 87 ; his important blood, iii. 255 ; My mourning and important tears, vii. 320.

importless, unimportant, vi. 18.

impose, to enjoin, to command : Impose me to what penance, ii. 136.

impose, an imposition, an injunction : your ladyship's impose, i. 310.

imposition clear'd Hereditary ours—Th', "i.e. setting aside original sin ; bating the imposition from the offence of our first parents" (WARBURTON), iii. 422.

impossible, inconceivable, incredible : impossible places, i. 393 ; impossible slanders, ii. 88 ; impossible conveyance, ii. 91 ; impossible passages of grossness, iii. 366 ; things impossible, vi. 639 ; and see note 22, ii. 149.

imprese—Raz'd out my, iv. 141 : "An Impress (as the Italians call it) is a device in Picture with his Motto or Word, born by Noble and Learned Parsonages, to notifie some particular conceit of their own," &c. Camden's Remains concerning Britain, &c. p. 447, ed. 1674.

impress the forest—Who can, "Who can command the forest to serve him like a soldier impressed" (JOHNSON), vii. 48.

improve, to turn to account, vi. 635.

imputation, imputed, attributed excellence, reputation : Our imputation shall be oddly pois'd, vi. 25 ; the imputation laid on him, vii. 204 : and see note 37, vi. 106.

in, used for on : in the beach'd margent of the sea, ii. 276 ; in heaven or in earth, v. 263 ; in thy shoulder do I build my seat, v. 271 ; knock'd i' th' head, vi. 64 ; Gold strew'd i' the floor, vii. 691.

in, used for into : falling in the flames, i. 470 ; smiles his cheek in years, ii. 224 ; weeping in the needless stream, iii. 21 ; I'll turn yon fellow in his grave, v. 363 ; to draw me in these vile suspects, v. 365 ; Follow thine enemy in a fiery gulf, vi. 193 ; turn our swords In our own proper entrails, vi. 683 ; equivocates him in a sleep, vii. 25 ; Looks fearfully in the confin'd deep, vii. 314 ; Fall'n in the practice of a damn'd slave, vii. 467 ; I'm fallen in this offence, vii. 691 ; Which one by one she in a river threw, viii. 440.

in good time : see good time—In.

inaccessible, difficult of access : this desert inaccessible, iii. 88.

incapable, unintelligent, unable to comprehend : Incapable and shallow innocents, v. 385 ; As one incapable of her own distress, vii. 191.

incardinate, Sir Andrew's blunder for incarnate, iii. 390.

incarnadine, to stain red or carnation colour, vii. 24.

incense, to incite, to instigate, to set on ; but according to Nares, in the last three of the following passages it means simply "to instruct,"—"a provincial expression still quite current in Staffordshire," &c. Gloss. : I will incense Page, i. 355 ; would incense me to murder, iii. 491 ; what they may incense him to, vii. 292 ; your brother incensed me, ii. 135 ; incensed by his subtle mother, v. 396 ; I have incens'd the lords of the council, v. 556.

incense, to kindle : an incensèd fire of injuries, iv. 327.

inch : see Colme's-inch—Saint.

inch-meal—By, By portions of an inch long at a time, i. 202 (So piece-meal, drop-meal, limb-meal).

incision in thee ! thou art raw—God make, iii. 38 : "I apprehend the meaning is, God give thee a better understanding, thou art very raw and simple as yet. The expression probably alludes to the common proverbial saying concerning a very silly fellow, that he ought to be cut for the simples" (HEATH).

incision Would let her out in saucers—A fever in your blood ! why, then, ii. 199 : This has been erroneously explained as containing an allusion to the mad fashion of lovers stabbing themselves and drinking their blood in honour of their mistresses : it merely means, "If your mistress reigns a fever in your blood, get yourself blooded, and so let her out in saucers."

inclining—You of my, You of my side, of my party, vii. 383.

inclips, embraces, encircles, vii. 535.

include all jars, shut in, restrain,—or close, conclude, i. 323 (a doubtful reading ? see note 112, i. 339).

incontinent, immediately : which they will climb incontinent, iii. 68 ; put on sullen black incontinent, iv. 182 ; he will return incontinent, vii. 451.

incontinently, immediately, vii. 392.

incony, fine, delicate, pretty, ii. 186, 192.

incorps'd, incorporated, made one body, vii. 189.

incorrect, "contumacious" (CALDECOTT), vii. 111.

increase, produce : Earth's increase, and foison plenty, i. 221 ; swallow her own increase, vi. 348 ; big with rich increase, viii. 397.

incredulous, incredible: no incredulous or unsafe circumstance, iii. 370.

indent, an indentation, a bending inwards: wind with such a deep indent, iv. 249.

indent, to bargain, to contract, to compound: indent with fears, iv. 217, see note 24, iv. 291.

index, a prelude, anything preparatory to another—the index (i. e. table of contents) being generally in Shakespeare's days prefixed to the book, v. 388; vii. 168, 402; indexes, vi. 25.

index of a direful pageant—The flattering, v. 427: see the preceding article: "Pageants," Steevens observes "are dumb shows, and the poet meant to allude to one of these, the index of which promised a happier conclusion. The pageants then displayed on public occasions were generally preceded by a brief account of the order in which the characters were to walk. These indexes were distributed among the spectators, that they might understand the meaning of such allegorical stuff as was usually exhibited."

Indian—Like the base, vii. 469: see note 113, vii. 490.

indifferency, impartiality: Makes it take head from all indifferency, iv. 28.

indifferency, moderation, ordinary size: a belly of any indifferency, iv. 373.

indifferent, impartial: Look on my wrongs with an indifferent eye, iv. 138; No judge indifferent, v. 519.

indifferent, ordinary: garters of an indifferent knit ("The words 'of an indifferent knit' simply mean, that the garters should be tolerably well knit, neither very fine nor very coarse." The Dialect of Craven, sub "Indifferent"), iii. 151; the indifferent children of the earth, vii. 137.

indifferent, indifferently, tolerably: indifferent good, iii. 125; indifferent well, iii. 333; iv. 488; vi. 15; indifferent red, iii. 341; indifferent honest, vii. 151; indifferent cold, vii. 203.

indifferently, impartially: hear me speak indifferently for all, vi. 295.

indifferently, in a reasonable degree, tolerably: to knock you indifferently well, iv. 436; we have reformed that indifferently, vii. 153.

indigest (used as a substantive), a thing indigested, an unformed mass: To set a form upon that indigest, iv. 74 ("rudis indigestaque moles." Ovid, Metam. i. 7).

indigest, indigested, unformed, shapeless: monsters and things indigest, viii. 406.

indign, unworthy, disgraceful, vii. 391.

indirection, crooked conduct, dishonest practice: indirection there- by grows direct, iv. 86; ering From the hard hands of peasants their vile trash By any indirection, vi. 648.

indirection, oblique means: By indirections find directions out, vi. 189.

indirectly, unfairly, wrongfully: That hot rash heart so indirectly that iv. 14 (but see note 15, iv. 79); Your crown and kingdom indirectly held, iv. 447.

indistinguishable cur, "sur of an undeterminate shape" (BRANVENS), deformed, vi. 81.

indite him to some supper, vi. 421 (where probably indits is used in jest for invite, see note 53, vi. 485); he is indited to dinner, iv. 330 (where indited is the Hostess's blunder for invited).

induction, a beginning: And our induction full of prosperous hope, iv. 246; A dire induction am I witness to, v. 425; inductions dangerous ("preparations for mischief," JOHNSON), v. 352.

induction, Introduction (to The Taming of the Shrew, iii. 105, and to The Second Part of King Henry IV., iv. 313).

indu'd Unto that element, "endowed or furnished with properties suited to the element of water" (MALONE), vii. 191.

indues Our other healthful members even to that sense Of pain—It, "This sensation so gets possession of, and is so infused into the other members, as to make them all participate of the same pain" (MALONE,—rightly perhaps), vii. 434.

indurance, v. 559: "i. e. confinement. Dr. Johnson, however, in his Dictionary, says that this word (which Shakespeare borrowed from Fox's narrative) means—delay, procrastination" (STEEVENS).

inequality, (seeming) inconsistency, i. 508.

infamonize, to make infamous, to disgrace, ii. 230.

infect, infected: many are infect, vi. 21.

infection from the dangerous year—Their verdure still endure, To drive, viii. 256: "The poet evidently alludes to a practice of his own age, when it was customary, in time of the plague, to strew the rooms of every house with rue and other strong-smelling herbs, to prevent infection" (MALONE).

infer, to bring in, to introduce: Infer the bastardy of Edward's children, v. 407; I did infer your lineaments, v. 409; Infer fair England's peace, v. 434; thus hath the duke inferr'd, v. 410; more than I have inferr'd, v. 451; 'tis inferr'd to us, vi. 542; inferreth arguments, v. 273; Inferring arguments, v. 258.

infusion of such dearth and rareness—And his: see dearth and rareness, &c.

ingenier, an ingenious person, a deviser, an artist, a painter, vii. 396 : but the reading is questionable ; see note 30, vii. 476.

ingenious, intelligent, acute, lively : the most ingenious senses, vii. 196 ; ingenious feeling Of my huge sorrows, vii. 329 (According to Warburton, "Ingenious feeling signifies a feeling from an understanding not disturbed or disordered, but which, representing things as they are, makes the sense of pain the more exquisite").

ingenious, ingenuous : ingenious studies, iii. 114 (So in a comparatively recent author ; "But 'tis contrary to an ingenious spirit to delight in such service," &c. Defoe's Colonel Jack, p. 141, ed. 1838).

ingeniously, ingenuously, vi. 531.

inhabitable, uninhabitable, iv. 107.

inherit, to possess, to obtain possession of : Yea, all which it inherit, i. 222 ; This, or else nothing, will inherit her, i. 303 ; inherit us So much as of a thought of ill in him, iv. 107 ; never after to inherit it, vi. 302 ; shall you this night inherit at my house, vi. 395 ; But to the girdle do the gods inherit, vii. 325.

inhibit, to prohibit, to forbid, vii. 41 (see note 66, vii. 86) ; inhibited, iii. 210, 383.

inhibition comes by the means of the late innovation—Their, vii. 140 : "This passage probably refers to the limiting of public theatrical performances to the two theatres, the Globe on [the] Bankside, and the Fortune in Golden Lane, in 1600 and 1601. The players, by a 'late innovation,' were 'inhibited,' or forbidden, to act in or near 'the city,' and therefore 'travelled,' or strolled into the country. See 'History of Engl. Dram. Poetry and the Stage,' vol. i. p. 311, &c." (COLLIER).

inhoop'd, at odds—His quails ever Beat mine, vii. 523 : "The ancients used to match quails as we match cocks" (JOHNSON) : "Inhoop'd. Inclosed in a hoop . . . It appears now to be made out, that cocks or quails were sometimes made to fight within a broad hoop, to keep them from quitting each other. Mr. Douce has actually found a Chinese print [miniature painting] in which two birds are so represented. See his Illustrations, vol. ii. p. 86. . . . The substance of this [passage] is from North's Plutarch, as well as much more of the same drama ; but the inhooped is the addition of our poet." Nares's Gloss.

Iniquity—Justice or, i. 461 ; that gray iniquity, iv. 243 ; the formal Vice, Iniquity, v. 394 : see Vice—like the old, &c.

inkhorn mate, a bookish man, or a bookman, v. 39 : "It was a term of reproach towards men of learning or men affecting to be learned" (REED).

inkle, a kind of inferior tape, ii. 186 ; viii. 61 ; inkles, iii. 472.

inland bred, bred, brought up among civilised persons (inland being used by our old writers in opposition to upland), iii. 32; an inland man, iii. 44.

inly, inward: the inly touch of love, i. 289; inly sorrow, v. 251.

inly, inwardly: I've inly wept, i. 232; inly ruminate, iv. 468.

inn—Thou most beauteous, iv. 166; shall I not take mine ease in mine inn? iv. 260: In the first of these passages inn, according to Steevens, means "a dignified habitation;" according to Mason, "a house of entertainment, and is opposed to alehouse in the following line [the next line but one];" and according to Mr. Staunton merely "abode:" on the second passage Percy observes, "To 'take mine ease in mine inne' was an ancient proverb, not very different in its application from that maxim, 'Every man's house is his castle;' for inne originally signified a house or habitation [Sax. inne, domus, domicilium]. When the word inne began to change its meaning, and to be used to signify a house of entertainment, the proverb, still continuing in force, was applied in the latter sense, as it is here used by Shakespeare."

innocent, an idiot, a natural fool, a simpleton: a dumb innocent, iii. 266; Pray, innocent, and beware the foul fiend, vii. 305; the pious innocent, viii. 53; An innocent, viii. 180.

inquire, an inquiry: the most strange inquire, viii. 35.

inquisition, an inquiry, i. 178; iii. 23.

insane root—The, The root which causes insanity, vii. 10: Perhaps hemlock; or more probably henbane, as would appear from the following passage, cited by Douce; "Henbane . . . is called Insana, mad, for the use thereof is perillous; for if it be eate or dronke, it breedeth madnesse, or slow lykenesse of sleepe. Therefore this hearb is called commonly Mirilidium, for it taketh away wit and reason." Batman Upon Bartholome de propriet. rerum, lib. xvii. ch. 87.

insculp'd upon—The figure of an angel Stamp'd in gold,—but that's, ii. 371: Here insculp'd upon means "carved in relief, embossed on the coin."

insinuate, to soothe, to wheedle: Basely insinuate, and send us gifts, vi. 327; With Death she humbly doth insinuate, viii. 273.

insinuation—By their own, "By their having insinuated or thrust themselves into the employment" (MALONE), vii. 202.

insisture, fixedness, stability ("constancy or regularity," Johnson's Dict.; "regularity, or perhaps station," Nares's Gloss.), vi. 19.

instance, a word used by Shakespeare with various shades of meaning which it is not always easy to distinguish,—"motive, inducement, cause, ground; symptom, prognostic; information, assurance; proof, example, indication:" my desires had instance and argument, i. 371; Gives me this instance, i. 502; Gave any tragic in- stance of our harm, ii. 6; what's the instance? iii. 257; A certain instance that Glendower is dead, iv. 354; his fears are shallow, wanting instance, v. 398; Instance, O instance, vi. 88; no guilty instance gave, viii. 380; But not with such familiar instances, vi. 665 (where Mr. Craik chooses to explain instances by "assiduities"); The instances that second marriage move, vii. 158.

instrument this lower world—That hath to, "That makes use of this world, and every thing in it, as its instruments to bring about its ends" (STEEVENS), i. 216.

insuppressive, insuppressible, vi. 634.

intend, to pretend: intend a kind of zeal, ii. 95; I intend that all is done, iii. 155; Intend some fear, v. 410; Intending deep suspicion, v. 406; intending other serious matters, vi. 530; Intending weariness, viii. 290.

intend, to set forth, to make to appear (like the Latin intendo,—"intendere eruditionem"): if thou dost intend never so little show of love to her, ii. 300.

intended in the general's name, "understood, meant without expressing," &c. (STEEVENS), iv. 367.

intendment, intention, iii. 8; main intendment (which Steevens explains "exertion in a body"), iv. 428; vii. 450; intendments, viii. 246.

intenable: see captious and intenable sieve.

intention, eagerness of attention or of desire: with such a greedy intention, i. 354; my intention, hearing not my tongue, i. 471; thy intention stabs the centre, iii. 424.

intently, attentively, vii. 388.

interest'd, interested, vii. 251.

inter'gatory, interrogatory, ii. 416; inter'gatories, ii. 416; iii. 266; vii. 733.

intermission, a pause, ii. 385; iii. 31; vii. 60, 284.

intermissive miseries—Their, "Their miseries, which have had only a short intermission from Henry the Fifth's death to my coming amongst them" (WARBURTON), v. 7.

interpret between you and your love, if I could see the puppets dallying—I could, vii. 159: An allusion to the interpreter, who at all motions or puppet-shows interpreted to the audience: see motion.

into used for unto: into thy attempt, iii. 222; into the drowsy ear of night, iv. 40; his whole kingdom into desolation, iv. 442.

into truth by telling of it, i. 180, on which see note.

intrenchant, "which cannot be cut" (JOHNSON), "not permanently divisible, not retaining any mark of division" (Nares's Gloss.), vii. 70.

inrinse, intricate, vii. 280.

intrinsicate, intricate, vii. 596.

invectively, abusively, iii. 22.

investments, vestures, dress, garb, iv. 364 ; vii. 119.

invincible—That his dimensions to any thick sight were, iv. 362 : see note 60, iv. 409 : "The word [invincible]," says Singer ad l., "is metaphorically used for not to be mastered or taken in. See Baret's Alvearie, in v.:" but in the ed. of Baret's work now before me, that of 1580, I find no such glosses, which, after all, would go little way to confirm the reading in our text.

invis'd, invisible, unseen, viii. 445.

inward, an intimate, a familiar friend : I was an inward of his, i. 487.

inward, intimate, confidential : for what is inward between us, ii 209 ; Who is most inward with the noble duke? v. 403.

inwardness, intimacy, ii. 124.

Irish rat—I was never so be-rhymed since Pythagoras' time, that I was an, iii. 40 : "She alludes to the Pythagorean doctrine, which teaches that souls transmigrate from one animal to another, and relates that in his time she was an Irish rat, and by some metrical charm was rhymed to death. The power of killing rats with rhymes Donne mentions in his Satires, and Temple in his Treatises," &c. (JOHNSON) : It would be easy to quote sundry passages concerning the rhyming of rats to death.

irregulous, disorderly, lawless, vii. 704.

isle—Fertile the, iii. 449 : see note 57, iii. 514.

issu'd—No worse, No worse descended, i. 179.

iterance, iteration, repetition, vii. 463.

iteration, repetition, iv. 212 ; vi. 52.

I wis, ii. 376 ; iii. 115 ; v. 365 ; viii. 19 : That in our earlier literature I wis is one word (i-wis), the Saxon genitive gewis used adverbially, and meaning "truly, certainly," admits of no dispute : see Sir F. Madden's Gloss. to Syr Gawayne, where he remarks that "although satisfied about the origin of i-wis, he still has his doubts whether it was not regarded as a pronoun and verb by the writers of the fifteenth century." For my own part, I cannot help believing that the writers of Elizabeth's time and later, ignorant of the original meaning of I wis, employed it as equivalent to "I ween:" and see, under occupy, the quotation from Wits, Fitts, and Fancies, where we have the spelling "I wisse."

J.

jack, the small bowl (sometimes called also the mistress) aimed at in the game of bowling: when I kissed the jack, vii. 657: "To kiss the jack' is a state of great advantage" (JOHNSON).

Jack, a common term of contempt and reproach (fellow, knave, rogue): you are Jack Rugby, i. 357; Jack priest, i. 358, 373; play the flouting Jack, ii. 79; twangling Jack, iii. 132; a swearing Jack, iii. 136; the prince is a Jack, iv. 260; then am I a Jack, iv. 287; Since every Jack became a gentleman, v. 365; thou art as hot a Jack (where Jack is merely equivalent to "fellow," and used jocularly), vi. 427; Hang him, Jack! vi. 461; this Jack, vii. 559, 560; braggarts, Jacks, milksops, ii. 131; bragging Jacks, ii. 392; insinuating Jacks, v. 364; twenty such Jacks, vi. 422.

Jack, the Jack-o'-lantern or Will-o'-the-wisp: your fairy . . . has done little better than played the Jack with us, i. 224.

Jack, an automaton that in public clocks struck the bell on the outside: Jack o' the clock, iv. 179; like a Jack, thou keep'st the stroke, v. 422; minute-jacks, vi. 546 (where Nares thinks that minute-jacks mean "fellows who watch the proper minutes to offer their adulation." Gloss. in v.).

Jack guardant, a Jack-in-office, vi. 223.

Jack shall have Jill, ii. 204; Jack hath not Jill, ii. 235: A well-known proverbial expression: Ray gives, "Every Jack must have his Gill." Proverbs, p. 124, ed. 1768.

Jack-a-Lent, a puppet thrown at during Lent, as cocks were thrown at on Shrove-Tuesday, i. 381, 414.

jack-an-apes, an ape, iv. 502.

Jack-sauce, a saucy Jack, iv. 490.

jacks, the keys of the virginal: those jacks that nimble leap, viii. 413: "The virginal jack was a small flat piece of wood, furnished on the upper part with a quill, affixed to it by springs of bristle. These jacks were directed by the finger-key to the string, which was struck by the quill, then forced past the string by the elastic spring, giving it liberty to sound as long as the finger rested on the key. When the finger was removed, the quill returned to its place, and a small piece of cloth, fixed on the top of the jack, resting on the string, stopped its vibration" (FAIRBOLT).

jacks fair within, the gills fair without—Be the, iii. 150: "A play upon the words jack and jill, which signify two drinking measures, as well as men and maid-servants" (STEEVENS).

jade, to ride, to over-sway, to over-master : to let imagination jade me, iii. 358 ; To be thus jaded by a piece of scarlet, v. 539.

jade, to drive harassed and dispirited : The ne'er-yet-beaten horse of Parthia We have jaded out o' the field, vii. 538.

jade, to subject to harassing and mean offices : such a jaded groom, v. 166.

jadery, the properties of a vicious horse, jadish tricks, viii. 209.

jame judgments, viii. 163 : see note 85, viii. 225.

jape, a jest, iii. 472.

Jarmany—A duke de : see duke de Jarmany—A.

jauncing, jaunting, hard-riding ("Iancer vn cheval. To stirre a horse in the stable till hee sweat withall ; or (as our) to jaunt ; (an old word)." Cotgrave's Fr. and Engl. Dict.), iv. 179.

jaw, to devour : the wolves would jaw me, viii. 159.

jay, a loose woman ("Putta, a wench, a quirle . . . a whore, a trull . . . a Iay, a Piot, a Magot-apy." Florio's Ital. and Engl. Dict.) : Some jay of Italy, vii. 680 ; to know turtles from jays, i. 381.

jealous-hood, jealousy, vi. 456.

jerkin under the line : now, jerkin, you are like to lose your hair, &c. i. 225 : A quibbling allusion to the loss of hair which is frequently suffered by persons who pass the line, and to the horse-hair line from which Stephano now takes down the jerkin : see line—Come hang, &c.

Jeronimy—Go by, iii. 105, where see foot-note.

jesses, "the short straps of leather, but sometimes of silk, which went round the legs of a hawk, in which were fixed the varvels, or little rings of silver, and to these the leash, or long strap which the falconer twisted round his hand" (Nares's Gloss.), vii. 424.

jest—As jocund as to, As jocund as to play a part in a masque or interlude, iv. 115.

jet, to strut : giants may jet through, vii. 676 ; how he jets, iii. 355 ; men and dames so jetted, viii. 16.

jet upon, to encroach upon : Your sausiness will jet upon my love, ii. 16 ; to jet Upon the innocent and awless throne, v. 391 ; to jet upon a prince's right, vi. 299 : and see note 27, ii. 58.

Jewess' eye—Worth a, &c. 367 : A slight alteration, for the nonce, of the proverbial expression, "Worth a Jew's eye."

jig—He's for a, vii. 144 : Though formerly, besides meaning a merry dance, a jig meant a facetious metrical composition, and frequently was synonymous with ballad ("So in Florio's Italian Dict. 1591, 'Frottola, a countrie jigg, or round, or countrie song, or wanton verses,'" MALONE), there can be no doubt that in the present passage Shakespeare alludes to a theatrical jig, which was the technical term for a coarse sort of comic entertainment usually performed after the play, and occasionally, it would appear, lasting for an hour: "it seems," says Mr. Collier, "to have been a ludicrous composition in rhyme, sung, or said, by the clown, and accompanied by dancing and playing upon the pipe and tabor." Hist. of Engl. Dram. Poetry, vol. iii. p. 380. ("Farce: A (fond and dissolute) Play, Comedie, or Enterlude; also, the Igg at the end of an Enterlude, wherein some prettie knauerie is acted." Cotgrave's Fr. and Engl. Dict.)

jig-maker, a writer of jigs, vi. 156: see jig.

Joan had not gone out—Old, v. 128: "I am told by a gentleman, better acquainted with falconry than myself, that the meaning, however expressed, is, that the wind being high, it was ten to one that the old hawk had flown quite away; a trick which hawks often play their masters in windy weather" (JOHNSON): "i.e. the wind was so high it was ten to one that old Joan would not have taken her flight at the game" (PERCY).

John-a-dreams, i.e. John of dreams, Dreaming John,—a nickname for a dreamy, lumpish, stupid fellow, vii. 146.

joint-ring, vii. 453: "Such a ring, of the Elizabethan era," writes Mr. Fairholt, "is shewn in the accompanying woodcut [apud Halliwell's Shakespeare]. It was a split ring, the halves made to fit in each other very closely when united, and the joined hands to lock it tight. Such rings were extensively used, as love-tokens, in the sixteenth and seventeenth centuries:" Compare gimmel-bit.

joint-stool—A, iii. 134: An allusion to the proverbial expression, Cry you mercy, I took you for a joint-stool, vii. 306: it is given by Ray, Proverbs, p. 202, ed. 1768.

Jourdain—Margery, v. 118: "It appears from Rymer's Fœdera, vol. x. p. 505, that in the tenth year of King Henry the Sixth, Margery Jourdemayn, John Virley clerk, and friar John Ashwell were, on the ninth of May 1433, brought from Windsor by the constable of the castle, to which they had been committed for sorcery, before the Council at Westminster, and afterwards, by an order of Council, delivered into the custody of the Lord Chancellor. The same day it was ordered by the Lords of Council that, whenever the said Virley and Ashwell should find security for their good behaviour, they should be set at liberty, and in like manner that Jourdemayn should be discharged on her husband's finding security. This woman was afterwards burned in Smithfield, as stated in the play and also in the chronicles" (DOUCE).

journal, daily, i. 501; vii. 694.

Jove in a thatched house, iii. 47: The thatched house is, of course, the dwelling of Baucis and Philemon: see foot-note, ii. 87.

Jove's accord, vi. 23: see note 33, vi. 106.

Jovial face—His, His face like that of Jove, vii. 704:

joy, to enjoy: hope to joy, iv. 135; joy thy life, iv. 181; joy her raven-colour'd love, vi. 304; joy'd an earthly throne, v. 183.

Judas was hanged on an elder, ii. 228: Such was the common legend; in accordance to which, Sir John Mandevile tells us that, in his time, the very tree was to be seen; "And faste by, is zit the Tree of Eldre, that Judas henge him self upon, for despeyt that he hadde, whan he solde and betrayed oure Lorde." Voiage and Trauaile, &c. p. 112, ed. 1725 (But we find in Pulci,

"Era di sopra a la fonte un carrubbio, L'arbor, si dice, ove s'impiccò Giuda," &c.

Morgante Mag. C. xxv. st. 77:

The Arbor Judæ (Cercis siliquastrum), writes Gerarde, "is thought to be that whereon Iudas did hang himselfe, and not vpon the Elder tree, as it is vulgarly said." Herbal, p. 1428, ed. 1633).

Judas's [hair]—Something browner than, iii. 49: Judas was usually represented, in tapestries and pictures, with red hair and beard: Compare Cain-coloured beard.

judicious, judicial: Shall have judicious hearing, vi. 237.

Julius Caesar's ill-erected tower, iv. 166: "The Tower of London is traditionally said to have been the work of Julius Cæsar" (JOHNSON).

jump, exactly, coincident with: jump at this dead hour, vii. 105; jump upon this bloody question, vii. 210; jump where he may Cassio find, vii. 414; jump as they are here, viii. 129.

junkets, sweetmeats, dainties (Ital. giuncata), iii. 149.

Juno—I, his despiteful, &c. iii. 248: "Alluding to the story of Hercules" (JOHNSON); "Æn. i. 7-10, especially tot adire labores" (WALKER).

Justice or Iniquity & see Iniquity, &c. justicer, a justice ("The most apoient law-books have justicers of the peace as frequently as justices of the peace," REED), vii. 305, 306, 727; justicers, vii. 317.

jutty, "or jetty . . . that part of a building which shoots forward beyond the rest. See Florio's Italian Dictionary, 1598: Barbacane. An outnooke or corner standing out of a house; a jettie," &c. (MALONE): no jutty, frieze, vii. 17.

jutty, to jut out beyond: jutty his confounded base, iv. 450.

juvenal, a youth, ii. 171 (four times), 184, 288; iv. 321.

K.

kam, crooked: clean kam, quite crooked, quite wrong (or, as Brutus subjoins, "Merely awry"), vi. 189: compare clean.

Kate!—How now, iv. 230: "Shakespeare either mistook the name of Hotspur's wife (which was not Katharine, but Elizabeth), or else designedly changed it, out of the remarkable fondness he seems to have had for the familiar appellation of Kate, which he is never weary of repeating, when he has once introduced it; as in this scene, the scene of Katharine and Petruchio, and the courtship between King Henry V. and the French Princess. The wife of Hotspur was the Lady Elizabeth Mortimer," &c. (STEVENS): "Shakespeare calls this lady [Lady Percy] Kate; Hall and Holinshed call her Elinor, and mention that she was aunt to the Earl of March, on which account Shakespeare, apparently forgetting that he had correctly styled Lady Percy Mortimer's sister [see Mortimer. Wor. I cannot blame him, &c.], in another place (Act iii. Sc. 1) makes Mortimer speak of her as his aunt. There is throughout a confusion between uncle and nephew." Courtenay's Comment. on the Hist. Plays of Shakespeare, vol. i. p. 93 (note).

kecksies, dry hollow stalks of hemlock or similar plants, iv. 500.

Keech—Goodwife, iv. 332: such a keech, v. 486: see note 50, iv. 295.

keel, to cool, ii. 236.

keep, care: in Baptista's keep my treasure is, iii. 124.

keep, to live, to dwell: In what place of the field doth Calchas keep? vi. 80; where they keep, vii. 128; where earth-delving conies keep, viii. 262; Where youth, and cost, and witless bravery keep, i. 453; as an outlaw in a castle keeps, v. 37; where, they say, he keeps, vi. 343; the habitation, where thou keep'st, i. 477; That ever kept with men, ii. 389; where the mad-cap duke his uncle kept, iv. 222.

keep, to restrain: when a cur cannot keep himself in all companies, i. 311.

keep his house—Who cannot keep his wealth must, Who cannot keep his wealth must "keep within doors for fear of duns" (JOHNSON), vi. 536.

keep my stables where I lodge my wife—I'll, iii. 438: "What he [Antigonus] means—and the excessive grossness of the idea can hardly be excused—is, unquestionably, that if Hermione be proved incontinent, he should believe every woman is unchaste; his own wife as licentious as Semiramis ('Equum adamatum a Semiramide,' &c. Pliny, l. viii. c. 42), and where he lodged her he would 'keep,' that is, guard, or fasten the entry of his stables. This sense of the word 'keep' is so common, even in Shakespeare, that it is amazing no one should have seen its application here. For example; 'Dromio, keep the gate.' Comedy of Errors, act ii. sc. 2. 'Keep the door close, sirrah.' Henry VIII. act v. sc. 1. 'I thank you: keep the door.' Hamlet, act iv. sc. 5. 'Gratiano, keep the house,' &c. Othello, act v. sc. 2" (STAUNTON): As to the words 'keep my stables,' compare also the following passage in Greene's James the Fourth; "A young stripling . . . that can wait in a gentleman's chamber when his master is a mile off, keep his stable when 'tis empty, and his purse when 'tis full," &c. Works, p. 193, ed. Dyce, 1861: According to Mr. Grant White, Antigonus plainly means, "I will degrade my wife's chamber into a stable or dog-kennel."

keep her still, and men in awe—To, "To keep her still to himself, and to deter others from demanding her in marriage" (MALONE), viii. 6.

keep touch: see the last touch.

keeps his regiment—The Earl of Pembroke, v. 443: "i.e. remains with it. Thus we say of a person confined by illness,—he keeps his chamber or his bed" (STEEVENS): In a note on Antony and Cleopatra, act iii. sc. 6, Mr. Collier observes; "When, in 'Richard III,' Richmond says, 'The Earl of Pembroke keeps his regiment,' he means his command generally, and not that the Earl was the colonel of a certain number of men, now called 'a regiment.' The same remark will apply to Richmond's direction, 'Good lords, conduct him to his regiment,' speaking of Lord Stanley." But compare King John, act ii. sc. 1,

"Up higher to the plain; where we'll set forth In best appointment all our regiments."

Keisar, an emperor, i. 353.

ken, to know: I ken the solght, i. 364; I ken the manner of his gait, vi. 72; Had I kenn'd all that were, viii. 194.

ken, to destroy: As far as I could ken the chalky cliffs, v. 155.

ken, a view, a reach of sight: within a ken, iv. 367; vii. 690; losing ken of Albion's wished coast, v. 155.

Kendal green, iv. 238 (twice): Kendal in Westmoreland was celebrated for its manufacture of green cloth.

Kent, in the Commentaries Cæsar writ, Is term'd the civillest place of all this isle, v. 179: "So, in Cæsar's Comment. B. v. [14]; 'Ex his omnibus [longe] sunt humanissimi qui Cantium incolunt.' The passage is thus translated by Arthur Golding, 1590 [1565]; 'Of all the inhabitants of this isle, the civilest are the Kentishfolke'" (STEEVENS).

kerchief, a coif ("A Kerchief, rica, calantica." Coles's Lat. and Engl. Dict.), i. 382, 397; vi. 639 (perhaps, however, in the second of the passages now referred to, it may mean "a covering for the breast").

kern, a light-armed foot-soldier of Ireland and of the Western Isles (the Irish kern, at least, being generally described as very poor and wild), iv. 465; v. 152; kerns, iv. 127; v. 150, 152, 184; vii. 6 (twice), 69 (Jamieson, in his Etym. Dict. of the Scottish Language, gives "Kerne. A foot soldier, armed with a dart or a spear.

'Then ne'er let the gentle Norman blude Grow cald for highland Kerne.'

[Scott's] Antiquary, iii. 224.

It is used in a similar sense by E[nglish] writers in reference to the Irish: "again (sub "Galloglach") he has "Kerns is merely another form of Cateranes:" Perhaps in the last of the passages of Shakespeare above referred to,

"I cannot strike at wretched kerns, whose arms Are hir'd to bear their staves," kerns is equivalent to "boors;" compare

"And these rude Germane kernes not yet subdued."

The Tragedie of Claudius Tiberius Nero, 1607, sig. c3 verso).

kettle, a kettle-drum, vii. 207.

key of officer and office—The, i. 179: Here key is used in the sense of a tuning-key.

key-cold, as cold as a key, v. 356; viii. 338 ("A key, on account of the coldness of the metal of which it is composed, was anciently employed to stop any slight bleeding. The epithet [key-cold] is common to many old writers," STEEVENS).

kibe, a chap in the heel, an ulcerated chilblain, i. 200; vii. 196; kibes, i. 354; vii. 273.

kioky-wicky, iii. 237: Whatever may have been the original meaning of this ludicrous word, it is plainly used here to signify a wife or mistress.

kill, kill, kill, kill, kill him! vi. 237; Then, kill, kill, kill, kill, kill, kill! vii. 327; doth cry "Kill, kill!" viii. 261: This was the ancient cry of the English troops when they charged the enemy.

Killingworth, the old name for Kenilworth, v. 176, 183 (Mr. Collier observes; "The Rev. Mr. Dyce is very anxious ('Remarks,' p. 130) that we should spell 'Kenilworth' (its proper name) Killingworth (its corruption), because it so stands in the old editions. In Shakespeare's time there was no uniformity, and why are we to revive obsolete archaisms?" But, on the other hand, hear Archbishop Trench; "The modern editors of Shakespeare take a very unwarrantable liberty with his text, when they substitute 'Kenilworth' for 'Killingworth,' which he wrote, and which was his, Marlowe's, and generally the earlier form of the name." English Past and Present, p. 254, note, fourth ed.).

kin, and less than kind—A little more than, vii. 110: This may be illustrated by a passage in W. Rowley's Search for Money, 1609; "I would he were not so neere to us in kindred; then sure he would be neerer in kindnesse." p. 5, ed. Percy Soc.

kind, nature: the deed of kind, ii. 355; the cat will after kind, iii. 39; thy youth and kind, iii. 62; Your cuckoo sings by kind, iii. 216; in their kind they speak it, iii. 220; Fitted by kind for rape and villany, vi. 300; fell curs of bloody kind, vi. 309; from quality and kind, vi. 627; the worm will do his kind ("the serpent will act according to his nature," JOHNSON), vii. 595; to change their kinds, viii. 320.

kind, natural: Conceit deceitful, so compact, so kind, viii. 328.

kind, possessed of natural affection: O, do not slander him, for he is kind, v. 379.

kindle, to incite: that I kindle the boy thither, iii. 9.

kindle, to bring forth: dwell where she is kindled, iii. 44.

kindless, unnatural, without natural affection, vii. 146.

kindly, natural: that fatherly and kindly power, ii. 120; Frosty, but kindly (suited to the season), iii. 24; the bishop hath a kindly gird ("a gird akin to, in keeping with, fitting, proper to the cardinal's calling," ARROWSMITH, Notes and Queries, First Series, vol. vii. p. 543), v. 40.

kindly, naturally, in a natural manner: This do, and do it kindly, gentle sire, iii. 107.

kindly, aptly, pertinently: Thou hast most kindly hit it, vi. 419.

kindly—Thy other daughter will use thee, vii. 273: "The Fool uses the word kindly here in two senses; it means affectionately, and like the rest of her kind" (MASON).

King and the Beggar—Ballad of the: see Cophetua—King.

king'd, ruled: King'd of our fears, iv. 22; she is so idly king'd ("supplied with a king," JOHNSON in his Dict.), iv. 445.

king'd, raised to royalty, made a king: Then am I king'd again, iv. 178.

kingdom'd Achilles in commotion rages, vi. 41: Here kingdom'd has been explained "possessing kingly power," "having or seeming to have a kingdom;" while Malone observes, "So, in Julius Cæsar [act ii. sc. 1],

'The Genius and the mortal instruments Are then in council; and the state of man, Like to a little kingdom, suffers then The nature of an insurrection.'

kingly-poor flout, "a very poor retort for a king" (KNIGHT), ii. 218; and see note 152, ii. 256.

kirtle, iv. 349; half-kirtles, iv. 398: "Few words have occasioned such controversy among the commentators on our old plays as this [kirtle]; and all for want of knowing that it is used in a two-fold sense, sometimes for the jacket merely, and sometimes for the train or upper-petticoat attached to it. A full kirtle was always a jacket and petticoat, a half-kirtle (a term which frequently occurs) was either the one or the other: but our ancestors, who wrote when this article of dress was every where in use, and when there was little danger of being misunderstood, most commonly contented themselves with the simple term (kirtle), leaving the sense to be gathered from the context." Gifford's note on Jonson's Works, vol. ii. p. 260.

kiss in fee-farm!—A: see fee-farm, &c.

kiss you—To take you out, And not to, v. 504: "A kiss was anciently the established fee of a lady's partner" (STEEVENS).

kiss thee; then the rot returns To thine own lips again—I will not, vi. 552: "This alludes to an opinion in former times, generally prevalent, that the venereal infection transmitted to another left the infector free. I will not, says Timon, take the rot from thy lips by kissing thee" (JOHNSON).

kissed your keeper's daughter—But not, i. 348: "This has the appearance of a fragment of some old ballad" (DOUCE).

kisses, if your four negatives make your two affirmatives, &c.—So that, conclusions to be as, iii. 385: "One cannot but wonder that this passage should have perplexed the commentators. In Marlowe's Lust's Dominion the Queen says to the Moor;

'Come, let's kisse.

Moor. Away, away.

Queen. No, no, says I; and twice away, says stay.'

Sir Philip Sidney has enlarged upon this thought in the sixty-third stanza of his Astrophel and Stella (FARMER): But Bust's Dominion was certainly not from Marlowe's pen: see the Account of Marlowe and his Writings, p. xlvi. prefixed to his Works, ed. Dyce, 1858.

kissing-comfits, sugar-plums perfumed, to sweeten the breath, i. 411.

knack, a bauble, a pretty trifle, iii. 161, 478; knacks, ii. 266; iii. 475.

knapped, snapped, broke off short: as lying a gossip in that as ever knapped ginger, ii. 377. *

knapped, rapped, struck: she knapped 'em o' the coxcombs, vii. 287.

knave, a lad, a servant: my good knave, Costard! ii. 186; good, my knave, ibid.; O, my knave, iii. 238; Poor knave, vi. 674; Gentle knave, ibid.; Where's my knave? vii. 264; my friendly knave, vii. 266; my pretty knave, ibid.; My good knave Eros . . . my knave, vii. 576; he's but Fortune's knave, vii. 586; a couple of Ford's knaves, i. 392; All I kept were knaves, to serve in meat to villains ("knave is here in the compound sense of a servant and a rascal," JOHNSON), vi. 563; Whip me such honest knaves ("knave is here for servant, but with a sly mixture of contempt," JOHNSON), vii. 376.

kneel down before you;—but, indeed, to pray for the queen—And so, iii. 402: "The Morals written and exhibited subsequent to the Reformation almost invariably closed with an 'epilogue,' in which prayers were offered up by the actors (usually kneeling) for the King, Queen, nobility, clergy, and sometimes for the commons. This practice continued in the beginning of the 17th century, and the most recent instance that I am aware of is the epilogue to [Chapman's] Two Wise Men and all the rest Fools, 1619," &c. Collier's Hist. of Engl. Dram. Poetry, vol. iii. p. 445: This practice might be illustrated by quotations from the conclusions of several early dramas.

knife I'll help it presently—With this, vi. 450; this bloody knife, vi. 451; Laying down her dagger, vi. 455: "Daggers, or, as they were more commonly called, knives, were worn at all times, by every woman in England—whether they were so in Italy, Shakspeare, I believe, never inquired, and I cannot tell." Gifford's note on Jonson's Works, vol. v. p. 221. *

knighted in the field, iv. 6: see carpet consideration, &c.

knives—invite them without, vi. 517: "It was the custom in our author's time for every guest to bring his own knife," &c. (BIRSON).

knives under his pillow—Hath laid, vii. 299: "Shakspeare found this charge against the fiend, with many others of the same nature, in Harsnet's Declaration [of Popish Impostures], 1603, and has used the very words of it" (STEEVENS): Certainly not "the very words of it."

knot-grass—Hindering, ii. 300: Knot-grass (polygnum aviculare) was supposed, when taken in an infusion, to have the power of hindering the growth of any child or animal (Mr. Beisly is mistaken in saying that "the allusion here made is to the character of the plant as hindering the growth of useful plants, as it spreads in thick masses, and is very tough and deep-rooted." Shakspeare's Garden, &c. p. 53).

knots disorder'd—Her, iv. 155: see curious-knotted garden.

knowledge—A lack for lesser, "O, that my knowledge were less!" (JOHNSON), iii. 435.

known, been acquainted: You and I have known, sir, vii. 531; Sir, we have known together in Orleans, vii. 644.

L.

label to another deed—The, vi. 450: "The seals of deeds in our author's time were not impressed on the parchment itself on which the deed was written, but were appended on distinct slips or labels affixed to the deed" (MALONE).

labras, lips, i. 349 (Span.).

lace, to embellish: streaks Do lace the severing clouds, vi. 442; His silver skin lac'd with his golden blood, vii. 28 (see golden blood, &c.); lace itself with his society, viii. 382.

laced mutton—A, i. 265: In this very common cant expression for a courtesan (see mutton) the meaning of laced has been a good deal disputed. Perhaps the mutton was called laced with a quibble,—courtesans being notoriously fond of finery, and also frequently subjected to the whip: Du Bartas tells us that St. Louis put down the stews,

"Lacing with lashes their unpitied skin, Whom lust or lucre had bestowed therein."

Works, by Sylvester,—St. Louis the King, p. 539, ed. 1641:

But in the present passage is laced mutton to be regarded as synonymous with courtesan? When Speed applies that term to Julia, does he not use it in the much less offensive sense of—a richly-attired piece of woman's flesh?

lackeying the varying tide, "floating backwards and forwards with the variation of the tide, like a page or lackey at his master's heels" (THEOBALD), vii. 509.

lade it dry—He ll, He'll drain it dry, v. 279: On this passage in the Cambridge Shakspeare is a note, "lade] loy or ladle Keightley conj.;" and yet lade is a not uncommon verb: "To lade (or draine) a riuer with pailles, &c. Bacqueter, baqueter une riviere." Cotgrave's Fr. and Engl. Dict.: "To Lade a river, Decopulo. You may as well bid me Lade the Sea with a Nut-shel," &c. Colea's Lat. and Engl. Dict.

lady-bird!—God forbid!—where's this girl?—What, vi. 398: "An exquisite touch of nature," writes Mr. Staunton. "The old nurse in her fond garrulity uses 'lady-bird' as a term of endearment; but recollecting its application to a female of loose manners, checks herself;—'God forbid!' her darling should prove such a one:" In the preceding explanation I believe that Mr. Staunton is altogether mistaken. The Nurse says that she has already "bid Juliet come:" she then calls out, "What, lamb! what, lady-bird!" and Juliet not yet making her appearance, she exclaims, "God forbid!—where's this girl?"—the words "God forbid" being properly an ellipsis of "God forbid that any accident should keep her away," but used here merely as an expression of impatience.

lady of my earth, vi. 395: see note 14, vi. 477.

lady-smocks, "originally called our Lady smocks (Cardamine pratensis). A common meadow-plant, with blushing white flowers, appearing early in spring" (Beisly's Shakspeare's Garden, &c. p. 42), ii. 235.

lag, the last or lowest part or class: the common lag of people, vi. 546: see note 124, vi. 593.

lag, late, tardy, coming short of: That came too lag to see him buried, v. 383; some twelve or fourteen moonshines Lag of a brother, vii. 258.

lag-end, the latter end, iv. 274; v. 499.

laid: see the second lay.

lakin: see by'r lakin.

laming The shrine of Venus, outgoing, surpassing the shrine, &c., vii. 726.

lampass—The, iii. 144: "The bars [of the palate] occasionally swell, and rise to a level with, and even beyond the edge of, the teeth. They are very sore, and the horse feels badly on account of the pain he suffers from the pressure of the food on them. This is called the Lampass." The Horse, by Youatt, p. 192, ed. 1848.

Lancaster—The Duke of, iv. 328; 'twere better than your dukedom, iv. 375: "This is an anachronism. Prince John of Lancaster was not created a duke till the second year of the reign of his brother, King Henry V." (MALONE): Douce observes that "Malone ought to have added, 'and then not Duke of Lancaster but of Bedford.' Mr. Ritson seems to have traced the source of Shakspeare's error in calling Prince John of Lancaster Duke of Lancaster, in Stowe's Annales; but he has omitted to remark that even then Shakspeare had forgotten that Prince John was not the second son of Henry the Fourth. The blunder of the industrious historian is unaccountable. See the seal of Henry the Fifth as Prince of Wales and Duke of Lancaster in Sandford's Genealogical History."

lances, lance-men: Mars, of lances the almighty, ii. 229; our impress'd lances, vii. 337.

land-damn, iii. 438 : see note 41, iii. 512.

land-rakers—No foot, "No padders, no wanderers on foot" (JOHNSON), iv. 225.

languish, languishment, the state of pining, suffering : cures with another's languish, vi. 396 ; rids our dogs of languish, vii. 588.

lantern, slaughter'd youth—O, no, a, vi. 467 : "A lantern may not, in this instance, signify an enclosure for a lighted candle, but a louvre, or what in ancient records is styled lanternium, i.e. a spacious round or octagonal turret full of windows, by means of which cathedrals, and sometimes halls, are illuminated. See the beautiful lantern at Ely Minster" (STEEVENS).

lapp'd, wrapped up, vii. 732.

lapsed in this place—If I be, iii. 367 : Here lapsèd seems to mean caught or found off my guard.

laps'd in time and passion, "having suffered time to slip and passion to cool" (JOHNSON), vii. 170.

lapwing—To seem the, &c. i. 455 ; Far from her nest the lapwing cries away, ii. 34 ; This lapwing runs away with the shell on his head, vii. 205 : Allusions to the lapwing (or peewit) endeavouring to mislead those who would plunder her nest are very common in our early writers ; and Ray gives "The lapwing cries most farthest from her nest." Proverbs, p. 199, ed. 1768 : it was also generally said that the young lapwings ran out of the shell with a portion of it sticking on their heads. (Yarrell, in his account of the lapwing, quotes Selby for what follows : "the female birds invariably, upon being disturbed, run from the eggs, and then fly near to the ground for a short distance, without uttering any alarm cry. The males, on the contrary, are very clamorous, and fly round the intruder, endeavouring, by various instinctive arts, to divert his attention." Hist. of Brit. Birds, vol. ii. p. 482, sec. ed.)

larded with sweet flowers, garnished, strewed with, sweet flowers, vii. 180.

large, free, coarse, licentious : large jests, ii. 101 ; word too large, ii. 119.

lark and loathèd toad chang'd eyes, &c.—Some say the, vi. 443 : "The toad having very fine eyes, and the lark very ugly ones, was the occasion of a common saying amongst the people, that the toad and lark had changed eyes" (WARBURTON).

lash'd with woe, i. 12 : In this passage does lash'd mean "punished," or is it to be understood as lash'd or lac'd?

lass-lorn, forsaken by his mistress, i. 220.

latch, to lay hold of, to catch : Where hearing should not latch them, vii. 59 ; which it doth latch, viii. 405.

latch, to lick over, to anoint: latch'd the Athenian's eyes, ii. 292 (Fr. lecher): so, at least, Hamner explains latch'd in this passage; and his explanation is adopted as the true one in Richardson's Dict.

late, recent, new: As great to me as late, i. 230; the late (lately appointed) commissioners, iv. 439.

late, lately, recently: The mercy that was quick in us but late, iv. 440; late-despised Richard, v. 34; bereft thee of thy life too late, v. 267; late entering at his heedful ears, v. 282; Too late he died that might have kept that title, v. 395; It pleas'd the king his master very late, vii. 281; that life Which she too early and too late hath spill'd, viii. 338.

lated, belated, benighted, vii. 37, 553.

lath, a contemptuous term for a sword: have your lath glu'd within your sheath, vi. 298.

lath—Dagger of: see Dagger, &c.

latten, a sort of mixed metal, resembling brass in its nature and colour; but sometimes white ("Buttons of steel, copper, tin, or latton, for Jerkins." The Rates of the Custome house, &c., 1582, sig. A vii. verso): this latten bilbo (=this sword without edge and temper), i. 349: see bilbo: "The sarcasm intended is, that Slender had neither courage nor strength" (HEATH).

laugh-and-lie-down (more properly Laugh-and-lay-down) was a game at cards, to which there is an allusion in what follows;

"I could laugh now.
Wait-w. I could lie down, I'm sure!"

viii. 143.

laughing, as, Ha, ha; he!—Some be of, ii. 118: "A quotation from the Accidence" (JOHNSON).

laund, a lawn, v. 272; viii. 266.

laundering, washing, viii. 439.

laundry—His, i. 352: "Sir Hugh means to say his launder" (STEEVENS).

lavolt, vi. 69; lavoltas, iv. 458: The lavolt or lavolta was a dance for two persons, consisting much in high bounds and whirls (Sir John Davies thus prettily describes it;

"Yet is there one the most delightfull kind,
A loffie iumping, or a leaping round,
Where arme in arme two dauncers are entwind,
And whirle themse ues, with strict embracements bound;
And still their feet an anapest do sound;
An anapest is all their musicks song, Whose first two feet are short, and third is long."
Orchestra, &c. st. 70).

law of writ and the liberty—For the, vii. 142 : see note 64, vii. 224.

lay, a wager : A dreadful lay, v. 194 ; my fortunes against any lay worth naming, vii. 412 ; I will have it no lay, vii. 647.

lay, to waylay : all the country is laid for me, v. 185.

"lay by," and spent with crying "bring in"—Got with swearing, iv. 211 : "Lay by" (properly, a nautical phrase, meaning "become stationary by slackening sail") is supposed to be used here for the "Stand!" of highwaymen ; "bring in" is, of course, "bring in more wine."

lay for, to lay out for, to strive to win : lay for hearts, vi. 544.

lead his [the bear-ward's] apes into hell, ii. 86 ; lead apes in hell, iii. 129 : "'To lead apes' was in our author's time, as at present, one of the employments of a bear-ward, who often carries about one of those animals along with his bear : but I know not how this phrase came to be applied to old maids" (MALONE) : "That women who refused to bear children should, after death, be condemned to the care of apes in leading-strings, might have been considered as an act of posthumous retribution" (STEEVENS).

leaguer, iii. 252 : "Is the Dutch, or rather Flemish, word for a camp ; and was one of the new-fangled terms introduced from the Low-Countries." Gifford's note on Massinger's Works, vol. iii. p. 121, ed. 1813 : It is generally used to signify the camp of the assailants in a siege.

Leander cross'd the Hellespont—How young, i. 263 ; to scale another Hero's tower, &c., i. 294 : Perhaps allusions to Marlowe's poem Hero and Leander, which, though not printed till 1598, might have been read by Shakespeare before it reached the press, for there is no doubt that in those days poems were much handed about in manuscript : Shakespeare has quoted a line from it in As you like it ; see vol. iii. p. 53, and foot-note.

lease—That they are out by, i. 318 : "By ^{*}Thurio's possessions, he himself understands his lands and estate. But Proteus chooses to take the word likewise in a figurative sense, as signifying his mental endowments ; and when he says they are out by lease, he means they are no longer enjoyed by their master (who is a fool), but are leased out to another" (LORD HAILES).

leash of drawers—A, A tierce of drawers (viz. Tom, Dick, and Francis, who are immediately mentioned), iv. 232 : Leash is properly a string or thong by which a dog is led ; and it came to signify "a tierce" or "three," because usually three dogs were coupled together : "A Leace of Greyhounds is three." R. Holme's Academy of Armory and Blazon, B. iii. ch. iii. p. 76 : "A Leash of hounds, canum ternio." Coles's Lat. and Engl. Dict. (In Sylvester's Du Bartas I find

"As Citizens
 by leashes [the original "trois à trois"] and by payrs, Crowned with Garlands, go to take the ayrs," &c.
Fifth Day of the First Week, p. 40, ed. 1641.)

leasing, lying, iii. 337; vi. 222: The former passage has been explained "May Mercury teach thee to lie, since thou liest in favour of fools" (JOHNSON).

leather-coats, the apples generally known as golden russetings, iv. 394.

leave, licentiousness: love, whose leave exceeds commission, viii. 258.

leave, to part with: to leave her token, i. 313; he would not leave it, ii. 412; I may not leave it so ("I may not so resign my office," which you offer to take on you at your peril," JOHNSON), v. 417; As will not leave their tinct, vii. 169.

leave, to leave off, to desist: I cannot leave to love, i. 288; You bade me ban, and will you bid me leave? v. 161.

leave—Good: see good leave, &c.

leech, a physician, vi. 576.

leer, complexion, colour: a Rosalind of a better leer, iii. 56; fram'd of another leer, vi. 330.

leese, to lose, viii. 351.

leet, iii. 112; leets, vii. 420: "Leet. A manor court, or private jurisdiction for petty offences; also a day on which such court is held." Nares's Gloss.

leg, a bow, an obeisance: Make a leg, iii. 228; iv. 152; here is my leg, iv. 242; I doubt whether their legs be worth the sums, vi. 522.

legerity, lightness, nimbleness, iv. 470.

'leges, alleges, iii. 121: see note 41, iii. 186.

leiger: see lieger.

leisure and the fearful time—The, v. 445; The leisure and enforcement of the time, v. 449; spiritual leisure, v. 535: On the first of these passages Johnson observes, "We have still a phrase equivalent to this, however harsh it may seem, 'I would do this, if leisure would permit,' where leisure, as in this passage, stands for want of leisure. So again [in the second passage]:" According to Nares, "It stands simply for time or space allowed." Gloss. in v.

leman, a paramour, a lover: his wife's leman, i. 399.

leman, a mistress, a sweetheart: sixpence for thy leman, iii. 346; drink unto the leman mine, iv. 394.

length, delay, stay: All length is torture, vii. 577.

lenten, spare (like the fare in Lent): A good lenten (short, laconic) answer, iii. 335 ; what lenten (sparing, slight) entertainment the players shall receive from you, vii. 140 (in which passage Mr. Collier erroneously explains lenten entertainment to mean "Such entertainment as players met with in Lent, when they were often not allowed to perform").

l'envoy, A technical term (old French) to signify a sort of post-script,—a farewell or moral at the end of a poem, and sometimes of a prose piece, ii. 185 (six times), 186 (five times).

leopards tame—Lions make, iv. 109 : An allusion to the Norfolk crest, which was a golden leopard.

lesser linen—When the kite builds, look to, iii. 463 : "When the good women, in solitary cottages near the woods where kites build, miss any of their lesser linen, as it hangs to dry on the hedge in spring, they conclude that the kite has been marauding for a lining to her nest ; and there adventurous boys often find it employed for that purpose" (HOLT WHITE) : "Autolycus here gives us to understand that he is a thief of the first class. This he explains by an allusion to an odd vulgar notion. The common people, many of them, think that, if any one can find a kite's nest, when she hath young, before they are fledged, and sew up their back doors, so as they cannot mute, the mother kite, in compassion to their distress, will steal lesser linen, as caps, cravats, ruffles, or any other such small matters as she can best fly with, from off the hedges where they are hanged to dry after washing, and carry them to her nest, and there leave them, if possible to move the pity of the first comer, to cut the thread, and ease them of their misery. Hence the proverb, 'When the kite builds, look to lesser linen.' But, saith Autolycus, I fly at higher game, or larger linen ; my traffic is in sheets" (PECK) : Qy. ?

let, a hindrance : That I may know the let, iv. 500 ; thy kinsmen are no let to me, vi. 412 ; but swells the higher by this let, viii. 305 ; kill him without lets, viii. 168 ; these lets attend the spring, viii. 296.

let, to hinder : That kings should let their ears hear their faults chid, viii. 13 ; Who with a lingering stay his course doth let, viii. 296 ; What lets but one may enter, i. 294 ; what lets it but he would be here, ii. 15 ; If nothing lets to make us happy both, iii. 391 ; I'll make a ghost of him that lets me, vii. 122.

let, to detain : To let him there a month, iii. 421.

let, to forbear : did not let to praise, viii. 287.

let him be a noble, even though he be a nobleman, v. 554.

lethe—Crimson'd in thy, vi. 652 : see note 66, vi. 700.

letter, "recommendation from powerful friends" (JOHNSON) : Pre-ferment goes by letter, vii. 376.

letters-patents, iv. 128, 138 ; v. 538 : So Shakespeare and his contemporaries wrote,—not "letters-patent." (Nay, even Pope, writing to Craggs in 1712, uses the expression "Letters Patents." Works, vol. viii. p. 233, ed. Roscoe.)

level, a range, a line of aim; out of the blank and level of my brain, iii. 442; My life stands in the level of your dreams, iii. 452; i' the level Of a full-charg'd confederacy, v. 491; within the level of your frown, viii. 407; not a heart which in his level came, viii. 448.

levy—As far as to the sepulchre of Christ . . . Forthwith a power of English shall we, iv. 207: see note 2, iv. 289.

lewd, wicked, base, vile: this lewd fellow, ii. 137; 'tis lewd and filthy, iii. 161; detained for lewd employments, iv. 107; such lewd, such mean attempts, iv. 254; trouble him with lewd complaints, v. 364 (where STEEVENS understands lewd to mean, "rude, ignorant"); thy lewd-tongu'd wife, iii. 448.

lewdly, wickedly: lewdly given, iv. 243; lewdly bent, v. 132; I have lied so lewdly, viii. 185.

lewdsters, lewd persons, libertines, i. 410.

libbard's head on knee—With, ii. 226: The knee-caps in old dresses and in plate-armour frequently represented a libbard's (i.e. a leopard's) head.

liberal, libertine, licentious, frank beyond decency, free-spoken, free to excess: She is too liberal ("licentious and gross in language," JOHNSON), i. 300; a liberal villain, ii. 120; The liberal opposition of our spirits, ii. 231; Something too liberal, ii. 364; a liberal tongue, iv. 128; liberal shepherds, vii. 191; liberal counsellor, vii. 399; speak as liberal ("free, under no control," STEEVENS) as the north, vii. 465; liberal wits, viii. 194.

liberty, libertinism, licentiousness: lust and liberty, vi. 548; liberties of sin ("licensed offenders," STEEVENS; "sinful liberties," MALONE), ii. 12.

license to kill for a hundred lacking one a week—A, v. 174: see note 150, v. 221.

Lichas, ii. 359; vii. 575: The attendant on Hercules, by whom he was thrown into the sea for having brought to him the poisoned garment from Deianeira.

lie, to reside, to sojourn: Does he lie at the Garter? i. 364; She must lie here on mere necessity, ii. 167; her poor castle where she lies, v. 26; or else lie for you (or else reside in prison in your stead), v. 354; Lies now even in the centre of this isle, v. 441; when the court lay at Windsor, i. 367.

Lie there, my art, i. 178: "Sir Will. Cecil, Lord Burleigh, Lord High Treasurer, &c. in the reign of Queen Elizabeth, when he put off his gown at night, used to say, Lie there, Lord Treasurer. Fuller's Holy State, p. 257" (STEEVENS): So in A Pleasant Commodity called Look about you, which was printed in 1600 (and therefore preceded The Tempest), Skinke puts off his hermit's robes with a similar expression ;

"Rob. Adew, good father.—Holla there, my horse ! [Exit.

Skin. Vp-spur the kicking iade, while I make speede To conjure Skinke out of his hermits weede.
Lye there religion."

Sig. A 2 verso :

in Chettile's Tragedy of Hoffman, 1631 (which was also an earlier play than The Tempest, see Henslowe's Diary, p. 229, ed. Shake. Soc.), Lorrique, throwing off the disguise of a French doctor, says, "Doctor lie there. Lorrique, like thyselfe appeare." Sig. c :

and in Ford's Lover's Melancholy Corax exclaims, "I'll stay in spite of thy teeth. There lies my gravity [Throws off his gown]." Works, vol. i. p. 23, ed. Gifford : I may add, that in Shadwell's Vir-tuoso, Sir Samuel Harty lays aside his female dress with the words, "So, tyrewoman, lie thou there." Act iv. p. 388, Works, ed. 1720.

lief—As, As willingly, as soon : i. 377, 398, 448, 451 ; ii. 98 ; iii. 8, 42, 56, 117, 365 ; iv. 170, 267 ; vi. 12, 620 ; vii. 153, &c.

liefest, dearest, v. 146.

lieger, or leiger, a resident ambassador at a foreign court, i. 478 ; liegers, vii. 650.

lifter, a thief, vi. 12 (with a quibble).

light, lighted, fallen : You are light into my hands, viii. 50.

light of ear, "credulous of evil, ready to receive malicious reports" (JOHNSON), vii. 300.

lighten thee—The Lord, The Lord enlighten thee (with a quibble—make thee lighter), iv. 334.

lightly, easily, readily : will not lightly trust the messenger, ii. 38 ; Believe't not lightly, vi. 200.

lightly, commonly, usually : Short summers lightly have a forward spring, v. 395.

lightly, were it heavier—I weigh it, "I should still esteem it but a trifling gift, were it heavier" (WARBURTON), v. 396. " lightning before death—A, vi. 467 : "A proverbial phrase, partly deduced from observation of some extraordinary effort of nature, often made in sick persons just before death; and partly from a superstitious notion of an ominous and preternatural mirth, supposed to come on at that period, without any ostensible reason." Nares's Gloss.

like, likely: as like as is true, i. 509.

like, to make like, to liken: like me to the peasant boys of France, v. 63; liking his father to a singing-man of Windsor, iv. 331.

like, to please: an it like your majesty, iv. 243; complexions that liked me, iii. 77; the music likes you not, i. 307; It likes me well, iii. 166; The offer likes not, iv. 449; this lodging likes me better, iv. 470; some conceit or other likes him well, v. 404; that that likes not you, vi. 86; It likes us well, vii. 133; This likes me well, vii. 207; His countenance likes me not, vii. 280.

like well—You, You are in good case, good condition of body, iv. 357: see liking.

likelihood, "similitude" (WARBURTON): by a lower but loving likelihood, iv. 496.

likelihood, "semblance, appearance" (JOHNSON): By any likelihood he showed to-day, v. 404.

liking, condition of body: to make difference of men's liking, i. 361; while I am in some liking ("while I have some flesh, some substance," MALONE), iv. 258 (Compare Greene's Neuer too late, Part First; "Here is weather that makes grasse plentie and sheepe fatte; . . . and yet I have one sheepe in my fold thats quite out of liking." Sig. o verso, ed. 1611).

Limander . . . Helen, blunders for Leander and Hero, ii. 317.

limbeck, an alembic, vii. 20.

limb-meal, limb by limb, vii. 670 (Compare inch-meal—By).

Limbo, hell (properly, the borders of hell): of Satan, and of Limbo, iii. 284; As far from help as Limbo is from bliss, vi. 316.

Limbo, a cant term for "a prison, confinement:" he's in Tartar Limbo, worse than hell, ii. 34.

Limbo Patrum—In, A cant expression for "in prison, in confinement," v. 569: According to the schoolmen, Limbus Patrum was the place, bordering on hell, where the souls of the patriarchs and saints of the Old Testament remained till the death of our Saviour, who, in descending into hell, set them free. (Qy. Is not Nares mistaken, when, in his Gloss., sub "Limbo," he describes Limbus Patrum as a place "where the fathers of the church, saints, and martyrs, awaited the general resurrection"?)

Limbs of Limehouse—The: see Tribulation of Tower-Hill, &c.

lime, bird-lime: put some lime upon your fingers, i. 225; lay lime to tangle her desires, i. 302.

lime in this sack—Here's : see sack, &c.

lime—Froth and : see froth and lime.

limit of your lives—The, The limited time of your lives, v. 402.

limit—Strength of : see strength of limit.

limit, to appoint : Limit each leader to his several charge. v. 443 ; For 'tis my limited service, vii. 26.

limited professions, vi. 562 : Here limited is explained by Warburton "legal," by Malone "regular, orderly," by Steevens "to which people are regularly and legally appointed," by Mr. Knight "legalised," by Mr. Collier "restricted."

limits of the charge set down—And many, iv. 208 : Here limits is explained by Warburton "estimates," by Heath "outlines, rough sketches, or calculations," by Malone "the regulated and appointed times for the conduct of the business in hand," by Mr. Collier "bounds of the expense."

Limoges ! O Austria !—O, iv. 32 : "Shakespeare has, on this occasion, followed the old play [The Troublesome Raigne of John, &c., see vol. iv. p. 3], which at once furnished him with the character of Falconbridge, and ascribed the death of Richard I. to the Duke of Austria. In the person of Austria he has conjoined the two well-known enemies of Cœur-de-lion [following the old play, where Austria is called Lymoges, the Austrich Duke]. Leopold, Duke of Austria, threw him into prison, in a former expedition [in 1193] ; but the castle of Chaluz, before which he fell [in 1199], belonged to Vidomar, Viscount of Limoges ; and the archer who pierced his shoulder with an arrow (of which wound he died) was Bertrand de Gourdon. The editors seem hitherto to have understood Lymoges as being an appendage to the title of Austria, and therefore inquired no further about it" (BLAKE).

Lincolnshire bagpipe—The drone of a, iv. 212 : "'Lincolnshire bagpipes' is a proverbial saying. Fuller has not attempted to explain it ; and Ray only conjectures that the Lincolnshire people may be fonder of this instrument than others" (DOUCE).

line—This most memorable, iv. 447 : Here line means "genealogy, deduction of his lineage" (JOHNSON).

line of life, one of the lines in the palm of the hand, according to the language of palmistry, ii. 363.

line—Come, hang them on this, i. 224 : The late Joseph Hunter, in his Essay on the Tempest, maintains that here "line" means a linden or lime-tree. But though, a little after in this play, mention is made of "the line-grove," it is evident that here a rope, and not a tree, is spoken of. If no other objections could be urged against Mr. Hunter's acceptation of the word line, we surely have a decisive one in the joke of Stephano, "Now, jerkin, you are like to lose your hair" (see jerkin under the line, &c.); a joke to which it is impossible to attach any meaning, unless we suppose that the line was a hair-line. Mr. Knight observes; "In a woodcut of twelve distinct figures of trades and callings of the time of James I. (see Smith's 'Cries of London,' p. 15), and of which there is a copy in the British Museum, we have the cry of 'Buy a hairline!'" And in Lyly's Midas, a barber's apprentice facetiously says, "All my mistres' lynes that she dryes her cloathes on, are made only of Mustachio stuffe [i.e. of the cuttings of moustachios]." Sig. G 2 verso, ed. 1592.

line, to strengthen: To line his enterprise, iv. 231; did line the rebel, vii. 11.

line, to delineate: All the pictures fairest lin'd, iii. 38.

line-grove, a grove of linden or lime-trees, i. 226: see note 116, i. 255.

ling, heath, broom, furze, i. 177: Feeling convinced that this reading is sufficiently established by what has been said of it in note 4, i. 237, I should have made no allusion to it here, had I not found that Mr. Beisly defends the old lection, "long heath and brown furze, because ling and heath or heth are names for one and the same plant, and Shakspeare would not have called this plant by two different common names." Shakspeare's Garden, &c. p. 12: But Farmer has shown (vide the note just referred to) that Harrison, in his description of Britain prefixed to Holinshed, speaks of heath and ling as different plants; and I have little doubt there are other old writers who have made the same distinction. (Mr. Beisly, in his "Introduction," declares most extravagantly that Shakspeare's "knowledge of Botany was not less than that of any other branch of natural history he investigated and described." p. xviii.)

link to colour Peter's hat—There was no, iii. 152: "A link is a torch of pitch. Greene, in his Mihil Mumchance, says; 'This cozenage is used likewise in selling old hats found upon dung-hills, instead of newe, blackt over with the smoake of an old linke'" (STEEVENS): The tract just quoted is wrongly attributed to Greene.

linstock, the stick which holds the gunner's match, iv. 449.

lions—Like one of the, i. 274: "If Shakspeare had not been thinking of the lions in the Tower, he would have written 'like a lion'" (RITSON); a note carped at by Mr. Knight, who seems to have forgotten that a caged lion paces up and down his prison very majestically.

lip, to kiss, vii. 438; lipp'd, vii. 525.

Lipsbury pinfold, vii. 278: A pinfold is a pound; but what the commentators have written about the name Lipsbury is too unsatisfactory to be cited; Mr. Collier boldly adopts the alteration of his Ms. Corrector,—"Finsbury."

liquor, to rub with oil or grease, in order to keep out the water : liquor fishermen's boots with me, i. 406 ; justice hath liquored her, iv. 225.

list, desire, inclination : when I have list to sleep, vii. 398.

list, a limit, a boundary : the list of my voyage, iii. 362 ; The very list, iv. 265 ; within the weak list of a country's fashion, iv. 505 ; The ocean, overpeering of his list, vii. 182 ; Confine yourself but in a patient list, vii. 438.

list, to like, to please, to choose : let them take it as they list, vi. 389 ; "If we list to speak," vii. 127 ; do what she list, vii. 413.

lither sky—The, v. 64 : "[Here] lither is flexible or yielding" (JOHNSON) ; and see Richardson's Dict. in "Lithe," &c. (With lither sky—which has been explained quite erroneously, "lazy sky"—compare the "agitabilis aer" of Ovid, "Terra feras cepit ; volucres agitabilis aer." Met. i. 75.)

little—In, in miniature : Heaven would in little show, iii. 39 ; his picture in little, vii. 141. (The expression in little is found occasionally in writers long after the time of Shakespeare : so in Pepys's Diary, &c., "Cooper, the great limner in little," vol. i. p. 309, ed. 1848 ; and in Shadwell's Sullen Lovers, "*I will paint with Lilly [Lely], and draw in little with Cooper for 5000*l." Works, vol. i. p. 27.)

little pot, and soon hot—A, iii. 149 : A proverbial expression.

live i' the sun—To, "Is to labour and 'sweat in the eye of Phoebus,' or viam agere sub dio" (TOLLET), "To make his pleasures consist in the enjoyment of the sunshine, and simple blessing of the elements" (CALDECOTT), iii. 29.

livelihood, liveliness, appearance of life, animation, iii. 208.

lively, living : thy lively body, vi. 315.

liver, anciently supposed to be the inspirer of amorous passion and the seat of love : the ardour of my liver, i. 219 ; With liver burning hot, i. 362 ; If ever love had interest in his liver, ii. 124 ; wash your liver as clean, &c. iii. 46 ; when liver, brain, and heart, &c. iii. 328 ; motion of the liver, iii. 354 ; liver and all, iii. 357 ; were my wife's liver infected, &c. iii. 429 ; I had rather heat my liver with drinking (than have it heated with love), vii. 500 ; the coal which in his liver glows, viii. 288 ; Hot livers, iv. 240 ; heat of our livers, iv. 324.

liver-vein—The, ii. 199 : see the preceding article.

livery—Sue His, iv. 128, 271 ; sue my livery, iv. 138 : "On the death of every person who held by knight's service, the escheator of the court in which he died summoned a jury, who inquired what estate he died seized of, and of what age his next heir was. If he was under age, he became a ward of the king's ; but if he was found to be of full age, he then had a right to sue out a writ of ouster le main, that is, his livery, that the king's hand might be taken off, and the land delivered to him" (MALONE).

living, fortune, possessions; life, living, all is Death's, vi. 458 (a passage which has been misunderstood); If I gave them all my living, vii. 266; in virtues, beauties, livings, friends, ii. 384.

lizards' stings; v. 161; lizards' dreadful stings, v. 261; Lizard's leg, and howlet's wing, vii. 46: It was commonly believed in Shakespeare's days that the poor harmless lizard had a sting and was a venomous reptile.

loach—Your chamber-lie breeds fleas like a, iv. 224: "This has puzzled the commentators; but it seems as reasonable to suppose the loach infested with fleas as the tench, which may be meant in a preceding speech. Both sayings were probably founded upon such fanciful notions as make up a great part of natural history among the common people; but Holland's Pliny warrants the notion that some fishes breed fleas and lice, [Book ix.] ch. xlvii. [This passage of Pliny was first referred to by Reed, Shakespeare, ed. 1785.] Had the Carrier meant to say 'as big as a loach,' he would have said 'breeds fleas like loaches.' Warburton and Capell are far from the mark. Mr. Malone's suggestion, that it may mean 'breeds fleas as fast as a loach breeds,' that is, breeds loaches, is not improbable, as it was reckoned a peculiarly prolific fish." Nares's Gloss.: "The efforts of critics who gravely labour to establish the pertinence and integrity of such comparisons as these, are as profitable, to adopt a characteristic simile of Gifford's, as the milking he-goats in a sieve. When the obtuse Carrier tells us that his horse-provider is as dank as a dog—that chamber-lie breeds fleas like a loach, and that he himself is stung like a tench and as well bitten as a king, he means no more, than that the peas and beans are very damp, that chamber-lie breeds many fleas, and that he is severely stung," &c. (STAUNTON).

lob of spirits—Thou, Thou lubber of spirits, ii. 275: Mr. Grant White is probably right in saying that here lob "is descriptive of the contrast between Puck's squat figure and the airy shapes of the other fays." As Puck could fly "swifter than arrow from the Tartar's bow," and "could put a girdle round about the earth in forty minutes," the Fairy can hardly mean, as Mr. Collier supposes, "to reproach Puck with heaviness."

lob down their heads, hang down, droop, their heads, iv. 479.

lock, a love-lock, a long lock of hair, often tied and plaited with riband, worn on the left side, and hanging down by the shoulder: 'a wears a lock, ii. 113; they say he wears a key in his ear, and a lock hanging by it, ii. 137 (Dogberry, as Malone remarks, supposing that the lock must have a key to it).

lockram, a sort of cheap linen, made of different degrees of fineness ("Locram, Linteamen crassius." Coles's Lat. and Engl. Dict.), vi. 164.

locusts—Luscious as, vii. 393: It seems doubtful whether locusts is to be understood here to mean insects or the fruit of a certain tree,—both being eaten: ^ It appears from the books I have referred to, that the locusts above named are the fruit of the Carob tree (Siliqua dulcis)," &c. Beisly's Shakspeare's Garden, &c. p. 163.

lode-stars, ii. 270: "The lode-star is the leading or guiding star, that is, the pole-star" (JOHNSON).

lodge, to beat down, to lay flat: lodge the summer corn, iv. 152; the summer's corn by tempest lodg'd, v. 157; Though bladed corn be lodg'd, vii. 47.

loff, laugh, ii. 276.

loggats, vii. 194: The commentators are not quite agreed about loggats (which word, of course, is the diminutive of logs); but the following description of it by Steevens is most probably correct; "This is a game played in several parts of England even at this time. A stake is fixed into the ground; those who play, throw loggats at it, and he that is nearest the stake wins. . . It is one of the unlawful games enumerated in the statute of 33 Henry VIII."

London-bridge on fire—Set, v. 177: "At that time London-bridge was made of wood. 'After that,' says Hall, 'he entered London and cut the ropes of the draw-bridge.' The houses on London-bridge were in this rebellion burnt, and many of the inhabitants perished" (MALONE).

long, to belong: No ceremony that to great ones longs, i. 466; To his surname Coriolanus longs more pride, vi. 229; It is an honour longing to our house, iii. 260; The many to them longing, v. 492.

long live the king! vii. 103: "This sentence appears to have been the watch-word" (MALONE): "Not exactly so. The common challenge in France used to be Qui vive? and the answer Vive le Roi; just like the common challenge in the Park, Who goes there? A friend" (PYE).

longing journey—My, i. 291: "Dr. Grey observes, that longing is a participle active with a passive signification; for longed, wished or desired" (STEEVENS): "I believe that by her longing journey Julia means a journey which she shall pass in longing" (MASON).

longly, longingly, iii. 118.

long-staff, sixpenny strikers—No: see strikers—No, &c.

loof'd, brought close to the wind (a sea-term), vii. 552.

look, to look for, to look out: look some linen, i. 397; to look you, iii. 28; look my twigs, iii. 254; To look our dead, iv. 489; and see note 144, iv. 529.

look upon, to look on, to be a looker-on: Strike all that look upon with marvel, iii. 504; Nay, all of you that stand and look upon, iv. 188; And look upon, as if the tragedy, &c. v. 263; I will not look upon, vi. 96.

loon or loun, a term of reproach,—a stupid rascal, a sorry fellow, &c., except in the third of the following passages, where it means simply "a clown:" thou cream-fac'd loon! vii. 64; he call'd the tailor loun, vii. 406; both lord and loun, viii. 56.

loop'd, full of small apertures, like the loops in old castles and towers, vii. 299.

loose—At his very, ii. 231: A metaphor derived from archery,—loose being the technical term for the discharging of an arrow ("th' Archers terme, who is not said to finish the feate of his shot before he giue the loose, and deliuer his arrow from his bow." Puttenham's Arte of English Poesie, 1589, p. 145:

"Twice (as you see) this sad distressed man,
The onely marke whereat foule Murther shot,
Just in the loose of enuious eager death,
By accidents strange and miraculous, Escap't the arrow aymed at his hart."

A Warning for Faire Women, 1590, sig. x 3:

"Try but one hour first, and as you like The loose of that, draw home and prove the other."

Jonson's New Inn, act ii. sc. 2).

loose, too free, too unrestrained: Be sure you be not loose, v. 508.

loos'd his love-shaft smartly from his bow, discharged his love-shaft, &c. ii. 278: see first loose (and compare, in the excellent old ballad of Adam Bel, Clym of the Cloughe, and Wylliam of Cloudele,

"They loused their arrowes both at once," &c:

lordings, sirs, masters (an ancient form of address): Lordings, farewell, v. 113.

"Lord's sake—For the," The supplication of imprisoned debtors to the passers-by, i. 499.

Lord's tokens—The, ii. 223 : A quibble: tokens or God's tokens was the term for those spots on the body, which denoted the infection of the plague : compare death-tokens and token'd pestilence—The.

lorel, a worthless fellow, a scoundrel, iii. 446.

loss, exposure, desertion : Poor thing, condemn'd to loss, iii. 448.

lots to blanks My name hath touch'd your ears—It is, vi. 222 : "Menenius, I imagine, only means to say, that it is more than an equal chance that his name has touched their ears. Lots were the term in our author's time for the total number of tickets in a lottery, which took its name from thence. So in the Continuation of Stowe's Chronicle, 1615, p. 1002 ; 'Out of which lottery, for want of filling, by the number of lots, there were then taken out and thrown away threescore thousand blanks, without abating of any one prize.' The lots were, of course, more numerous than the blanks. If lot signified prize, as Dr. Johnson supposed, there being in every lottery many more blanks than prizes, Menenius must be supposed to say, that the chance of his name having reached their ears was very small ; which certainly is not his meaning" (MALONE) : "Lots to blanks is a phrase equivalent to another in King Richard III., 'All the world to nothing'" (STEEVENS) : "Lots are the whole number of tickets in a lottery ; blanks a proportion of the whole number" (KNIGHT).

lottery, an allottery, an allotment : Octavia is A blessed lottery to him, vii. 522.

Louis the Tenth—King, iv. 427 : Here Tenth should be Ninth : Shakespeare caught the error from Holinshed.

louted by a traitor villain—I am, I am mocked, contemned by, &c. v. 58 ; where louted has usually been wrongly explained (Compare

"he is louted and laughed to scorn For the veriest dolte that ever was borne," &c.

love Will creep in service where it cannot go, i. 306 : "'Kindness will creep where it cannot gang' is to be found in Kelly's Collection of Scottish Proverbs, p. 226" (REED).

Love, the Queen of love, Venus : Let Love, being light, be drownèd if she sink, ii. 26 ; Forerun fair Love, strewing her way with flowers, ii. 207 ; the love of Love, vii. 498 ; Love's master, viii. 258 ; She's Love, viii. 259 ; Love lack'd a dwelling, viii. 441 : see note 56, ii. 62.

love-day, a day of love, of reconciliation, a day for settling differences, vi. 297.

love-in-idleness, one of the several names of the viola tricolor, more commonly called pansy, or heart's-ease, ii. 279.

lovely berries—Two, ii. 297; a lovely kiss, iii. 146: In these passages lovely seems to be equivalent to loving: see note 60, ii. 331.

lover, a mistress: Your brother and his lover, i. 455; athwart the heart of his lover, iii. 50.

lover, a male friend: the bosom lover of my lord, ii. 390; Whether Bassanio had not once a lover, ii. 402; I as your lover speak, vi. 58; Thy general is my lover, vi. 222; Thy lover, Artemidorus, vi. 644; as I slew my best lover, vi. 656; thy deceased lover, viii. 365; through my lover's life, viii. 380; the drops of thy lovers (persons who love thee), iv. 373; countrymen, and lovers! vi. 655; Knights, kinsmen, lovers, viii. 192; call your lovers, viii. 210.

Love's golden arrow at him should have fled, And not Death's ebony dart, viii. 270: "Our poet had probably in his thoughts the well-known fiction of Love and Death sojourning together in an inn, and, on going away in the morning, changing their arrows by mistake. See Whitney's Emblems, p. 132" (MALONE): "Massinger, in his Virgin Martyr [act iv. sc. 3], alludes to the same fable;

'Strange affection!

Cupid once more hath chang'd his shafts with Death,
And kills, instead of giving life.'

Mr. Gifford has illustrated this passage by quoting one of the Elegies of Joannes Secundus. The fiction is probably of Italian origin. Sanford, in his Garden of Pleasure, 1576, has ascribed it to Alciato, and has given that poet's verses, to which he has added a metrical translation of his own. Shirley has formed a masque upon this story, Cupid and Death, 1650 [see Shirley's Works, vol. vi. ed. Gifford and Dyce] (BOSWELL).

loves—Of all, For all loves, for love's sake, by all means, i. 368; ii. 286; vii. 414.

Love's Tyburn—The shape of, ii. 198: "An allusion to the gallows of the time, which was usually triangular" (DOUCE).

love-springs, love-shoots, ii. 25: see first spring.

low-crooked, vi. 647: see note 59, vi. 697.

lower world—This, i. 216: see note 142, i. 541.

lown: see loon.

loyal, faithful in love: loyal cantons of condemn'd love, iii. 341; your true And loyal wife, vii. 445; loyal to his vow, vii. 676; the loyal Leonatus, vii. 681; The loyal'st husband, vii. 638.

loyalty, fidelity in love : true loyalty to her, i. 306 ; when I end loyalty ! ii. 283 ; Upon her nuptial vow, her loyalty, vi. 305 ; would force the feeler's soul To th' oath of loyalty, vii. 653.

Lubber's-head, the Hostess's blunder for, or a vulgar corruption of, Libbard's (i. e. Leopard's) head, iv. 330.

luces in their coat—They may give the dozen white, i. 345 ; The luce is the fresh fish ; the salt fish is an old coat, ibid. : Luce is a pike-fish ; and there can be no doubt that we have here an allusion to the armorial bearings of Shakespeare's old enemy Sir Thomas Lucy : "In Ferne's Blazon of Gentry, 1586, quarto, the arms of the Lucy family are represented as an instance that 'signs of the coat should something agree with the name. It is the coat of Geffray Lord Lucy. He did bear gules, three lucies hariant, argent'" (STEEVENS) : "A quartering of the Lucy arms, exhibiting the 'dozen white luces,' is given in Dugdale's Warwickshire, 1656, p. 348, annexed to a representation of an early monument to the memory of Thomas, son of Sir William Lucy," &c. (HALLIWELL) : But what is the meaning of the second of the above speeches ? Farmer attempts to explain it thus ; "Slender has observed, that the family might give a dozen white luces in their coat ; to which the Justice adds, 'It is an old one.' This produces the Parson's blunder, and Shallow's correction. 'The luce is not the louse but the pike, the fresh fish of that name. Indeed our coat is old, as I said, and the fish cannot be fresh ; and therefore we bear the white, i. e. the pickled or salt fish.'" "

Lud's-town, vii. 672, 697, 735 : "Trinovantum, called Caer Lud, and by corruption of the word Caer London, and in process of time London, was rebuilt by Lud, Cassibelan's elder brother" (GREY).

lugged bear, a bear pulled, seized, by the ears, iv. 212.

lullaby to your bounty, iii. 386 : That lullaby is unusual as a verb has been remarked by Mr. Halliwell, who cites an example of it : I subjoin another ;

"Sweet sound that all mens senses lullabieth."

Copley's Fig for Fortune, 1596, p. 59.

lunes, fits of lunacy, mad freaks (Fr.), i. 396 ; fin. 441 ; vi. 39.

Lupercal—The feast of, vi. 617 ; on the Lupercal, vi. 657 ; "The Roman festival of the Lupercalia (-ium or -iorum), whatever may be the etymology of the name, was in honour of the god Pan. It was celebrated annually on the Ides (or 13th) of February, in a place called the Lupercal, at the foot of Mount Aventine. A third company of Luperci, or priests of Pan, with Antony for its chief, was instituted in honour of Julius Cæsar" (CRAIK).

lurch—To shuffle, to hedge, and to, i. 366 : Here lurch has been interpreted "to shift, to play tricks," "to act covertly, to resort to shifts ;" but qy. is it not equivalent to lurk (see Richardson's Dict.

in that word), and means "to lie in ambush, to lie close, to lie in concealment"?

lurch'd all swords of the garland—He, vi. 169: Here Malone, after observing that "To lurch is properly to purloin ["Fortraire. To lurch, purloynne," Cotgrave's Fr. and Engl. Dict.: "To lurch, Subduco, surripio." Coles's Lat. and Engl. Dict.]," concludes thus; "To lurch in Shakespeare's time signified to win a maiden set at cards, &c. See Florio's Italian Dict., 1598: 'Gioco marro. A maiden set, or lurch, at any game.' See also Coles's Lat. Dict. 1679; 'A lurch, Duplex palma, facilis victoria.' 'To lurch all swords of the garland,' therefore, was to gain from all other warriors the wreath of victory, with ease, and incontestable superiority."

lush, juicy, succulent, ²—luxuriant, i. 194; ii. 281.

lust, pleasure, inclination, liking: I'll answer to my lust, vi. 71 (see note 131, vi. 121); Gazing upon the Greeks with little lust, viii. 326.

lustic, as the Dutchman says, iii. 231: Lustigh is the Dutch for "lusty, healthy, cheerful" ("An old play, that has a great deal of merit, call'd The Weakest goeth to the Wall (printed in 1600; but how much earlier written, or by whom written, we are no where inform'd) has in it a Dutchman call'd Jacob Van Smelt, who speaks a jargon of Dutch and our language, and upon several occasions uses this very word, which in English is—lusty" (CAPELL): The word lustic occurs frequently in our old plays as well as in other early compositions: I cannot forbear remarking that in a recent edition of Webster's works, The Weakest goeth to the Wall (of which assuredly he never wrote a syllable) is most absurdly and ignorantly included).

lustihood, vigour, energy, ii. 131; vi. 32.

luxurious, lascivious (its only sense in Shakespeare), ii. 119; iv. 483; vi. 93, 340; vii. 55.

luxuriously, lasciviously, vii. 560.

luxury, lasciviousness (its only sense in Shakespeare), i. 413, 520; iv. 458; v. 408; vi. 85; vii. 124, 325; viii. 448.

lym, a lime-hound, a sporting dog, led by the thong called a lyme (according to Minshew, as cited by Malone, "a blood-hound:" but gy.?), vii. 307.

mace, a sceptre: The sword, the mace, the crown imperial, iv. 476.

mace, a club of metal: Lay'st thou thy leaden mace upon my boy, vi. 674 (where Steevens explains mace to mean "sceptre,"—wrongly, as is shown by the epithet "murderous" in the preceding line).

maculate, stained, impure, ii. 173; viii. 196.

maculation, a stain, impurity, vi. 69.

mad as a buck, a proverbial expression, ii. 24.

made, having one's fortune made, fortunate : see first make.

made, fastened, barred : see second make.

made, did : see third make.

made, made up, raised as profit : see fourth make.

made, formed : my made intent, vii. 330 ("So we say in common language to make a design and to make a resolution," JOHNSON).

made means to come by what he hath—One that, v. 450 : "To make means was, in Shakespeare's time, often used in an unfavourable sense, and signified 'to come at anything by indirect practices' " (STEEVENS).

made-up villain—A, A complete, a perfect villain, vi. 568.

magnifico, a title given to the grandees of Venice, vii. 381; magnificos, ii. 387.

magot-pies, magpies, vii. 42.

Mahomet inspired with a dove?—Was, v. 13 : "Mahomet had a dove 'which he used to feed with wheat out of his ear; which dove, when it was hungry, lighted on Mahomet's shoulder, and thrust its bill in to find its breakfast; Mahomet persuading the rude and simple Arabians that it was the Holy Ghost that gave him advice.' See Sir Walter Raleigh's History of the World, Book i. Part 1, ch. vi. Life of Mahomet by Dr. Prideaux" (GREY).

Mahu, vii. 302, 314 : In the first passage of our text, according to what seems to be a quotation, Mahu is another name for "the prince of darkness;" in the second he is described as the fiend "of stealing;" and, according to Harsnet's Declaration of egregious Popish Impostures, 1603, a work from which our poet appears to have derived the names of several fiends in King Lear, "Maho [sic] was generall dictator of hell; & yet, for good manners sake, he was contented of his good nature to make shew, that himselfe was vnder the check of Modu, the graund deuill in Ma[ister] Maynie." p. 50; again, "Maho the chiefe deuill . . . had two thousand deuils at his commaundement." p. 201.

mail'd up in shame, wrapped up in shame (as a hawk is in a cloth), v. 140 ("Mail a hawk is to wrap her up in a handkerchief or other cloth, that she may not be able to stir her wings or to struggle." R. Holme's Academy of Armory and Blazon (Terms of Art used in Falconry, &c.), B. ii. c. xi. p. 239 : A hawk was sometimes mailed by pinioning her with a girth or band; see Beaumont and Fletcher's Philaster, act v. sc. 4 : Drayton makes the speaker of our text say of herself;

"How could it be, those that were wont to stand
To see my pompe, so goddesse-like to land, Should after see me, may'ld vp in a sheet, Doe shamefull penance three times in the street?"

main—The, the mainland: the main of Poland, vii. 178; swell the curled waters 'bove the main, vii. 293.

main-course—Bring her to try with, i. 176: "This phrase occurs in Smith's Sea-Grammar, 1627, 4to, under the article 'How to handle a Ship in a Storme:' 'Let us lie as [at] Trie with our maine course; that is, to hale the tacke aboard, the sheet close aft, the boling set up, and the helme tied close aboard.' p. 40" (STEEVENS): and see note 3, i. 237.

mained, lamed, v. 173: see note 143, v. 221.

major: if you will deny the sheriff, so—I deny your, iv. 244: "Falstaff clearly intends a quibble between the principal officer of a corporation, now called a mayor, to whom the sheriff is generally next in rank, and one of the parts of a logical proposition" (RITSON).

make, to make the fortune of: there would this monster make a man, i. 203; That either makes me or fordoes me quite, vii. 458; we had all been made men, ii. 311; thinks himself made in the unchaste composition, iii. 262; thou art made, iii. 358; You're a made old man, iii. 460; we're made again, viii. 165; we are made, boys, ibid.; we're all made, viii. 168.

make, to fasten, to bar: make the doors upon a woman's wit, iii. 58; the doors are made against you, ii. 24.

make, to do: what make you here? i. 396; iii. 6, 23; what dost thou make here? iv. 175; what make we Abroad? vi. 542; what make you from Wittenberg? vii. 112 (twice); what make you at Elsinore? vii. 138; What makes treason here? ii. 202; What makes he here? iii. 41; what makes he upon the seas? v. 437; what mak'st thou in my sight? v. 367; what they made there, I know not, i. 365; what made your master in this place? vi. 473.

make, to make up, to raise as profit: Will the faithful offer take Of me, and all that I can make, iii. 62; of which he made five marks, ready money, i. 499.

make a shaft or a bolt on't—Fll, i. 387: Ray gives "To make a bolt or a shaft of a thing." Proverbs, p. 179, ed. 1768: "Equivalent to—I will either make a good or a bad thing of it, I will take the risk. The shaft was the regular war-arrow, sharp-pointed; while the bolt was a blunt-headed arrow, or, sometimes, one having, as Holme describes it, 'a round or half-round bobb at the end of it, with a sharp-pointed arrow-head proceeding therefrom'" (HALLIWELL).

make all split, ii. 272: A phrase which occurs frequently in our early dramas, expressing great violence of action (It is properly a sailor's phrase: "He set downe this period with such a sigh, that, as the marriners say, a man would haue thought al would haue split againe." Greene's Neuer too late, Part First, sig. G 3, ed. 1611).

make conditions, "to arrange the terms on which offices should be conferred" (CRAIK), vi. 667.

make dainty, "to hold out, or refuse, affecting to be delicate or dainty" (Nares's Gloss.): she that makes dainty, vi. 404.

make forth, to go forth? to advance? vi. 677 (where the words are rather obscurely used).

make nice, to be scrupulous: Makes nice of no vile hold, iv. 44.

make strange, to affect coyness, coldness, indifference: She makes it strange, i. 270.

makeless, mateless, viii. 353.

male, a male parent: the hapless male to one sweet bird, v. 316 ("The word male is here used in a very uncommon sense, not for the male of the female, but for the male parent: the sweet bird is evidently his son Prince Edward," MASON).

Mall's picture—Like Mistress, iii. 333: "The real name of the woman whom I suppose to have been meant by Sir Toby, was Mary Frith. The appellation by which she was generally known was Mall Cutpurse. She was at once an hermaphrodite, a prostitute, a bawd, a bully, a thief, a receiver of stolen goods, &c. On the books of the Stationers' Company, August 1610, is entered—'A Booke called the Madde Francks of Merry Mall of the Bankside, with her Walks in Man's Apparel, and to what Purpose. Written by John Day.' Middleton and Decker wrote a comedy, of which she is the heroine. In this they have given a very flattering representation of her, as they observe in their preface, that 'it is the excellency of a writer, to leave things better than he finds them.' The title of this piece is The Roaring Girdle. Or Moll Cut-Purse. As it hath lately bene acted on the Fortune-stage by the Prince his Players, 1611. The frontispiece to it contains a full length of her in man's clothes, smoking tobacco. Nathaniel Field, in his Amends for Ladies, another comedy, 1618, gives the following character of her ;"

'Hence, lewd impudent!

I know not what to term thee, man or woman;
For nature, shaming to acknowledge thee
For either, hath produc'd thee to the world Without a sex: some say thou art a woman;
Others, a man; and many, thou art both Woman and man; but I think rather, neither;
Or man and horse, as th' old Centaurs were feign'd'

[a passage very inaccurately cited in Steevens's note apud the Var.

Shakespeare]. A Life of this woman was likewise published, 12mo, in 1662, with her portrait before it in a male habit; an ape, a lion, and an eagle by her [The Life and Death of Mrs. Mary Frith. Commonly called Mal Cutpurse. Exactly collected and now published for the delight and recreation of all merry disposed persons. London, 1662, 12mo]" (STEEVENS): "Mary Frith was born in 1584, and died in 1659. [According to the author of her Life, she was born in 1589. A Ms. in the Brit. Museum, quoted in a note on Dodsley's Old Plays, vol. xii. p. 398, ed. 1780, states that she died at her house in Fleet Street, July 26, 1659, and was buried in the church of Saint Bridget's; which date, however, seems inconsistent with the statement of Mr. Cunningham that she was buried August 10, 1659. Granger says that her death took place in her 75th year.] In a Ms. letter in the British Museum, from John Chamberlain to Mr. [Sir Dudley] Carleton, dated Feb. 11 [12], 1611-12, the following account is given of this woman's doing penance: 'This last Sunday Moll Cutpurse, a notorious baggage, that used to go in man's apparel, and challenged the field of diverse gallants, was brought to the same place [St. Paul's Cross], where she wept bitterly, and seemed very penitent; but it is since doubted she was maudlin drunk, being discovered to have tippel'd of [off] three quarts of sack before she came to her penance. She had the daintiest preacher or ghostly father that ever I saw in the pulpit, one Radcliffe of Brazen-Nose College ["College" not in orig.] in Oxford, a likelier man to have led the revels in some inn-of-court than to be where he was. But the best is, he did extreme badly, and so wearied the audience, that the best part went away, and the rest tarried rather to hear Moll Cutpurse than him.'" MALONE; who correctly observes that in our author's time curtains were frequently hung before pictures of any value: See much more about Moll Cutpurse in my edition of Middleton's Works, vol. ii. p. 427 sqq., where The Roaring Girl is reprinted, with an excellent fac-simile (by Mr. Fairholt) of the woodcut portrait of the heroine: After all, can it be that "Mistress Mall's picture" means merely a lady's picture? So we still say "Master Tom" or "Master Jack" to designate no particular individual, but of young gentlemen generally. *

malkin, the diminutive of Mal (Mary), a contemptuous term for a coarse wench: the kitchen malkin, vi. 164; held a malkin, Not worth the time of day ("not worth a good day or good morrow, undeserving the most common and usual salutation," STEEVENS), viii. 53.

malmsey-nose knave, red-nosed knave (as if in consequence of drinking malmsey wine), iv. 330.

malt-horse, a dull heavy horse, like a brewer's horse,—a term of reproach, ii. 22; iii. 162 (used adjectively).

malt-worms, tipplers of ale, iv. 225, 350.

mammering, hesitating, vii. 418.

mammet—A whining, vi. 447; To play with mamnets, iv. 231: That in the first of these passages mammet means "puppet" (used as a term of reproach) is certain; but in the second passage mamnets perhaps means (as Gifford first suggested) "breasts" (from mamma).

mammocked, mangled, tore in pieces, vi. 146.

man: This word, formerly used with great latitude, was applied, in the sense of being, to the devil, and even to the deity: No man means evil but the devil, i. 409; God's a good man, ii. 117 ("Again, in Jeronimo or the First Part of the Spanish Tragedy [by Thomas Kyd], 1605,

'You're the last man I thought on, save the devil.'

. . . . So, in the old Morality or Interlude of Lusty Juventus,

'He wyl say, that God is a good man,

He can make him no better, and say the best he can.'

Again, in A Mery Geste of Robin Hood, bl. l. no date,

'For God is hold a righteous man,

And so is his dame,' &c.

Again, in Burton's Anatomic of Melancholy, edit. 1632, p. 670, 'God is a good man, and will doe no harme,' &c." (STEEVENS): To the passages just cited I may add the following; "—in the dole tyme there came one which sayde y^t god was a good man Anone came another & said y^e dewyll was a good man." A Hundred Mery Talys, 1526, p. 140, ed. 1866:

"Pray'd you, quoth I, when al the time you span?

What matters that? quoth she; God's a good man,

And knowes what I speak in the Latin tongue,

Either at Matins or at Even-song."

A Pedlar and a Romish Priest, &c. by Taylor, 1641, p. 21).

manage, management, administration, conduct: The manage of my state, i. 179; manage of my house, ii. 390; the manage of two kingdoms, iv. 6; Expedient manage must be made, iv. 122; manage of this fatal brawl, vi. 431.

manage, a course, a running in the lists: Hath this brave manage, this career, been run, ii. 224.

manage, the training of a horse how to obey the hand and voice: they are taught their manage, iii. 5.

manage, the management or government of a horse: Wanting (not possessing, not skilled in) the manage of unruly jades, iv. 152; Speak terms of manage to thy bounding steed, iv. 230; Till they obey the manage, v. 563.

mandragora (μανδραγόρας, Lat. mandragoras, bot. name Atropa mandragora), or mandrake (see the next article), often mentioned as a powerful soporific, viii. 426, 510.

mandrake, iv. 320, 362; v. 161; mandrakes, vi. 455: "Mandrake. The English name of the above-mentioned plant, mandragoras, concerning which some very superstitious notions prevailed. An inferior degree of animal life was attributed to it; and it was commonly supposed that, when torn from the ground, it uttered groans of so pernicious a nature, that the person who committed the violence went mad or died. To escape that danger, it was recommended to tie one end of a string to the plant and the other to a dog, upon whom the fatal groan would then discharge its whole malignity. See Bulleine's Bulwarke of Defence against Sicknesse, p. 41. These strange notions arose, probably, from the little less fanciful comparison of the root to the human figure, strengthened, doubtless, in England by the accidental circumstance of man being the first syllable of the word. The ancients, however, made the same comparison of its form;

Quamvis semihominis, vesano gramine foeta, Mandragoræ pariat flores. Columella, de l. [Cult.] Hort. v. 19.

The white mandrake, which they called the male, was that whose root bore this resemblance. Lyte says of it, 'The roote is great and white, not muche unlyke a radishe roote, divided into two or three partes, and sometimes growing one upon another, almost lyke the thighs and legges of a man.' Transl. of Dodoeus, p. 437. Here it is supposed to cause death;

'Would curses kill, as doth the mandrake's groan,
I would invent,' &c. 2 Hen. VI. iii. 2.

Here only madness;

'And shrieks, like mandrakes' torn out of the earth,
That living mortals, hearing them, run mad.'

Romeo and Juliet, iv. 3.

A very diminutive or grotesque figure was often compared to a mandrake, that is, to the root, as above described;

'Thou whoreson mandrake, thou art fitter to be worn in my cap than to wait at my heels.'

2 Hen. IV. i. 2.

It was sometimes considered as an emblem of incontinence; probably because it resembled only the lower parts of a man;

'Yet lecherous as a monkey, and the whores called him mandrake.'

2 Hen. IV. iii. 2."

mangling by starts the full course of their glory, mangling "by touching only on select parts," &c. (JOHNSON), iv. 508.

mankind, masculine, violent, termagant : A mankind witch, iii. 445 ; Are you mankind ? vi. 202 : On the second of these passages Johnson remarks, "Sicinius asks Volumnia, if she be mankind. She takes mankind for a human creature, and accordingly cries out,

'Not but this fool.—
Was not a man my father?'"

(The epithet mankind was applied even to beasts in the sense of "ferocious," &c. ; "Manticore. A ravenous and mankind Indian beast." Cotgrave's *Fr. and Engl. Manningtree ox with the pudding in his belly—That roasted, iv. 243 : "Manningtree, in Essex, formerly enjoyed the privilege of fairs, by the tenure of exhibiting a certain number of stage-plays yearly. It appears also, from other intimations, that there were great festivities there, and much good eating, at Whitsun ales and other times ; we may therefore conclude safely, that roasting an ox whole, a very old and established piece of British magnificence, was not uncommon on those occasions. . . . We may further remark that Manningtree oxen were doubtless at all times famous for their size. Such are the cattle throughout the county, and the pastures of Manningtree are said by Mr. Steevens, an Essex man, to be remarkable." Nares's Gloss. (from the notes in the Var. Shakespeare).

man-queller, and a woman-queller—A, A man-slayer, and a woman-slayer, iv. 331.

map, with the augmentation of the Indies—The new, iii. 366 : "A clear allusion to a map engraved for Linschoten's Voyages, an English translation of which was published in 1598. This map is multilinear in the extreme, and is the first in which the Eastern Islands are included" (STEEVENS) : But ~~is it~~ certain that Maria is here speaking of a map belonging to a book ?

marches, "the borders of a country, or rather a space on each side the borders of two contiguous countries. Marche, French" (Nares's Gloss.) : They of those marches, iv. 428 ; in the marches here, v. 255.

march-pane, a sort of sweet biscuit, which constantly formed part of the desserts of Shakespeare's time, vi. 404 : "Marchpanes were composed of filberts, almonds, pistachoes, pine-kernels, and sugar of roses, with a small proportion of flour," says Steevens (following, I believe, Markham's Countray Farme) ; but the old cookery-books show that there were many varieties of this favourite composition.

mare—To ride the, iv. 331: "The Hostess had threatened to ride Falstaff like the Incubus or Night-mare; but his allusion (if it be not a wanton one) is to the Gallows, which is ludicrously called the Timber or Two-legged Mare" (STEEVENS).

mare—Rides the wild, Plays at see-saw, iv. 348.

Margarelon—properly Margaryton, Margareton, or Margariton—see, for instance, Lydgate's Warres of Troy, sig. s 1 verso, ed. 1555—a son of Priam, according to the legends engrafted on the Trojan story, vi. 94.

It is on record that King Henry VIII. and Queen Katharine partook of this diversion" (STEEVENS): "Stowe says, that, 'in the month of May, namely, on May-day in the morning, every man, except impediment, would walk into the sweet meadows and green woods; there to rejoice their spirits with the beauty and savour of sweet flowers, and with the noise [i.e. music] of birds, praising God in their kind.' See also Brand's Observations on Popular Antiquities, 8vo, 1777, p. 255" (REED).

mazard, the head, vii. 194, 408.

mazes in the wanton green—The quaint, ii. 277 : "Several mazes of the kind here alluded to are still preserved, having been kept up from time immemorial. On the top of Catherine-Hill, Winchester, the usual play-place of the school, observes Percy, was a very perplexed and winding path running in a very small space over a great deal of ground, called a Miz-Maze. The senior boys obliged the juniors to tread it, to prevent the figure from being lost, and I believe it is still retained" (HALLIWELL).

meacock wretch—A, A spiritless, dastardly wretch, iii. 137 ("Coquefredouille. A meacocke, milkesop, sneaksbie, worthlesse fellow." Cotgrave's Fr. and Engl. Dict. : "A Meacock, Pusillanimus, effeminatus ; uxorius, uxori nimium deditus et obnoxius." Coles's *Lat. and Engl. mean is drownd'd with your unruly base—The, i. 269 ; he can sing a mean most meanly, ii. 220 ; most of them means and bases, iii. 464 : "The mean in music was the intermediate part between the tenor and treble ; not the tenor itself, as explained by Stoevens." Chap-pell's Popular Music of the Olden Time, &c. vol. i. p. 223, sec. ed.

measles, lepers,—scurvy fellows ("Mesel, as Meseau. A messelled, scurvie, leaporous, lazarus person." Cotgrave's Fr. and Engl. Dict.), vi. 181.

measure, properly a stately dance with slow measured steps, though the word is sometimes used to express a dance in general : a Scotch jig, a measure, and a cinque-pace, ii. 87 ; tread a measure, ii. 216 ; trod a measure, iii. 73 ; though the devil lead the measure, iii. 224 ; a delightful measure, iv. 120 ; no strength in measure (=dancing), iv. 502 ; a measure To lead 'em once again, v. 504 ; We'll measure them a measure, vi. 401 ; The measure done, vi. 405 ; to the measures fall, iii. 73 ; delightful measures, v. 351 ; to tread the measures, viii. 277. ("The measures were dances solemn and slow. They were performed at court, and at public entertainments of the societies of law and equity, at their halls, on particular occasions. It was formerly not deemed inconsistent with propriety even for the gravest persons to join in them ; and accordingly at the revels which were celebrated at the inns of court, it has not been unusual for the first characters in the law to become performers in treading the measures. See Dugdale's Origines Juridiciales. Sir John Davies, in his poem called Orchestra, 1622, describes them in this manner ;

'But after these, as men more civil grew,
 He [i. e. Love] did more grave and solemn measures frame;
 With such fair order and proportion true,
 And correspondence every way the same,
 That no fault-finding eye did ever blame,
 For every eye was moved at the sight,
 With sober wond'ring and with sweet delight.

Not those young students of the heavenly book,
 Atlas the great, Prometheus the wise,
 Which on the stars did all their life-time look,
 Could ever find such measure in the skies,
 So full of change and rare varieties;
Yet all the feet whereon these measures go, Are only spondees, solemn, grave, and slow' [Stanzas 65, 66]" (REED).

measure in every thing—Tell him there is, ii. 87: A quibble on the word measure, which means both "moderation" and "a dance" (see the preceding article).

meddle with my thoughts, mingle, mix with my thoughts, i. 178.

Medea young Absyrtus did—As wild, v. 195: "When Medea fled with Jason from Colchos, she murdered her brother Absyrtus, and cut his body into several pieces, that her father might be prevented for some time from pursuing her. See Ovid, Trist. Lib. iii. El. 9," &c. (MALONE).

medicine, a physician: a medicine That's able to breathe life into a stone, iii. 224; The medicine of our house, iii. 483; the medicine of the sickly weal, vii. 63.

medicine hath With his tinct gilded thee—That great, vii. 511: "Alluding to the philosopher's stone, which, by its touch, converts base metal into gold. The alchemists call the matter, whatever it be, by which they perform transmutation, a medicine" (JOHNSON): Walker thinks that here medicine means "physician;" but compare gilded 'em—This grand liquor that hath.

medicine potable—Preserving life in, iv. 384: An allusion to the "opinion that a solution of gold has great medicinal virtues, and that the incorruptibility of gold might be communicated to the body impregnated with it" (JOHNSON).

meed, merit, desert: my meed hath got me fame, v. 304; no meed but he repays Sevenfold above itself, vi. 515; in his meed (in this his particular excellence) he's unfellowed, vii. 204; Each one already blazing by our meeds, v. 253.

merit, a reward, a guerdon: A dearer merit, iv. 117: Mason observes; "As Shakespeare uses merit in this place in the sense of reward, he frequently uses the word meed, which properly signifies reward, to express merit" (see meed): and I may add, that Johnson in his Dict., under "merit" in the sense of "reward deserved," cites from Prior,

"Those laurel groves, the merits of thy youth, Which thou from Mahomet didst greatly gain,
While, bold assertor of resistless truth,
Thy sword did godlike liberty maintain, &c.
[Ode, inscribed to Queen Anne]."

miching mallecho, vii. 156: "A secret and wicked contrivance, a concealed wickedness. To mich is a provincial word, and was probably [certainly] once general; signifying to lie hid, or play the truant. In Norfolk michers signify pilferers. The signification of miching in the present passage may be ascertained by a passage in Decker's Wonderful Yeare, 4to, 1603; 'Those that could shift for a time—went most bitterly miching and muffled, up and downe, with rue and wormwood stuff into their ears and nostrills.' See also Florio's Italian Dictionary, 1598, in v. Acciapinare; 'To miche, to shrug or sneak, in some corner.' Where our poet met with the word mallecho, which in Minshew's Spanish Dictionary, 1617, is defined malefactum, I am unable to ascertain. In the folio the word is spelt malicho. Mallico [in the quartos] is printed in a distinct character as a proper name" (MALONE; whose name has dropped out from the end of this note in Boswell's ed. of Shakespeare): "Malhecho . . . An evil action, an indecent and indecorous behaviour; malefaction." Connolly's Span. and Engl. Dict., Madrid, 4to. (Compare

"Tho. Be humble,

Thou man of mallecho, or thou diest."

Modo, vii. 302, 314: In the first passage of our text, according to what seems to be a quotation, Modo is another name for "the prince of darkness;" in the second he is described as the fiend "of murder;" and in Harsnet's Declaration of egregious Popish Impostures, 1603, a book which Shakespeare appears to have used for the names of several fiends in King Lear, we find "Modu, Ma[ister] Maynies denill, was a graund Commaunder, Muster-maister ouer the Capitaines of the seven deadly sinnes," p. 48; "Modu the Generall of Styx," p. 54, &c.

mome, a blockhead, ii. 22.

momentany, lasting for a moment, momentary, ii. 269.

Monarcho, ii. 190: The nick-name of an Italian (not, I believe, of an Englishman, as Nares states in his Gloss., misled by an error of Steevens to be noticed presently), who attracted a great deal of attention, and is very frequently mentioned by English writers of the time. This crack-brained personage, it appears, lived about the court, asserted that he was the sovereign of the world, and (like Thrasylaus—or Thrasyllus—see Athenæus, B. xii. sect. 81) fancied that all the ships which came into port belonged to him. That he was dead in 1580 is shown by the following lines in Churchyard's Chance, which was published during that year;

"The Phantasticall Monarckes Epitaphe.

Though Dant be dedde, and Marrot lies in graue,
And Petrarks sprite bee mounted past our vewe,
Yet some doe live (that poets humours haue)
To keepe old course with vains of verses newe;
Whose penne is prest to paint out people plaine,
That els a sleepe in silence should remaine:
Come, poore old man, that boare the Monarks name, Thyne epitaphe shall here set forth thy fame.

Thy climyng mynde aspiersp beyonde the starres,
Thy loffe stile no yearthly titell bore;

Thy witts would seem to see through peace and warres,
 Thy taunting tong was pleasant, sharpe, and sore;
 And though thy pride and pompe was somewhat vaine,
 The Monarcke had a deepe discoursyng braine;
 Alone with freend he could of wonders treat,
 In publicke place pronounce a sentence great:

No matche for fooles, if wisemen were in place;
 No mate at meale to sit with common sort;
 Both graue of looks and fatherlike of face,
 Of judgement quicke, of comely forme and port;
 Most bent to words on hye and solemne daies;
 Of diet fine, and daintie diuerse waies;
 And well dispoſde, if prince did pleasure take
 At any mirthe that he, poore man, could make.

On gallant robes his greatest glorie stood,
 Yet garments bare could never daunt his minde;
 He feard no state, nor caerd for worldly good,
 Held eche thyng light as fethers in the winde:
 And still he saied, the strong thrusts weake to wall,
 When sword bore swaie, the Monarke should have all;
 The man of might at length shall Monarke bee,
 And greatest strength shall make the feeble flee.

When straungers came in presence any wheare, Straunge was the talke the Monarke uttered than;
 He had a voice could thonder through the eare,
 And speake mutche like a merry Christmas man:
 But sure small mirthe his matter harped on.
 His forme of life who lists to look upon,
 Did shewe some witte, though follie fedde his will:
 The man is dedde, yet Monarks liueth still." p. 7.

I will now point out the mistake of Steevens, which I have above referred to. He says; "In Nash's Have with you to Saffron-Walden, &c., 1595[6], I meet with the same allusion [i.e. an allusion to Monarcho]: 'but now he was an insulting monarch, above Monarcho the Italian, who ware crownes in his shoes, and quite renounced his natural English accents and gestures, and wrested himself wholly to the Italian punctilios,' &c." But the complete passage of Nash's very powerful and most amusing attack on Gabriel Harvey runs thus: "— it pleased her Highnes [Queen Elizabeth] to say (as in my former Booke I haue cyted) that he [Gabriel Harvey] lookt something like an Italian. No other incitement he needed to rouse his plumes, pricke vp his eares, and run away with the bridle betwixt his teeth, and take it vpon him; (of his owne originall ingrafted disposition theretoo he wanting no aptnes) but now he was an insulting Monarch aboue Monarcha the Italian, that ware crownes on his shoes; and quite renounst his naturall English accents & gestures, and wrested himselfe wholly to the Italian punctilios, speaking our homely Iland tongue strangely," &c. Sig. m 2, ed. 1596. Surely, it is manifest that the latter part of the preceding quotation, "and quite renounst his naturall English," &c., refers to Gabriel Harvey, and not, as Steevens supposed, to Monarcho.

Those commentators are quite mistaken who fancy that there is an allusion to the person just described when, in All's well that ends well, iii. 209, Helen says, "And you, monarch!"—which is merely a sportive rejoinder to the salutation of Parolles, "Save you, fair queen!" See note 42 on The Merchant of Venice, ii. 421.

mongrel beef-witted lord!—Thou, vi. 27: "He calls Ajax mongrel on account of his father's being a Grecian and his mother a Trojan. See Hector's speech to Ajax in act iv. sc. 5, 'Thou art, great lord, my father's sister's son,' &c." (MALONE).

monk—The king, I fear, is poison'd by a, iv. 73: This circumstance Shakespeare found in the old play, The Troublesome Raigne of Iohn, &c. (see vol. iv. 3): "Not one of the historians who wrote within sixty years after the death of King John mentions this very improbable story. The tale is, that a monk, to revenge himself on the king for a saying at which he took offence, poisoned a cup of ale, and having brought it to his majesty, drank some of it himself, to induce the king to taste it, and soon afterwards expired. Thomas Wykes is the first who relates it in his Chronicle as a report. According to the best accounts, John died at Newark, of a fever" (MALONE): "The incident answered the Protestant purpose of Bishop Bale too well for him not to employ it in his Kynge Johan, where the monk approaches the king with the poison under the allegorical character of Dissimulation. See the Camden Society's edit. 1838, p. 80" (COLLIER).

Monmouth caps, iv. 489: Malone observes that Monmouth caps were formerly much worn, and particularly by soldiers; and he cites from Fuller (Worthies of Wales, p. 50), "The best caps were formerly made at Monmouth, where the Cappers' chapel doth still remain."

monopoly out, they would have part on't—If I had a, vii. 267: "A satire on the gross abuses of monopolies at that time; and the corruption and avarice of the courtiers, who commonly went shares with the patentee" (WARBURTON): "But the real meaning appears to be, that 'lords and great men,' 'and ladies too,' were all so determinately bent on playing the fool, that, although the jester might have a monopoly for folly out,—that is, in force and extant,—yet they would insist upon participating in the exercise of his privilege" (STAUNTON).

monster, to make monstrous, "to put out of the common order of things" (Johnson's Dict.): monster'd, vi. 169; monsters, vii. 255.

montant, the abbreviation of montanto, a fencing-term ("Montant . . . an upright blow or thrust." Cotgrave's Fr. and Engl. Dict.), i. 373.

Montanto—Signior, a name given in jest by Beatrice to Benedick, and implying that he was a great fencer, ii. 76: see preceding article.

month's mind to them—I see you have a, i. 270: Ray gives, "To have a month's mind to a thing," and adds, "In ancient wills we find often mention of a month's mind, and also of a year's mind, and a week's mind & they were lesser funeral solemnities appointed by the deceased at those times, for the remembrance of him." Proverbs, p. 202, ed. 1768: "It alludes to the mind or remembrance days of our Popish ancestors. Persons in their wills often directed that in a month, or any other specific time from the day of their decease, some solemn office for the repose of their souls, as a mass or dirge, should be performed in the parish church, with a suitable charity or benevolence on the occasion" (DOUCE): "But month's mind is much more commonly used [as in the present passage of Shakespeare], and is not yet quite disused, in the sense of 'an eager desire, or longing.' . . . Some other explanation of the phrase, in the latter sense, must therefore be required; and it seems to have been well supplied by the ingenious conjecture of a gentleman, who published a few detached remarks on Shakespeare, John Croft, Esq., of York. He explains it to allude to 'a woman's longing; which,' he says, 'usually takes place (or commences, at least) in the first month of pregnancy.' Rem. p. 2. Unfortunately he gives no authority for it, and I have endeavoured in vain to find it, in that mode of application. Yet it accords so perfectly with this second sense, that I have no doubt of its being the true explanation" [?]. Nares's Gloss.

month to bleed—No, iv. 109: "Richard alludes to the almanacs of the time, where particular seasons were pointed out as the most proper time for being bled" (MALONE).

mood, anger: Who, in my mood, I stab'd, i. 305.

moody, melancholy: music, moody food, vii. 524.

moon-calf, a false conception, or a fœtus imperfectly formed, in consequence, as was supposed, of the influence of the moon,—a monster, i. 205 (three times), 211 (twice): "The best account of this fabulous substance may be found in Drayton's poem with that title" (DOUCE).

moonshine—A sop o' the: see sop o' the, &c.

Moor-ditch—The melancholy of, iv. 212: On the word "Moor-ditch," in his reprint of Dekker's Gull's Hornbook, Nott writes as follows; "The ground that has of late years been called Moor-fields, together with the adjoining manor of Finsbury or Fensbury, extending as far as Hoxton, was in the fourteenth century one continued marsh, passable only by rude causeways here and there raised upon it. Moorfields, in the time of Edward II. let but for four marks per annum, a sum then equal in value to six pounds sterling. In 1414, a postern gate, called Moorgate, was opened in London Wall, by Sir Thomas Fauconer, mayor, affording freer access to the city for such as crossed the Moor; and water-courses from it were begun. In 1511, regular dikes, and bridges of communication over them, were made for more effectually draining this fenny tract, during the mayoralty of Robert Atchely; which draining was gradually proceeded upon for about a century, till, in Decker's day, it would appear that the waters were collected in one great ditch. In 1614, it was to a certain degree levelled, and laid out into walks. In 1732, or between that and 1740, its level was perfected, and the walks planted with elms. After this, the spot was for years neglected, and Moorfields became an assemblage of petty shops, particularly booksellers', and of ironmongers' stalls; till, in the year 1790, the handsome square of Finsbury completed arose upon its site." p. 48.

Moorfields to muster in?—Is this, v. 568: "The train-bands of the city were exercised in Moorfields" (JOHNSON).

mop, a grimace: with mop and move, i. 219 (The word mop is often found in conjunction with mow, q. v.: so in Copley's Fig for Fortune, 1596;

"And when he can no more, with mops and moves He floutes both them, and Death, and Destinie." p. 18).

mopping, grimacing, vii. 314.

moral, a latent meaning: you have some moral in this Benedictus, ii. 115; the meaning or moral of his signs and tokens, iii. 166; This moral ties me over to time ("the application of this fable ties me," &c. JOHNSON), iv. 506; the moral of my wit, vi. 70.

moralize: I pray thee, moralize (expound, interpret the latent meaning of) them, iii. 166; I moralize two meanings in one word ("signifies either 'extract the double and latent meaning of one word or sentence,' or 'couch two meanings under one word or sentence' . . . The word which Richard uses in a double sense is live, which in his former speech he had used literally, and in the present is used metaphorically," MALONE), v. 394; thou hear'st me moralize ("comment," MALONE), viii. 263; Nor could she moralize his wanton sight ("interpret, investigate the latent meaning of his wanton looks," MALONE), viii. 290.

more, greater: a more requital, iv. 13; To be more prince, iv. 46; a more rejoicing, viii. 296.

more and less, great and small : The more and less came in, iv. 271 ; more and less do flock, iv. 320 ; more and less have given him the revolt, vii. 66 ; are lov'd of more and less, viii. 397.

more sacks to the mill, a proverbial expression, ii. 199.

Morisco, a morris-dancer, v. 152.

Morning's love—The, ii. 302 : Most probably Cephalus is meant.

morris-pike, a Moorish pike ("which was very common in the 16th century. See Grose's History of the English Army, vol. i. p. 135," DOUCE), ii. 36.

mort o' the deer—The, The death of the deer,—the notes on the horn which were usually blown at the death of the deer, iii. 424.

mortal, deadly, murderous : This news is mortal to the queen, iii. 454 ; The mortal worm, v. 160 ; the mortal fortune of the field, v. 260 ; The mortal gate ("The gate that was made the scene of death," JOHNSON) of the city, vi. 170 ; you spirits That tend on mortal thoughts, vii. 15 ; mortal murders, vii. 41 (see note 65, vii. 86) ; the mortal sword, vii. 53 ; Their mortal natures, vii. 397 ; you mortal engines, vii. 426 ; Would be even mortal to me, vii. 679 ; The mortal bugs, vii. 713 ; a mortal butcher, viii. 259 ; thy mortal vigour, viii. 271.

mortal, "exceeding, very" (Craven Dialect) : as all is mortal in nature, so is all nature in love mortal in folly ("abounding in folly," JOHNSON, "extremely foolish," CALDECOTT), iii. 26.

mortal instruments—The : see Genius, &c.

mortal-staring war, v. 445 : see note 104, v. 473.

mortified, dead to the world, ascetic : Dumain is mortified, ii. 164 ; the mortified man, vii. 63.

Mortimer, brought-in in a chair by two keepers—Enter, v. 33 : "It is objected that Shakespeare [the unknown author of the present play] has varied from the truth of history, to introduce this scene between Mortimer and Richard Plantagenet ; as the former served under Henry V. in 1422, and died unconfined in Ireland, in 1424. In the third year of Henry the Sixth, 1425, and during the time that Peter Duke of Coimbra was entertained in London, 'Edmonde Mortimer (says Hall) the last erle of Marche' of 'that name (which long tyme had bene restrayned from hys liberty, and fynally waxed lame) diseased without yssue, whose inheritance descended to lord Richard Plantagenet,' &c. Holinshed has the same words ; and these authorities, though the fact be otherwise, are sufficient to prove that Shakespeare, or whoever was the author of the play, did not intentionally vary from the truth of history to introduce the present scene. The historian does not, indeed, expressly say that the Earl of March died in the Tower ; but one cannot reasonably suppose that he meant to relate an event which he knew had happened to a free man in Ireland, as happening to a prisoner during the time that a particular person was in London. But, wherever he meant to lay the scene of Mortimer's death, it is clear that the author of this play understood him as representing it to have happened in a London prison; an idea, if indeed his words will bear any other construction, a preceding passage may serve to corroborate: 'The erle of March (he has observed) was ever kepte in the courte under such a keeper that he could neither doo or attempte any thyng agaynste the kyng wythout his knowledge, and dyed without issue'" (RITSON): "The error concerning Edmund Mortimer, brother-in-law to Richard Earl of Cambridge, having been 'kept in captivity untill he died,' seems to have arisen from the Legend of Richard Plantagenet, Duke of Yorke, in The Mirrour for Magistrates, 1575, where the following lines are found;

'His cursed son ensued his cruel path,
And kept my guiltless cousin strait in durance,'" &c.

(MALONE): "It is presumed that the person intended is Edmund, last Earl of March, and Shakspeare [the unknown author of the present play] was led by Holinshed into the mistake of making him a prisoner. He had, on the contrary, been favoured by Henry the Fifth, and, though he was so far implicated in the treason of Cambridge, Scrope, and Grey, . . . as to have received a pardon from the king, he was summoned as one of the judges to whom the cases of Cambridge and Scrope (being peers) were referred; and there is no notice of his being again under suspicion, or out of favour, in the last reign or in the present. He died in the year 1424 or 1425, not in the Tower, but in Ireland [He "died of the plague in his castle at Trim in January 1424-5," MALONE]: There is another mistake in making him an old man; he died at the age of twenty-four, or thereabouts." Courtenay's Comment. on the Hist. Plays of Shakspeare, vol. i. p. 246; from which work other instances of the violation of history in this play might be cited.

Mortimer of Scotland—Lord, iv. 257: A mistake; Shakspeare meant Lord March of Scotland (George Dunbar, tenth Earl of Dunbar and March): "Our author had a recollection that there was in these wars a Scottish lord on the king's side, who bore the same title with the English family on the rebel side (one being the Earl of March in England, the other, Earl of March in Scotland), but his memory deceived him as to the particular name which was common to both. He took it to be Mortimer instead of March" (STEEVENS).

Mortimer. Wor. I cannot blame him: was he not proclaim'd By Richard that is dead the next of blood?—Trembling even at the name of, iv. 219; "Shakspeare owes to Holinshed his mistake [Note. Malone and others have fallen into the same error] in supposing that the Edmund Mortimer, who was prisoner and afterwards son-in-law to Glendower, was Edmund Mortimer, Earl of March, whom King Richard had proclaimed heir to the crown, and who was, according to hereditary right, now entitled to it. The Earl of March was at this time a child: it was his uncle, Sir Edmund Mortimer (second son of the first Earl of March) whose adventures Shakspeare relates and misapplies.

'Hotspur. . . . Did King Richard, then, Proclaim my brother, Edmund Mortimer, Heir to the crown?

North.

He did.'

mortise, a hole cut in one piece of wood fitted to receive the tenon or correspondent portion of another piece, vii. 395.

mortis'd, joined with a mortise, vii. 164.

mose in the chine—Like to, iii. 144 : "Mose. To mose in the chine, a disorder in horses, by some called mourning in the chine." Nares's Gloss. : "Les oreillons. The Mumpes, or mourning of the Chine." Cotgrave's Fr. and Engl. Dict.

most, greatest: resolute in most extremes, v. 51 ; With most gladness, vii. 520.

mot, a motto, a word, a sentence : viii. 311.

mother was her painting—Whose, "The creature, not of nature, but of painting" (JOHNSON; whose explanation is jeered at by Mr. Grant White), vii. 680 : see note 96, vii. 751.

mother swells up toward my heart! Hysterica passio—O, how this, vii. 285 : Percy remarks that the disease called the mother, or hysterica passio, in Shakespeare's time, was not thought peculiar to women only; and that probably our poet derived those terms from Harsnet's Declaration of egregious Popish Impostures, 1603; which, it would appear, furnished him with the names of certain supposed fiends mentioned in the present tragedy. *

motion, a puppet-show : O excellent motion! O exceeding puppet! Now will he interpret to her ("Speed means to say, What a fine puppet-show shall we have now! Here is the principal puppet, to whom my master will be the interpreter. The master of the puppet-show, or the person appointed by him to speak for his mock actors, was, in Shakespeare's time, frequently denominated the interpreter to the puppets" (MALONE), i. 275; a motion of the Prodigal Son, iii. 465 (Fielding, in his Jonathan Wild, says that the master of a puppet-show "wisely keeps out of sight; for should he once appear, the whole motion would be at an end." Book iii. ch. xi.).

motion, a puppet : a motion ungenerative, i. 486 (So in Swift's Ode to Sir William Temple,

"As in a theatre the ignorant fry,
Because the cords escape their eye, Wonder to see the motions fly").

motion—I see it in my, vii. 523 : see note 60, vii. 607.

motion—Unshak'd of, "Unshaken by suit or solicitation, of which the object is to move the person addressed" (MALONE; rightly, it would seem), vi. 648.

motion!—Well; speak on, viii. 67 : see note 236, viii. 109.

motions—Sincere, "honest indignation" (JOHNSON), "genuine impulse of the mind" (DOUCE), v. 489.

motive, a mover, an agent : my motive and helper to a husband, iii. 270; The slavish motive of recanting fear, iv. 110; every joint and motive ("part that contributes to motion," JOHNSON) of her body, vi. 73; motives of more fancy, iii. 282; the motives that you first went out (that you were banished), vi. 574.

motley, the particoloured dress worn by domestic fools or jesters : Motley's the only wear, iii. 31; a motley coat, iii. 31; v. 483; Invest me in my motley, iii. 31; I wear not motley in my brain, iii. 336; The one in motley, vii. 267.

motley, a domestic fool or jester (see the preceding article) : Will you be married, motley? iii. 48; made myself a motley to the view, viii. 404.

motley fool, a fool wearing motley, iii. 30 (twice).

motley-minded, foolish, iii. 73.

mought, might, v. 310.

mould—Men of, "Men of earth, poor mortal men" (JOHNSON), iv. 451 : The expression is common in our early poetry; and Mr. Grant White is altogether mistaken when he says that "a man of mould is a man of large frame, and so of strength, of prowess" (Compare True Thomas, and the Queen of Elfland,

"Man of molde, thu wilt me marre."

Mount—The, Mount Misenum, vii. 524.

mountant, mounting, rising on high (Fr. montant, an heraldic term) : Hold up, you sluts, Your aprons mountant, vi. 554.

mouse, formerly a common term of endearment : What's your dark meaning, mouse, of this light word? ii. 211; my mouse of virtue, iii. 336; call you his mouse, vii. 172.

mouse, to tear in pieces, to devour (as a cat does a mouse): Well moused, lion, ii. 319; mousing the flesh of men, iv. 22.

mouse, to hunt for mice: a mousing owl, vii. 30.

mouse-hunt in your time—You have been a, vi. 456: "Mouse-hunt."

A hunter of mice; but evidently said by Lady Capulet with allusion to a different object of pursuit; such as is called mouse [see first mouse] only in playful endearment. . . . The commentators say that in some counties a weasel is called a mouse-hunt. It may be so; but it is little to the purpose of that passage." Nares's Gloss.: "Mouse-hunt, the stoat; the smallest animal of the weasel tribe, and pursuing the smallest prey. This explains a passage in SH. Romeo and Juliet, in which Lady Capulet calls her husband a 'mouse-hunt,' and he exclaims, a 'jealous hood!' It is the same sense in which Cassio, in Othello, calls Bianca a 'fitchew,' that is, a polecat. All animals of that genus are said to have the same propensity, on which it is not necessary to be more particular." Forby's Vocab. of East Anglia: "Mouse-Hunt. A sort of weasel or pole-cat. It is found in corn-stacks and stack-yards, and is less angrily looked on than others of that tribe, as the farmers think its chief food and game are mice (or meece as we call them), and not poultry. It is a small species, brown on the back, the belly white," &c. Moor's Suffolk Words, &c. (Milton, too, uses the word metaphorically; "Although I know many of those that pretend to be great Rabbits in these studies, have scarce saluted them from the strings and the title-page; or, to give 'em more, have bin but the Ferrets and Mous-hunts of an Index," &c. Of Reformation in England, &c. moved, be moved—Be, "Have compassion on me, though your mistress has none on you" (MALONE), i. 277.

mow, a wry mouth, a distorted face, i. 219; mows, i. 217; vii. 141, 652.

mow, to make mouths, i. 202; mowing, vii. 314.

moy shall not serve; I will have forty moys, iv. 483; is that a ton of moys? iv. 484: "Dr. Johnson says that '[here] moy is a piece of money, whence moi-d'or or moi of gold.' But where had the doctor made this discovery? His etymology of moidor is certainly incorrect. Moidore is an English corruption of the Portuguese moeda d'ouro, i.e. money of gold; but there were no moidores in the time of Shakespeare. We are therefore still to seek for Pistol's moy. Now a moyos or moy was a measure of corn; in French muy or muid, Lat. modius, a bushel. It appears that 27 moys were equal to a last or two tons. To understand this more fully, the curious reader may consult Malynes's Lex Mercatoria, 1622, p. 45, and Roberts's Marchant's Map of Commerce, 1638, chap. 272" (DOUCE).

much, an ironical expression of contempt and denial: with two points on your shoulder? much! iv. 344; you mov'd me much. Apem. Much! vi. 518.

much, the same expression used adjectively: much Orlando! (no Orlando at all!), iii. 60 (Compare "Yes, much reaskewe, much helpe, much Dametas." Day's Ile of Gvls, sig. c 3, ed. 1606). muffler, a sort of wrapper, worn by women, which generally covered the mouth and chin, but sometimes almost the whole face, i. 397, 400; iv. 460.

muleters, muleteers, v. 44; vii. 549.

mulled, vi. 212: see note 195, vi. 267.

mum budget, i. 409 (twice), 416: Mumbudget was a cant term implying silence and secrecy: "To play at mumbudget. Demeurer court, ne sonner mot." Cotgrave's Fr. and Engl. Dict.

mummy, a preparation, for magical purposes, made from dead bodies: Witches' mummy, vii. 46; mummy which the skilful Conserv'd of maidens' hearts, vii. 432 (On the second of these passages Steevens has a note about "the balsamic liquor running from mummies," &c., which seems irrelevant to the text).

mural, a wall ("properly an adjective," HALLIWELL), ii. 317.

murdering-piece, vii. 182: "A murdering-piece of murderer was a small piece of artillery; in Fr. meurtriére. It took its name from the loopholes and embrasures in towers and fortifications, which were so called. The portholes in the forecastle of a ship were also thus denominated. 'Meurtriére, c'est un petit canonniere, comme celles des tours et murailles, ainsi appellé, parceque tirant par icelle a desceu, ceux ausquels on tire sont facilement meurtri.' Nicot. 'Visiere meurtriére, a port-hole for a murdering-piece in the forecastle of a ship.' Cotgrave. Case-shot, filled with small bullets, nails, old iron, &c. was often used in these murderers. This accounts for the raking fire attributed to them in the text" (SINGER): Cotgrave has also "Meurtrieres. Holes (in that part of a rampire that hangs over the gate) whereat the assailed let fall stones on the heads of their too neere approaching aduersarie:" Murdering-pieces, if we may trust Coles, were not always "small;" for he gives "A Murdering-piece, Tarmentum murale," and afterwards "Tormentum murale, a great gun." Lat. and Engl. Dict.

murk, darkness, gloom, iii. 227.

muscadel, or muscadine, iii. 147: "Vinum muscatum, quod moschi odorem referat, propter dulcedinem, for the sweetness and smell, it resembles muske," &c. Minshew's Guide into Tongues, ed. 1617.

muscle-shell, i. 404: "He calls poor Simple muscle-shell, because he stands with his mouth open" (JOHNSON).

mute, to wonder, to wonder at: I cannot too much muse such shapes, i. 215; And rather muse than ask, iii. 241; I muse your majesty doth.

seem so cold, iv. 37 ; I muse you make so slight a question, iv. 367 ; I muse we met not with the Dauphin's grace, v. 25 ; I muse my Lord of Gloster is not come, v. 142 ; you muse what chat we two have had, v. 278 ; I muse my mother Does not approve me further, vi. 190 ; Do not muse at me, vii. 41 ; Musing the morning is so much o'erworn, viii. 268. .

muset (written also muse and musit), viii. 158 ; musets, viii. 262 : "A muse (of a hare), Arctus leporis per sepes transitus, leporis lacuna." Coles's Lat. and Engl. Dict.: "The opening in a fence or thicket, through which a hare, or other beast of sport, is accustomed to pass." Nares's Gloss.

music, "musical, mellifluous" (CALDECOTT): the honey of his music vows, vii. 151.

muSS, a scramble (Fr. mousche), vii. 559.

mutine, to mutiny, vii. 169.

mutiners, mutineers, vi. 142.

mutines, mutineers: like the mutines of Jerusalem, iv. 23 (where the allusion is to the factions in Jerusalem combining their strength against the Roman besiegers), vii. 200.

mutton, a cant term for a courtesan: The duke, I say to thee again, would eat mutton on Fridays (where, of course, the allusion is partly to breaking the fast), i. 488 : and see laced mutton.

my wrongs—Thou pardon me, Thou pardon me the wrongs done by me to thee, i. 229 : see note 131, i. 257.

mystery, an art, a calling: discredit our mystery, i. 494 ; thrive in our mystery, vi. 563 ; such strange mysteries ("artificial fashions," DOUCE), v. 498 ; manners, mysteries, and trades, vi. 548.

N.

naked gull—A : see gull, &c.

napkin, a handkerchief: iii. 63, 64 (twice), 109 ; v. 249, 251, 253 vi. 316 (twice) ; vii. 208, 424 (twice), 425 ; viii. 439 ; napkins, vi. 658 ; vii. 25.

Naples, that they speak i' the nose thus?—Have your instruments been in, vii. 414 : "The venereal disease first appeared at the siege of Naples" (JOHNSON). native she doth owe—Which, Which she naturally possesses, ii. 173 : see owe.

natural, an idiot: that a monster should be such a natural, i. 211 ; hath sent this natural, iii. 10 (where, as Douce observes, "Touchstone is called a natural merely for the sake of alliteration and a punning jingle of words ; for he is undoubtedly an artificial fool") ; like a great natural, vi. 420.

natural—All most, iii. 331 : see note 10, iii. 398.

naught awhile—Be, A plague, or a mischief on you (a petty malediction), iii. 6.

naughty, wicked, bad, worthless, i. 459 ; ii. 128, 136, 380, 389, 410 ; iv. 243 ; v. 132, 559 ; vi. 615 ; vii. 309.

nave—The, The navel : from the nave to the chaps, vii. 6.

nave of a wheel—This, iv. 348 : "Nave and knave are easily reconciled ; but why 'nave of a wheel' ? I suppose from his roundness. He was called round man, in contempt, before" (JOHNSON).

nayward, tendency to denial, iii. 436.

nay-word, a watch-word : have a nay-word, that you may know one another's mind, i. 368 ; we have a nay-word how to know one another, i. 409.

nay-word, a by-word, a laughing-stock (see Forby's Vocab. of East Anglia) : gull him into a nay-word, iii. 349.

near, admitted to one's confidence : you are very near my brother in his love, ii. 89 ; the imputation of being near their master, iv. 388.

neat slave—You, "You finical rascal, you [who] are an assemblage of foppery and poverty" (STEEVENS), vii. 279.

neb, a beak, a bill, a nose (see Jamieson's Etym. Dict. of the Scottish Language) : iii. 426 (afterwards in this scene Leontes speaks of their "meeting noses").

needless stream—The, The stream that needed it not, iii. 21.

needly, needfully, necessarily, vi. 435.

neeld, a needle, iv. 177 ; viii. 45, 61, 296 ; neelds, ii. 297 ; iv. 68 (This contracted form is common enough in our early poets ; e.g.

"for thee fit weapons weare (i. e. were) Thy neeld and spindle, not a sword and speare."

Fairfax's Tasso's Gerusalemme, B. xx. 95).

We also find "nylde ;"

"Without sweard and buckler, without speare or shyldes, "With an houndred poundes, as safe as with a nylde."

O maruelous tydynges, &c.—Seventy-nine Black-letter Ballads, &c. 1867, p. 211.

ne'er the near, never the nigher, iv. 168 (Compare Porter's Two Angrië Women of Abington, 1599, "Shall I stand gaping here all night till day?

And then be nere the neere," &c.

Sig. n 4).

ne'er-legged, iii. 144 : see note 100, iii. 193.

neeze, to sneeze, ii. 276.

neglection, neglect, v. 59 ; vi. 20 ; viii. 43.

neif, a fist, ii. 305 ; iv. 346.

Neoptolemus, vi. 76 : see note 144, vi. 124.

nephew, a word which, like cousin, was formerly used with great laxity: Henry the Fourth . . . Depos'd his nephew Richard, v. 34 (where nephew ought to mean "cousin;" but see note 71, v. 91); you'll have your nephews (grandsons) neigh to you, vi. 378.

nether-stocks, lower stocks, stockings, iv. 235; vii. 284 (The breeches were the upper-stocks).

Nevil—You, cousin, iv. 353: "Shakespeare has mistaken the name of the present nobleman. The earldom of Warwick was, at that time, in the family of Beauchamp, and did not come into that of the Nevils till many years after," &c. (STEEVENS).

Newgate-fashion—Two and two, "As prisoners are conveyed to Newgate, fastened two and two together" (JOHNSON), iv. 260.

next way, nearest way, iii. 216, 460; iv. 253; viii. 160.

nice, scrupulous, precise, squeamish: but she is nice and coy, i. 293; betray nice wenches, ii. 183; By nice direction of a maiden's eyes, ii. 358; nor the lady's, which is nice ("silly, trifling," STEEVENS, "affected, over-curious in trifles," CALDECOTT), iii. 55; they're nice and foolish, viii. 200: and see make nice.

nice, trifling, unimportant, petty: nice ("effeminate," STAUNTON) crutch, iv. 318; nice, and wanton reason, iv. 368; the respects thereof are nice and trivial, v. 414; How nice the quarrel was, vi. 431; The letter was not nice, vi. 464; every nice offence, vi. 667; mine hours Were nice ("delicate, courtly, flowing in peace," WARBURTON, "trifling, toying, wanton," Todd's Johnson's Dict.), vii. 562.

nice, particular(?): O, relation Too nice, and yet too true! vii. 58.

nicely I might well delay—What safe and, vii. 340: "Nicely is punctiliously; if I stood on minute forms" (MALONE).

niceness, scrupulousness, preciseness, vii. 683; viii. 197.

nicety, the same as niceness, i. 476.

Nicholas be thy speed!—Saint, i. 298: "The true reason why this Saint was chosen to be the patron of Scholars may be gathered from the following story in his Life composed in French verse by Maitre Wace, chaplain to Henry the Second, remaining in manuscript but never printed. . . .

' Treis clers aloent a escole, Nen frai mie longe parole,' &c. &c.

That is, 'Three scholars were on their way to school (I shall not make a long story of it), their host murdered them in the night, and hid their bodies; their [a word defaced in the manuscript] he reserved. Saint Nicholas was informed of it by God Almighty, and according to his pleasure went to the place. He demanded the scholars of the host, who was not able to conceal them, and therefore showed them to him. Saint Nicholas by his prayers restored the souls to their bodies. Because he conferred such honour on scholars, they at this day celebrate a festival.' It is remarkable that although the above story explains the common representation of the saint with three children in a tub, it is not to be found in that grand repertory of Monkish lies, The golden legend. It occurs, however, in an Italian Life of Saint Nicholas printed in 1645, whence it is extracted into the Gentleman's Magazine for 1777, p. 158" (DOUCE).

Nicholas' clerks—Saint, iv. 225: A cant term for highwaymen and robbers; but, though the expression is very common, its origin is still very uncertain.

nick—Out of all, Beyond all reckoning (in reference to the ancient tallies), i. 307 (Perhaps it may be necessary to add here Johnson's definition of a tally, viz. "A stick notched or cut in conformity to another stick, and used to keep accounts by").

nick, to cut in nicks or notches: nicks him like a fool, cuts his hair in nicks or notches, as was formerly done to fools (who "were shaved and nicked in a particular manner in our author's time," MALONE), ii. 47; nicked his captainship ("set the mark of folly on it," STEEVENS; cited in Johnson's Dict. under "Nick" in the sense of "Defeat, cozen," &c.), vii. 556.

niece, a grand-daughter: my niece Plantagenet, v. 416 ("The old Duchess of York calls Clarence's daughter niece, i. e. grand-daughter; as grand-children are frequently called nephews," THEOBALD).

niece?—Did I let pass th' abuse done to my, v. 286: "Thus Holinshed, p. 668; 'King Edward did attempt a thing once in the earles house, which was much against the earles honestie (whether he would have deflowered his daughter or his niece, the certaintie was not for both their honours revealed), for surely such a thing was attempted by king Edward'" (STEEVENS).

niggard, "to stint, to supply sparingly" (Johnson's Dict.), vi. 673.

night-crow—The, v. 317: Has been explained, erroneously I believe, to mean "the night-jar:" see the next article.

night-raven—The, ii. 98: "i. e." says Steevens, "the owl, nyctix;" which assertion, as far as "owl" is concerned, is at variance with sundry passages in our early writers, who make a distinction between it and the night-raven; e. g.

* "And after him owles and night-ravens flew."

Spenser's Faerie Queene, B. ii. C. vii. st. 23:

"The dismall cry of night-ravens . . . and the fearefull sound of schrich-owles." Johnson's Seven Champions of Christendom, Part First, Sig. D, ed. 4to, n. d. Cotgrave regards the "night-crow" and the "night-raven" as synonymous; "A night-crow. Corbeau de nuict." "The night-raven. Corbeau du nuict." Fr. and Engl. Dict.: so did that eminent naturalist the late Mr. Yarrell, who considered them as only different names for the night-heron, nycticorax, and who, in consequence of some talk which I had with him on the subject, wrote to me as follows, Sept. 21, 1854; "The older authors called it [the night-heron] a raven, in reference probably to the word corax; and by Shakespeare it was called a crow, because corax is a corvus."

night-rule, night-revel, night-sport, ii. 291.

nighted, dark as night, vii. 110, 321.

nill, will not, iii. 135; viii. 36, 459.

nine sibyls of old Rome—The, v. 11: "There were no nine sibyls of Rome; but he confounds things, and mistakes this for the nine books of Sibylline oracles, brought to one of the Tarquins" (WARBURTON).

nine-fold, vii. 302: This, according to Tyrwhitt, is put for the rhyme, instead of nine foals; according to Malone, it means "nine familiars."

nine-men's-morris is fill'd up with mud—The, ii. 277: "This game was sometimes called the nine mens merrils, from merelles or mereaux, an ancient French word for the jettons or counters with which it was played. The other term morris is probably a corruption suggested by the sort of dance which in the progress of the game the counters performed. In the French merelles each party had three counters only, which were to be placed in a line in order to win the game. It appears to have been the Tremere mentioned in an old fabliau. See Le Grand, Fabliaux et contes, tom. ii. p. 208. Dr. Hyde thinks the morris or merrils was known during the time that the Normans continued in possession of England, and that the name was afterwards corrupted into three mens morals, or nine mens morals. If this be true, the conversion of morals into morris, a term so very familiar to the country people, was extremely natural. The doctor adds, that it was likewise called nine-penny, or nine-pin miracle, three-penny morris, five-penny morris, nine-penny morris, or three-pin, five-pin, and nine-pin morris, all corruptions of three-pin &c. merels. Hyde, Hist. Nerdiludii, p. 202" (DOUCE): "Merelles, or, as it was formerly called in England, nine mens morris, and also fivepenny morris, is a game of some antiquity. Cotgrave describes it as a boyish game, and says it was played here commonly with stones, but in France with pawns, or men, made on purpose, and they were termed merelles; hence the pastime itself received that denomination. It was certainly much used by the shepherds formerly, and continues to be used by them and other rustics, to the present hour. But it is very far from being confined to the practice of boys and girls. The form of the merelle-table, and the lines upon it, as it appeared in the fourteenth century, is given upon the thirtieth plate; and these lines have not been varied. The black spots at every angle and intersection of the lines are the places for the men to be laid upon; and the manner of playing is briefly this: two persons, having each of them nine pieces, or men [Note. Which are different in form or colour for distinction sake; and from the moving these men backwards or forwards, as though they were dancing a morris, I suppose the pastime received the appellation of Nine Men's Morris. But why it should have been called five-penny morris, I do not know], lay them down alternately, one by one, upon the spots; and the business of either party is to prevent his antagonist from placing three of his pieces so as to form a row of three, without the intervention of an opponent piece. If a row be formed, he that made it is at liberty to take up one of his competitor's pieces from any part he thinks most to his own advantage. [Note. Excepting he has made a row, which must not be touched if he have another piece upon the board that is not a component part of that row.] When all the pieces are laid down, they are played backwards and forwards, in any direction that the lines run, but can only move from one spot to another at one time: he that takes off all his antagonist's pieces is the conqueror. The rustics, when they have not materials at hand to make a table, cut the lines in the same form upon the ground, and make a small hole for every dot. They then collect, as above mentioned, stones of different forms or colours for the pieces, and play the game by depositing them in the holes in the same manner that they are set over the dots upon the table. Hence Shakespeare, describing the effects of a wet and stormy season [in the present passage], &c. Strutt's Sports and Pastimes, p. 279, sec. ed.: "In that part of Warwickshire where Shakespeare was educated, and the neighbouring parts of Northamptonshire, the shepherds and other boys dig up the turf with their knives to represent a sort of imperfect chess-board. It consists of a square, sometimes only a foot diameter, sometimes three or four yards. Within this is another square, every side of which is parallel to the external square; and these squares are joined by lines drawn from each corner of both squares, and the middle of each line. One party, or player, has wooden pegs, the other stones, which they move in such a manner as to take up each other's men, as they are called, and the area of the inner square is called the pound, in which the men taken up are impounded. These figures are by the country people called Nine Men's Morris or Merrils; and are so called because each party has nine men. These figures are always cut upon the green turf, or leys as they are called, or upon the grass at the end of ploughed lands, and in rainy seasons never fail to be choked [fill'd] up with mud" (JAMES): "Nine men's morris is a game still played by the shepherds, cowkeepers, &c. in the midland counties, as follows: A figure is made on the ground (like this which I have drawn) by cutting out the turf; and two persons take each nine stones, which they place by turns in the angles, and afterwards move alternately, as at chess or draughts. He who can place three in a straight line may then take off any

no : "In our author's time the negative, in common speech, was used to design, ironically, the excess of a thing" (WARBURTON) : Here's no knavery! iii. 124 ; here's no vanity! iv. 282 ; Here's no sound jest! vi. 327.

no dame, hereafter living, By my excuse shall claim excuse's giving, viii. 336 : Not borrowed from Livy, i. 58 (of which no translation had appeared when Lucrece was published) ; but, as Malone observes, "Painter's novel furnished our author with this sentiment. 'As for my part, though I cleare my selfe of the offence, my body shall feel the punishment, for no unchaste or ill woman shall hereafter impute no dishonest act to Lucrece.' Palace of Pleasure, 1567, vol. i. f. 7."

no had, iv. 55 : see note 102, iv. 91.

no point, a quibble on the French negation non point : No point, with my knife, ii. 180 ; "No point," quoth I, ii. 219. (We occasionally meet with it in passages of our old plays where no quibble is intended : so in Jack Drums Entertainment,

"I will helpe you to a wench, Mounnsieur.

Moun. No point, a burne childe feere de fire."

Sig. c verso, ed. 1616 ;

in The Wisdome of Doctor Dodypoll, 1600, "Vat, you go leaue a de bride? tis no point good fashion." Sig. d 2 verso ; in Dekker's Shoomakers Holy-day, &c.,

"— tell me where he is.

Firke. No point, shall I betray my brother?"

Sig. a verso, ed. 1624 ;

and in S. Rowley's Noble Spanish Souldier, 1634,

"Quee. Art thou not yet converted?

Bal. No point."

Sig. e 4.)

Nob—Sir, (used in contempt for) Sir Robert, iv. 9.

noble—Let him be a : see let him be a noble.

noble, a gold coin (see the next article) : A noble shalt thou have, iv. 437 ; I shall have my noble? ibid. ; I gave a noble to the priest, v. 75 ; worth a noble, v. 365 ; receiv'd eight thousand nobles, ibid. 107 ; let it be but twenty nobles, iv. 333.

nobleman Give him as much as will make him a royal man, iv. 239 : "The royal went for 10s. ; the noble only for 6s. and 8d." (TYRWHITT) : "This seems to allude to a jest of Queen Elizabeth. Mr. John Blower, in a sermon before her majesty, first said, 'My royal queen,' and a little after, 'My noble queen.' Upon which says the queen, 'What, am I ten groats worse than I was?' This is to be found in Hearne's Discourse of some Antiquities between Windsor and Oxford; and it confirms the remark of the very learned and ingenious Mr. Tyrwhitt" (TOLLET).

nobless, nobleness, iv. 160.

Nobody—Played by the picture of, i. 213: "The allusion is here to the print of Nobody, as prefixed to the anonymous comedy of No-Body and Some-Body, without date, but printed before the year 1600" (REED): "If any particular representation be alluded to, which would almost appear to be intended by the introduction of the word picture, the passage is more likely to refer to the very singular engraving on the old and popular ballad of The Well-spoken Nobody" (HALLIWELL; who has given a fac-simile of that engraving from the unique copy of the said ballad in the Miller Library at Britwell House).

nod? Pan. You shall see. Cres. If he do, the rich shall have more—Will he give you the, vi. 14: "To give the nod was a term in the game at cards called Noddy. The word also signifies a silly fellow. Cressid means to call Pandarus a noddy, and says he shall by more nods be made more significantly a fool" (SINGER).

noddy, a simpleton, a fool: that's noddy . . . that set together is—noddy . . . the word "noddy," i. 266,—in which quibbling dialogue the true text is doubtful; see note 6, i. 326.

noise, music: Why sinks that caldron? and what noise is this? [Hautboys. vii. 49.

noise—Sneak's, iv. 340: "This term [noise], which occurs perpetually in our old dramatists, means a company or concert. In Jonson's days they sedulously attended taverns, ordinaries, &c., and seem to have been very importunate for admission to the guests. They usually consisted of three, and took their name from the leader of their little band. Thus we hear of 'Mr. Sneak's noise,' 'Mr. Oreak's noise,' and, in Cartwright, of 'Mr. Spindle's noise.' These names are probably the invention of Shakspeare and the rest; but they prove the existence of the custom. When this term went out of use, I cannot tell; but it was familiar in Dryden's time, who has it in his Wild Gallant and elsewhere; 'I hear him coming, and a whole noise of fiddlers at his heels.' Maiden Queen." Gifford's note on Jonson's Works, vol. iii. p. 402 (Compare, too, Dekker's If it be not good, the Duel is in it, 1612; "Theres seven score Noise at least of english filders." Sig. D 3 verso: and Chapman's All Fooles, 1605;

"And, Drawer, you must get vs musique too, Call's in a cleanly noyse, the slaues grow lowzy."

Sig. H 4 verso:

I may also notice that Wycherley uses the word in the sense of "a company" without any reference to music; "I could as soon suffer a whole noise of flatterers at a great man's levee in a morning." The Plain Dealer, act i. sc. 1).

nonce—For the, For the once, for the occasion, iv. 214 ; v. 28 ; vii. 191 (The original form was doubtless the Saxon for than anes : see Price's note on Warton's Hist. of Engl. Poet. vol. ii. p. 496, ed. 1824, and Sir F. Madden's Gloss. to Syr Gawayne, &c. : In comparatively recent writers the expression "for the once" is sometimes found ; e.g. "In Dengy Hundred, neare to Maldon, about the beginning of his Maiestie's reigne, there fell out an extraordinary iudgement vpon fise or sixe that plotted a solemne drinking at one of their houses, laid in beare for the once, drunke healths in a strange manner, and died therof within a few weekes, some sooner, and some later." Woe to Drunkards (a Sermon by S. Ward), 1622, p. 27).

none so poor to do him reverence, "the meanest man is now too high to do reverence to Cæsar" (JOHNSON), vi. 658.

non-payment that the debt should double—For, viii. 256 : "The poet was thinking of a conditional bond's becoming forfeited for non-payment ; in which case the entire penalty (usually the double of the principal sum lent by the obligee) was formerly recoverable at law" (MALONE).

nook-shotten isle of Albion, iv. 458 : "Shotten signifies any thing projected : so nook-shotten isle is an isle that shoots out into capes, promontories, and necks of land, the very figure of Great Britain" (WARBURTON).

north—The lordly monarch of the, v. 69 : "The north was always supposed to be the particular habitation of bad spirits. Milton, therefore, assembles the rebel angels in the north" (JOHNSON) : "The boast of Lucifer in the xivth chapter of Isaiah is said to be, that he 'will sit upon the mount of the congregation, in the sides of the north'" (STEEVENS) : "The monarch of the north was Zimimar, one of the four principal devils invoked by witches. The others were, Amaimon king of the East, Gorson king of the South, and Goap king of the West. Under these devil kings were devil marquesses, dukes, prelates, knights, presidents and earls. They are all enumerated, from Wier De præstigiis demonum, in Scot's Discoverie of Witchcraft, Book xv. c. 2 and 3" (DOUCE).

northern man, a clown, ii. 230. *

notes, whose faculties inclusive were, More than they were in note, "receipts in which greater virtues were inclosed than appeared to observation" (JOHNSON), "More than they were in note, i.e. more than was written down of them" (GRANT WHITE), iii. 221.

nothing!—Notes, notes, forsooth, and, ii. 97; admiring the nothing of it, iii. 483: In these passages there is, according to some critics, a quibble—noting.

nott-pated, having the hair cut short round and round, iv. 234, 238.

nousle, to nurse, viii. 17.

novice—That princely, That princely "youth, one yet new to the world" (JOHNSON), v. 378.

novum—Abate throw at, ii. 226: Novum (or Novem) was a game at dice, played by five or six persons. Its proper name was Novem quinque, from the two principal throws being five and nine: see fourth abate.

nowl, the head, ii. 292.

number'd beach—The, vii. 651: see note 32, vii. 742.

numbers—Such fiery, ii. 205: "Numbers are, in this passage, nothing more than poetical measures" (JOHNSON).

nuncle, a contraction of mine uncle (and the usual address, it appears, of the domestic fool to his superiors), vii. 266 (twice), 267 (twice), 268 (three times), 269, 274, 287, 295 (twice), 299, 305.

nurture, education, breeding, i. 223; iii. 32.

nut-hook (properly, a hook for pulling down the branches of nut-trees), a cant term for a catchpole, i. 349; iv. 397 (twice).

nutmeg—A gilt, ii. 229: This was formerly a common gift at Christmas and on other occasions of festivity (So in Barnfield's Affectionate Shepherd, 1594;

"Against my birth-day thou shalt be my guest: Weele haue greene-cheeses, and fine silly-bubs;
And thou shalt be the chiefe of all my feast:
And I will giue thee two fine pretie cuhs,
With two yong whelps, to make thee sport withall,
A golden racket, and a tennis-ball,

*A gilded nutmeg, and a race of ginger,
A silken girdle, and a drawn-worke band,"* &c. Sig. c 2).

nuzzling, nestling ("as a child with its nose [or nozzle] nestles into the breast of its nurse," &c. Richardson's Dict. in "Nousle," which is only another form of the word), viii. 276.

O.

O without a figure—An, “A mere cypher, which has no arithmetical value, unless preceded or followed by some figure” (MALONE), vii. 268.

O, any thing circular : this wooden O (the Globe Theatre on the Bank-side, which “was circular within,” COLLIER), iv. 421 ; The little O, the earth, vii. 589 ; so full of O's (marks of the small-pox), ii. 212 ; fiery O's (orbs, stars), ii. 296.

oak—Close as, “Close as the grain of oak” (STEEVENS), vii. 422.

oak—His brows bound with, vi. 145 : “The crown given by the Romans to him that saved the life of a citizen, which was accounted more honourable than any other” (JOHNSON).

oathable, “capable of having an oath administered” (Johnson’s Dict.), vi. 554.

oats have eaten the horses—The, iii. 148 : “There is still a ludicrous expression used when horses have stayed so long in a place as to have eaten more than they are worth, viz. that their heads are too big for the stable-door. I suppose Grumio has some such meaning” (STEEVENS) : Mr. Staunton compares a saying common in the stable now, The horses have eaten their heads off : Mr. Halliwell sees nothing here but a kind of blunder which “was a favourite one with the early English dramatists.”

ob, the abbreviation of obolum,—a halfpenny, iv. 246.

Obidicut, vii. 314 : A variation of the name of the fiend called Hoherdicut and Haberdicut in Harsnet’s Declaration of egregious Popish Impostures, 1603, pp. 119, 181 ; from which work Shakespeare seems to have borrowed the names of several of the fiends in King Lear.

objects—Subscribes To tender, vi. 75 ; swear against objects, vi. 553 : see note 152, vi. 598.

obligation, a bond : quittance, or obligation, i. 345 ; he can make obligations, v. 171.

observants, obsequious attendants, vii. 281.

observation, observance (rites due to the morning of May): For now our observation is perform'd, ii. 307: see May, &c.

observe, to show respectful attention: I shall observe him, iv. 378; You should observe her every way, viii. 197; underwrite in an observing kind, &c., vi. 39 (see underwrite, &c.); if he be observ'd, iv. 377.

observe and answer The vantage of his anger, "Mark, catch, and improve the opportunity which his hasty anger will afford us" (JOHNSON), vi. 179.

obstacle, a rustic corruption of obstinate, v. 75 (Walker is doubtless mistaken in supposing this to be a printer's error for "obstinate:" see his Crit. Exam. &c. vol. iii. p. 154).

occident, the west, iv. 149; vii. 706.

occupation, mechanics: the voice of occupation and The breath of garlic-eaters, vi. 215.

occupation—A man of any, a mechanic, vi. 624 (So Johnson explains the words; but Mr. Craik suspects that they mean more than that—he does not add what; and Mr. Grant White queries if they signify "a man of action, a busy man").

"occupy;" which was an excellent good word before it was ill sorted—As odious as the word, iv. 344: In illustration of this passage Ritson cites the following "jest" from Wits, Fits, and Fancies, ed. 1614; "One threw stones at an yll-fauor'd old womans owle, and the olde woman said: Faith (sir knaue) you are well occupy'd, to throw stones at my poore owle, that doth you no harme. Yea marie (answered the wag), so would you be better occupy'd too (I wisse) if you were young againe, and had a better face:" Here ill sorted means "ill associated." (Compare the 6th stanza of "As I was riding by the way," p. 29 of Loose and humorous Songs, printed from Percy's folio Ms. by the Early English Text Society: see too A Satyr on Ri. Fletcher, Bp. of London, in which his second wife, the widow of Sir Richard Baker, is termed, with a quibble, "a common occupier," p. xi. of the Memoir of Beaumont and Fletcher, prefixed to my ed. of their works.)

occurents, occurrences, incidents, vii. 210.

odd with him—To be, To be at odds, to contend, with him, vi. 79.

odd-even and dull watch o' the night—At this, vii. 378: "This odd-even is simply the interval between twelve at night and one in the morning" (HENLEY; whose explanation is perhaps the right one).

oddly, unequally: oddly pois'd, vi. 25.

odds—I shall win at the, "I shall succeed with the advantage that I am allowed" (MALONE), vii. 205.

'ods pittikins! vii. 704: "Steevens's derivation from God's my pity is not quite correct. It is rather from God's pity, diminutively used by the addition of kin. In this manner we have 'od's bodikins" (DOUCE).

œilliads, amorous glances, ogles (Fr. œillade), i. 354; vii. 321.

o'er-count me of my father's house—Thou dost, vii. 529; O Antony, You have my father's house, vii. 536: "O'er-count seems to be used equivocally, and Pompey perhaps meant to insinuate that Antony not only out-numbered, but had over-reached him. The circumstance here alluded to our author found in the old translation of Plutarch [by North]; 'Afterwards, when Pompey's house was put to open sale, Antonius bought it; but when they asked him money for it, he made it very strange, and was offended with them'" (MALONE).

o'er-crows, crows over, triumphs over, overpowers, vii. 210.

o'ergrown—So, vii. 709: see note 160, vii. 761.

officious, ready with their service: be every one officious To make this banquet, vi. 348.

O ho, O ho! i. 188: "This savage exclamation was originally and constantly appropriated by the writers of our ancient Mysteries and Moralities to the Devil; and has, in this instance, been transferred to his descendant Caliban" (STEEVENS): "But Shakespeare was led to put this ejaculation in the mouth of his savage by the following passage: 'They [the savages] seemed all very civil and very merry, shewing tokens of much thankfulness for those things we gave them, which they expresse in their language by these words—oh, ho! often repeated.' Abstract of James Rosier's Account of Captain Weymouth's Voyage. Purchas, iv. 1661" (MALONE).

old, used as an augmentative in colloquial language, — meaning "plentiful, abundant, great:" old cramps, i. 188; an old abusing of God's patience and the king's English, i. 356; old coil, ii. 140; old swearing, ii. 407; old utis, iv. 341; old turning the key, vii. 25. ("Faire le Diable de vauuert. To play reaks, to keep an old coile, or horrible stirre; to make a hurlyburly." Cotgrave's Fr. and Engl. Dict.: I believe I was the first to remark that the Italians use (or at least formerly used) "vecchio" in the same sense;

"Perchè Corante abbandonava il freno, E dette un vecchio colpo in sul terreno."

Pulci, Morg. Mag. C. xv. st. 54;

"E so ch' egli ebbe di vecchie paure."

Id. C. xix. st. 30:

It is rather remarkable that Florio, in his Dict., has not given this meaning of "vecchio.") old, = wold, a plain open country, downs: Swithold (St. Withold) footed thrice the old, vii. 301.

old ends, a term used to signify "old quotations, old saws," &c. which it does in the second of the following passages; but in the first of them the context proves that it refers to the formal conclusions of letters common in Shakespeare's time: ere you flout old ends any further, ii. 81; With old odd ends stol'n out of holy writ, v. 372.

old lad of the castle, iv. 211: see introduction, iv. 204.

old tale, my lord—Like the: see tale, my lord—Like the old.

ought him a thousand pound, owed him, &c. iv. 261.

ouphs, elves, goblins, i. 402, 412 : "Ouph, or Elf." Richardson's Dict. : "In a note on the former of these passages Steevens boldly tells us that 'Ouphe is the Teutonic word for a fairy or goblin.' It may be ; but Grimm quotes no other authority for the word than Shakespeare. He sees in it only another form of the cognate Elf ; and speaks of a corresponding form in the middle High German Ulf, in the plural Ulve—'von den ulven entbun-den werden'—and proves the identity of this Ulp with Alp, and consequently with our English Elf, from a Swedish song published by Arwiddson, in his collection of Swedish ballads, in one version of which the elfin king is called 'Herr Elfver,' and in the second, 'Herr Ulfver.'" Thoms's Three Notelets on Shakespeare, p. 76.

ousel, the blackbird (old Fr. *oise*l), iv. 355 ; ousel-cock, ii. 289 : In a note on the name "The Ring Ouzel. Turdus torquatus," Yarrell observes, "The Blackbird is also sometimes called Ouzel and Ousel. Thus Shakespeare," &c. Hist. of Brit. Birds, vol. i. p. 218, sec. ed.

over-red, to cover over with red, vii. 64.

overscutched huswives, over-whipped strumpets, iv. 362 (Cotgrave has "A scutcher, Verge, houssive." Fr. and Engl. Dict.; and Ray gives "An overswicht house-wife, i.e. a whore." North Country Words, p. 47, ed. 1768) : but Malone, inclining to believe that overscutched "is used in a wanton sense," quotes from Maroccus Extaticus, 1595, "his private scutcherie hurts [wounds] not the commonwealth farther than that his whore shall have a house rent-free." p. 15, ed. Percy Soc.

oversee this will—Thou, Collatine, shalt, viii. 321 : "Overseers were frequently added in Wills from the superabundant caution of our ancestors ; but our law acknowledges no such persons, nor are they (as contradistinguished from executors) invested with any legal rights whatsoever. In some old Wills the term overseer is used instead of executor," &c. (MALONE).

over-swear, to swear over again, iii. 392.

owl was a baker's daughter—They say the, vii. 180; "This is a common story among the vulgar in Gloucestershire, and is thus related; 'Our Saviour went into a baker's shop where they were baking, and asked for some bread to eat. The mistress of the shop immediately put a piece of dough into the oven to bake for him; but was reprimanded by her daughter, who insisting that the piece of dough was too large, reduced it to a very small size. The dough, however, immediately afterwards began to swell, and presently became of a most enormous size. Whereupon the baker's daughter cried out 'Heugh, heugh, heugh;' which owl-like noise probably induced our Saviour for her wickedness to transform her into that bird.' This story is often related to children, in order to deter them from such illiberal behaviour to poor people" (DOUCE): On legends similar to this, see Thoms's Three Notelets on Shakespeare, p. 110.

owls, and sprites—But goblins, i. 20: Here Steevens cites from Breton's Cornucopiæ, Pasquil's Night-cap, &c. 1612, p. 38,

"No oules, hobgoblins, ghosts, nor water-sprite;"

and Malone, from Copley's Fig for Fortune, 1596, p. 63, 43; Lazarus in the painted cloth, iv. 268; by a painted cloth be kept in awe, viii. 294; set this in your painted cloths, vi. 100: Painted cloth, used as hangings for rooms, was cloth or canvas, painted in oil, representing various subjects, with devices and mottoes or proverbial sayings interspersed: it has been erroneously explained to mean "tapestry." (The following homely story is related by the honest water-poet;

"There's an old speech, a Tayler is a Thiefe,
 And an old speech he hath for his reliefe,

I'll not equivocate, I'll give him's due,—
 He (truly) steales not, or he steales not, true.
 Those that report so, mighty wrong doe doe him,
 For how can he steale that, that's brought vnto him? .
 And it may be they were false idle speeches,
 That one brought cotton once, to line his breeches,
 And that the Tayler laid the cotton by,
 And with old painted cloth the roome supply,
 Which as the owner (for his vse) did weare,
 A nayle or sceg by chance his breech did teare,
 At which he saw the linings, and was wroth
 For Diues and Lazarus on the painted cloth,
 The Glutton's dogs, and hels fire hotly burning,
 With fiends and fleshhookes, whence ther's no returning.
 He rip'd the other breech, and there he spide
 The pamper'd Prodigall on cockhorse ride;
 There was his fare, his fidlers, and his whores,
 His being poore, and beaten out of doores,
 His keeping hogs, his eating huskes for meat,
 His lamentation, and his home retreat,
 His welcome to his father, and the feast,
 The fat calfe kill'd, all these things were exprest.
 These transformations fld the man with feare,
 That he hell-fire within his breech should beare;
 He mus'd what strange inchantments he had bin in,
 That turn'd his linings into painted linen.
 His feare was great, but at the last to rid it,
 A wizard told him, 'twas the Tayler did it."

A Thiefe, p. 119; Taylor's Workes, 1630 :

I add a specimen of painted-cloth poetry, which has been preserved by the same writer, who copied it from the walls of a room at the Star in Rye in the year 1653 ;

" And as upoh a bed I musing lay,
 The chamber hang'd with painted cloth, I found My selfe with sentences beleaguerd round :
 There was Philosophy and History, Poetry, Ænigmatick mystery.
 I know not what the town in wealth may be,
 But sure I on that chambers walls did see More wit than al the town had, and more worth
 Then my unlearned Muse can well set forth.
 I will not hold my reader in dilemma,
 This truly, lying, I transcribed them a.

*No flower so fresh, but frost may it deface, None sits so fast, but hee may lose his place.
 'Tis concord keeps a realme in stable stay,
 But discord brings all kingdomes to decay.
 No subject ought (for any kinde of cause) Resist his prince, but yeeld him to the lawes.
 Sure God is just, whose stroake delayed long Doth light at last with paine more sharp and strong.
 Time never was, nor n'ere I thinke shall be,
 That truth (unshent) might speake, in all things free.*

This is the sum, the marrow, and the pith,
My lying chamber was adorned with :
And 'tis supposed, those lines written there Have in that roome bin more then 40 years."

'But like a couzening picture, which one way Shows like a crow, another like a swan'" (STAUNTON).

painted upon a pole, "that is, on cloth suspended on a pole" (MALONE), vii. 71.

pajock, vii. 160: Here pajock certainly means "peacock:" I have often heard the lower classes in the north of Scotland call the peacock "pea-jock;" and their almost invariable name for the turkey-cock is "bubbly-jock."

palabras, ii. 116; paucas pallabris, iii. 105: The former is equivalent to, and the latter is a corruption of, the Spanish pocas pala bras; i. e. "few words;" a phrase which, as it would seem from various passages of our early writers, was formerly current even among the vulgar in England.

palates theirs—You are plebeians . . . the great'st taste Most, vi. 182: "The plain meaning is, 'that senators and plebeians are equal, when the highest taste is best pleased with that which pleases the lowest,' &c." (STEEVENS): "I think the meaning is, the plebeians are no less than senators, when, the voices of the senate and the people being blended together, the predominant taste of the compound smacks more of the populace than the senate" (MALONE).

pale, paleness: a sudden pale, viii. 259.

pale, to make pale: to pale his uneffectual fire, vii. 124.

parrot, "Beware the rope's-end"—Prophecy like the, ii. 39; I cry, a rope! a rope! v. 15: On the first of these passages Warburton observes; "This alludes to people's teaching that bird unlucky words; with which, when any passenger was offended, it was the standing joke of the wise owner to say, 'Take heed, sir, my parrot prophesies.' To this Butler hints, where, speaking of Ralpho's skill in augury, he says [Hudibras, P. i. C. i.], 'Could tell what subtlest parrots mean,

That speak, and think contrary clean;
What member 'tis of whom they talk,
When they cry rope, and walk, knave, walk.' " patch, properly a domestic fool, and used also as a term of contempt (perhaps from the Italian pazzo, or from his wearing a patched or parti-coloured coat: compare patched fool): Thou scurvey patch, i. 212; idiot, patch! ii. 22; What patch is made our porter? ii. 22; were there a patch set on learning, ii. 193; The patch is kind enough, ii. 368; What soldiers, patch? vii. 64; A crew of patches, ii. 292 ("It has been supposed that this term [patch] originated from the name of a fool belonging to Cardinal Wolsey, and that his parti-coloured dress was given to him in allusion to his name. The objection to this is, that the motley habit worn by fools is much older than the time of Wolsey. Again, it appears that Patch was an appellation given not to one fool only that belonged to Wolsey. There is an epigram by Heywood, entitled A saying of Patch my Lord Cardinal's foole; but in the epigram itself he is twice called Sexten, which was his real name. In a manuscript Life of Wolsey by his gentleman usher Cavendish [now well known from the printed copy] there is a story of another fool belonging to the Cardinal, and presented by him to the King. A marginal note states that 'this foole was callid Master Williames, owtherwise called Patch.' In Heylin's History of the Reformation mention is made of another fool called Patch belonging to Elizabeth. But the name is even older than Wolsey's time; for in some household accounts of Henry the Seventh there are payments to a fool who is named Pechie and Packye. It seems therefore more probable on the whole that fools were nick-named Patch from their dress; unless there happen to be a nearer affinity to the Italian pazzo, a word that has all the appearance of a descent from fatuus. This was the opinion of Mr. Tyrwhitt in a note on A Midsummer-night's Dream, act iii. sc. 2. But although in the above instance ['The patch is kind enough,'—The Merchant of Venice, act ii. sc. 5]; as well as in a multitude of others, a patch denotes a fool or simpleton, and, by corruption, a clown, it seems to have been occasionally used in the sense of any low or mean person. Thus in the passage in A Midsummer-night's Dream just referred to, Puck calls Bottom and his companions a crew of patches, rude mechanicals, certainly not meaning to compare them to pampered and sleek buffoons. Whether in this sense the term have a simple reference to that class of people whose clothes might be pieced or patched with rags; or whether it is to be derived from the Saxon verb pecan, to deceive by false appearances, as suggested by the acute and ingenious author of The diversions of Purley, must be left to the reader's own discernment." DOUCE).

pax, iv. 460, 461: This was a small plate of metal—either of precious or of coarser metal—which, during a certain part of the mass, was tendered to the laity to be kissed: it was also named osculatorium: on its surface was engraved or embossed some religious subject, generally the Crucifixion. (Benvenuto Cellini, in his Vita, mentions the paci made by Ambrogio Foppa, called Caradosso; and Molini, in a note on the passage, remarks; "Paci si chiamano quelle tavolette con immagini sacre che si porgono a baciare nelle chiese. Nel Vocab. manca l'esempio al § 10 della voce pace in questo significato." See pp. 50 and 499 of the (best) ed. of that most interesting biography, printed at Firenze, 1830, 12mo.)

pay, to beat ("To Pay (beat), Cædo, Percutio." Coles's Lat. and Engl. Dict.): Here's that, I warrant you, will pay them all (with a quibble), i. 38; I paid nothing for it neither, but was paid for my learning (with a quibble), i. 405.

pay, to punish, to dispatch, (in slang phraseology) to settle: 'Mass, you'll pay him then! ("To pay, in old language, meant to thrash or beat; and here signifies to bring to account, to punish," MALONE), iv. 474; two I am sure I have paid, iv. 237; seven of the eleven I paid, iv. 238; I have paid Percy, iv. 282; He was paid for that, vii. 702; sorry that you have paid too much, and sorry that you are paid (a quibble—"overcome by the drink") too much, vii. 720.

pay, to requite, "to hit" (MALONE): on the answer, he pays you as surely as your feet hit the ground they step on, iii. 374.

pay down for our offence by weight, "pay the full penalty" (WARBURTON), i. 450.

payment, a punishment: If he come to-morrow, I'll give him his payment, iii. 9.

peach, to impeach, to accuse, to inform against, iv. 227; peaches, i. 499.

peak, to become emaciated: Shall he dwindle, peak, and pine, vii. 8.

peak, to mope, to be spiritless: peak, Like John-a-dreams, vii. 146; the peaking (sneaking, pitiful) cornuto her husband, i. 391.

pearl that pleas'd your empress' eye—The, vi. 339: Alluding to the proverb, "Black men are pearls in beauteous ladies' eyes:" see Black men, &c.

peascod instead of her; from whom I took two cods, and, giving her them again, said, &c.—I remember the wooing of a, iii. 26: Here peascod means "a peascod-branch," and cods signify "pods," as in the following passage of Camden's Remains concerning Britain, &c.; "King Richard the Second . . . also used a pescod branch with the cods open, but the pease out, as it is upon his robe in his monument at Westminster." p. 453 (Impresses), ed. 1674; and so Coles, "A Cod (husk), Siliqua, Folliculus." Lat. and Engl. Dict.: To explain Touchstone's words more fully,—"I remember the wooing of a peascod-branch instead of Jane Smile; from which peascod branch I took two pods, and giving them again to the peascod-branch, who represented my mistress Jane Smile, I said," &c.: On whom, used in the present passage for which, see note 207, vi. 606: "Our ancestors," observes Mr. Halliwell, "were frequently accustomed in their love-affairs to employ the divination of a peascod," &c.; and something of the same kind appears to have been practised by rustic lovers at a comparatively recent period, if Gay has faithfully described the manners of his time; for in his Fourth Pastoral I find Hobnelia says,

"As peascods once I pluck'd, I chanc'd to see One that was closely fill'd with three times three,
Which when I cropp'd I safely home convey'd,
And o'er my door the spell in secret laid," &c.:

In the two following passages of Shakespeare peascod bears its usual signification, "the husk that contains the peas;" As a squash is before 'tis a peascod, iii. 339; a shealed peascod, vii. 268.

peat, a pet, a fondling, a darling, iii. 116.

pedant, a teacher of languages, a schoolmaster, ii. 187, 226 (twice); iii. 140, 141, 142, 157, 366.

pedascule, iii. 141: "He should have said Didascule; but thinking this too honourable, he coins the word Pedascule, in imitation of it, from pedant" (WARBURTON): "I believe it is no coinage of Shakespeare's; it is more probable that it lay in his way, and he found it" (STEEVENS).

peel'd, having a shaven crown, tonsured: Peel'd priest, v. 15: see note 35, v. 86.

peer out, peer out! "appear horns!" (JOHNSON), i. 396.

peevish appears to have generally signified, during Shakespeare's days, "silly, foolish, trifling," &c.; and such would seem to be its import in the greater number of the following passages, though, no doubt, the word was formerly used to signify, as now, "pettish, perverse," &c.: peevish girl, i. 318; he is something peevish (foolish) that way, i. 356 (where Malone thinks that peevish is Mrs. Quickly's blunder for precise—wrongly; see Gifford's note on Massinger's Works, vol. i. p. 71, ed. 1813); peevish sheep, ii. 33; peevish officer, ii. 41; peevish boy, iii. 54; v. 31, 422; peevish messenger, iii. 342; peevish self-will'd harlotry, iv. 251; vi. 453; peevish fellow, iv. 467; peevish broil, v. 39; peevish tokens, v. 74; peevish fool, v. 317; peevish brat, v. 368; peevish course, v. 393; peevish-fond, v. 436; peevish vows, vi. 90; peevish schoolboy, vi. 678; this peevish odds, vii. 409; peevish jealousies, vii. 454; he Is strange and peevish, vii. 652.

Peg-a-Ramsey, iii. 347, where see foot-note.

peise, to weigh down, to oppress: Lest leaden slumber peise me down to-morrow, v. 445.

peise, to poise, to balance: The world, who of itself is peised well, iv. 28.

pelican daughters, vii. 300: "The young pelican is fabled to suck the mother's blood" (JOHNSON).

pelleted, formed into small balls (globules, drops): That season'd woe had pelleted in tears, viii. 439.

pelleted, consisting of small balls (hail-stones): By the discandying of this pelleted storm, vii. 561.

pelt, to rage clamorously; Another, smother'd, seems to pelt and swear, viii. 327.

pelting, paltry, contemptible: pelting, petty officer, i. 467; pelting river, ii. 277; pelting farm, iv. 124; pelting wars, vi. 79; pelting villages, vii. 283; pelting scurvy news, viii. 147.

pencils, ho, &c.—Ware: see ware pencils, ho, &c.

Pendragon, in his litter, sick, &c. v. 45: "This hero was Uther Pendragon, brother to Aurelius, and father to King Arthur. Shakespeare [the unknown author of this play] has imputed to Pendragon an exploit of Aurelius, who, says Holinshed, 'even sicke of a flixe as he was, caused himselfe to be carried forth in a litter: with whose presence his people were so encouraged, that encountering with the Saxons they wan the victorie.' Hist. of Scotland, p. 99" (STEEVENS): "Hardyng (Chronicle, chap. 72, 8vo [p. 120, ed. Ellis, 1812, 4to]) gives the following account of Uter Pendragon;

'For whiche the kyng ordeyned a horse litter
To beare hym so then vnto the Verolame, Wher Occa laye, and Oysa also in feer,
That Saynt Albones nowe hight of noble fame, Bet downe the walles; but to hym forth they came,
Wher in battayll Occa and Oysa were slayne.
The felde he had, and therof was full fayne.' " (GREY.)

penetrative, penetrating, vii. 578.

penitent, used with a quibble, "sorry" and "doing penance": Are penitent for your default to-day, ii. 10.

Penker—To Friar: see Shaw—To Doctor, &c.

penner, a case for holding pens, viii. 167.

penny of observation—By my, ii. 183: The allusion probably is to a celebrated tract, often reprinted, entitled A Pennyworth of Wit.

pensioners, gentlemen of the band of Pensioners, who wore a splendid uniform, i. 367; ii. 275.

Penthesilea, Queen of the Amazons, iii. 350: It must be remembered that Maria, to whom Sir Toby facetiously applies this name, is described as of diminutive size (Here Mr. Grant White refers the reader for an account of her exploits and death to a juvenile publication of mine,—Select Translations from the Greek of Quintus Smyrnaeus).

perch—By many a dern and painful, viii. 35: "A perch is a measure of five yards and a half," says Steevens, and truly enough; but the unknown author of this portion of Pericles (using here the word for the sake of a rhyme) thought no more about the exact measure of a perch than Milton did about that of a rood, when he tells us that Satan "lay floating many a rood."

perdu, a soldier sent on a forlorn hope (Fr. enfant perdu), vii. 331.

perdurable, lasting, iv. 485; vii. 393.

perdurably, lastingly, i. 480.

perdy, verily (par dieu), ii. 40; iii. 382; iv. 435; vii. 161, 286.

peregrinate, "of a foreign or outlandish cast" (CAPELL), ii. 207.

perfect, to instruct fully: Her cause and yours I'll perfect him withal, i. 503; Being once perfected how to grant suits, i. 179.

perfect, certain, well assured, well informed: Thou'rt perfect, then, our ship, &c. iii. 457; Thou hast a perfect thought, iv. 72; in your state of honour I am perfect ("I am perfectly acquainted with your rank of honour," STEEVENS), vii. 52; I am perfect That the Pannonians, &c. vii. 673; I'm perfect what, vii. 698.

perforce, by violence: took perforce My ring away, ii. 38; take perforce my husband from the abbess, ii. 46; she perforce withholds the loved boy, ii. 275; what he hath taken away from thy father perforce, iii. 9; He that perforce robs lions of their hearts, iv. 12, &c.

perforce, of necessity: which perforce, I know, Thou must restore, i. 230; perforce I must confess, ii. 285; must perforce decay, iv. 319; Perforce must move, iv. 381; I must perforce, v. 354; must perforce prey on itself, vii. 316; perforce must suffer, vii. 466; perforce he could not But pay me, &c. vii. 543, &c.

perfumes—Their diseases'd: see diseases'd perfumes—Their.

periapts, "amulets; charms worn as preservatives against diseases or mischief" (HANMER), v. 69 (περίπτα, amuleta, Plato, Rep. p. 426 B, ed. Steph.: "Periapte. A medicine hanged about any part of the bodie." Cotgrave's Fr. and Engl. Dict.).

period, an end, a conclusion: the period (utmost limit) of my ambition, i. 382; no period ("seems to mean no proper catastrophe," STEEVENS) to the jest, i. 400; My worldly business makes a period, iv. 386; The period of thy tyranny, v. 56; the period of their tyranny, v. 146; a period of tumultuous broils, v. 313; the period to my curse, v. 369; the perfect period of this peace, v. 381; There's his period, To sheathe his knife in us, v. 497; My point and period, vii. 332; This would have seem'd a period, &c. vii. 342; O bloody period! vii. 469; the period of your duty, vii. 564; time is at his period, vii. 579.

period, to put an end to: Periods his comfort, vi. 510.

perish, to cause to perish, to destroy: Might in thy palace perish Margaret, v. 155.

perishen, perish, viii. 20.

perjure, wearing papers—Like a, ii. 198 : perjure, i.e. perjurer : formerly convicted perjurers, while undergoing punishment, wore a paper expressing their offence.

perjure, to taint with perjury, to corrupt : want will perjure The ne'er-touch'd vestal, vii. 556.

perpend, to weigh, to consider attentively, i. 362 ; iii. 38, 393 ; iv. 483 ; vii. 134.

perplex'd, bewildered, distracted : Perplex'd in the extreme, vii. 469 ; a thing perplex'd Beyond self-explication, vii. 679 ; Leaving his spoil perplex'd in greater pain, viii. 308.

persever, to persevere, ii. 21, 298 ; iii. 67, 256, 260 ; iv. 24 ; vii. 110, 304 ; viii. 59 ; persévers, i. 301.

Perseus' horse, vi. 18 : Here "our poet followed the author of The Destruction of Troy [see vi. 2], a book which furnished him with some other circumstances of this play. Of the horse alluded to in the text he found in that book the following account : 'Of the blood that issued out [from Medusa's head] there engendered Pegasus, or the flying horse. By the flying horse that was engendered of the blood issued from her head, is understood, that of her riches issuing of that realme he [Perseus] founded and made a ship named Pegase,—and this ship was likened unto an horse flying,' &c. Again, 'By this fashion Perseus conquered the head of Medusa, and did make Pegase, the most swift ship that was in all the world.' In another place the same writer assures us, that this ship, which he always calls Perseus' flying horse, 'flew on the sea like unto a bird.' Dest. of Troy, 4to, 1617, p. 155-164" (MALONE) : "But though classic authority be wanting that Perseus made use of a horse, Boccaccio in his Genealogia Deorum, lib. xii. c. 25, has quoted Lactantius as saying, that when Perseus undertook his expedition against Gorgon, at the instance of king Polydectus, he was accompanied by the winged horse Pegasus, but not that he used him in delivering Andromeda. Boccaccio adds, that others were of opinion that he had a ship called Pegasus. The liberties which the old French translators of Ovid's Metamorphoses have taken, and their interpolations, are unaccountable. Some have caused Perseus at the instant of his birth to bestride Pegasus, and travel away to Helicon. In the cuts to many of the early editions of Ovid, the designers have not only placed him on Pegasus in the adventure with Andromeda, but even in his attack upon Atlas" (DOUCE) : Here Steevens remarks that "our author perhaps would not have contented himself with merely comparing one ship to another ;" and on a later line, in act iv. sc. 5,

"As hot as Perseus, spur thy Phrygian steed," he observes, "As the equestrian fame of Perseus, on the present occasion, must be alluded to, 'this simile will serve to countenance my opinion, that in a former instance his horse was meant for a real one, and not, allegorically, for a ship.' * , .

person, a parson (person being indeed the original and correct form of the word,—persona ecclesiæ): Master person, if. 194 (twice); Our person misdoubts it, ii. 202.

personating of himself—It must be a, vi. 566: "Personating for representing simply" (WARBURTON).

perspective did lend me—Contempt his scornful, iii. 278; A natural perspective, iii. 391; Like perspectives, which rightly gaz'd upon, &c. iv. 131: "The several kinds of perspective glasses that were used in Shakespeare's time may be found collected together in Scot's Discoverie of Witchcraft, 1584, 4to, Book xiii. ch. 19. They cannot be exceeded in number by any modern optician's shop in England. Among these, that alluded to by the Duke [in the second of the above passages] is thus described: 'There be glasses also wherein one man may see another man's image, and not his own' (DOUCE): "This [Like perspectives, which rightly gaz'd upon, &c.] is a fine similitude, and the thing meant is this: amongst mathematical recreations, there is one in optics, in which a figure is drawn, wherein all the rules of perspective are inverted: so that, if held in the same position with those pictures which are drawn according to the rules of perspective, it can present nothing but confusion: and to be seen in form, and under a regular appearance, it must be looked upon from a contrary station; or, as Shakespeare says, 'ey'd awry'" (WARBURTON): "Dr. Plot's History of Staffordshire, p. 391, explains this perspective, or odd kind of 'pictures upon an indented board, which, if beheld directly, you only perceive a confused piece of work; but, if obliquely, you see the intended person's picture;' which, he was told, was made thus: 'The board being intended [or furrowed with a plough-plane], the print or painting was cut into parallel pieces equal to the depth and number of the indentures on the board, and they were pasted on the flats that strike the eye holding it obliquely, so that the edges of the parallel pieces of the print or painting exactly joining on the edges of the indentures, the work was done'" (TOLLET): "Perspective. Apparently used for a kind of optical deception, showing different objects through or in the glass from what appeared without it; like the anamorphosis." Nares's Gloss. (Compare Baxter's Sir P. Sydneys Ourania, 1606;

"Glasses perspective, Wrought by this Glasses Fabrication."

Sig. 18 verso).

perspectively, as in a perspective, iv. 506: see the preceding article.

persuade, "to treat by persuasion" (Johnson's Dict.): have all persuaded with him, ii. 387.

pertly, alertly, quickly: appear, and pertly! i. 219.

pertly, saucily: that pertly front your town, vi. 78.

pervert, to turn away or aside: pervert the present wrath He hath against himself, vii. 670.

pestering, crowding, thronging, vi. 212 (So in Alarum for London, 1602,

"It is impossible to passe the streetes, They are so pesterd with this brainsicke crew." Sig. x).

petar, or petard, an engine, charged with powder, used to blow up gates, &c. vii. 172.

Peter of Pomfret, iv. 53: "This man was a hermit in great repute with the common people. Notwithstanding the event is said to have fallen out as he had prophesied, the poor fellow was inhumanly dragged at horses' tails through the streets of Warham, and, together with his son, who appears to have been even more innocent than his father, hanged afterwards upon a gibbet. See Holinshed's Chronicle, under the year 1213" (DOUCE): "In the old 'King John' [The Troublesome Raigne of Iohn, &c., see vol. iv. 3] there is a scene between the prophet and the people, but otherwise altogether undeserving of notice" (COLLIER).

pew-fellow, one who sits in the same pew—a companion, a partner, v. 426 ("Faith, certaine pu-fellowes of mine, that haue bin mued vp," &c. Wilson's Coblers Prophecie, 1594, sig. F4: "Loose not a minute, pue-fellow, leaue him not yet," &c. Dekker's If it be not good, the Diuel is in it, 1612, sig. G4 verso).

pewter and brass, and all things that belong To house or housekeeping, iii. 138: Pewter, as Steevens observes, would seem to have been too costly to be used in common even in the reign of Elizabeth. From the Household Book of the Fifth Earl of Northumberland, begun in 1512, it appears that vessels of pewter were hired by the year.

Pheezer, "a made word from pheeze" (MALONE), i. 353: see the next article.

pheeze you—I'll, iii. 105; I'll pheeze his pride, vi. 41: To pheeze, says Gifford (note on Jonson's Works, vol. iv. p. 189), is "to beat, to chastise, to humble, &c., in which sense it may be heard every day [in the west of England]:" according to Mr. Staunton, I'll pheeze you "was equivalent exactly to I'll tickle you."

Philip and Jacob—Come, "On the arrival of the feast of Philip and James, Apostles, May 1st" (HALLIWELL), i. 488.

Philip —sparrow iv. 11: Philip was, and still is, a name for the common sparrow, perhaps from its note, phip, phip: the speaker, now Sir Richard, disdains his old name Philip. (See the not-underrated celebrated poem entitled Phyllyp Sparrowe, in my edition of Skelton's Works, vol. i. p. 51.)

Philippian—His sword, vii. 525: Cleopatra applies this epithet to Antony's sword in allusion to his valour at the battle of Philippi (Mr. Staunton's explanation—"the sword so named after the great battle of Philippi," as if there was some particular sword so named—is hardly right).

Philip's daughters—Saint, v. 13: "Meaning the four daughters of Philip mentioned in the 21st chapter of the Acts of the Apostles" (HANMER).

philosopher's two stones—A, iv. 363: Johnson I believe is right in explaining this, "more than the philosopher's stone," or twice the value of the philosopher's stone; though, as Farmer observes, "Gower has a chapter in his Confessio Amantis, 'Of the three stones that philosophers made,' &c. (The double entendre here is obvious.)

phisnomy, physiognomy, iii. 272 (This contraction was formerly common, and not regarded as a vulgarism: "Phisnomie or phisognomie of mans face. Metascopie, mine, le traict du visage." Cotgrave's Fr. and Engl. Dict.).

phoenix down, viii. 442: "I suppose she means matchless, rare, down" (MALONE).

phraseless, beyond the power of language to describe justly, viii. 445.

pia mater, "the membrane that immediately covers the substance of the brain" (STEEVENS), used in the sense of the brain itself, i. 194; iii. 337; vi. 29.

pick, to pitch: I'll pick you o'er the pales else, v. 570; as high As I could pick my lance, vi. 140.

pickaxes—These poor, vii. 706: "Meaning her fingers" (JOHNSON).

picked, scrupulously nice, foppish, coxcombical, fastidious: He is too picked, ii. 207; My picked man of countries, iv. 10; the age is grown so picked, vii. 196.

pickers and stealers—By these, By these hands, vii. 162: "The phrase is taken from our church catechism, where the catechumen, in his duty to his neighbour, is taught to keep his hands from picking and stealing" (WHALLEY).

picking, insignificant: such picking grievances, iv. 368.

pick-purse—At hand, quoith: see At hand, &c.

pick-thanks, fawning parasites, iv. 254: "A pick-thank is one who gathers or collects favour, thanks, or applause, by means of flattery" (DOUCE).

Pickt-hatch, i. 366 : In spite of all that has been written about this celebrated retreat of prostitutes and thieves,—from the earliest notes on Shakespeare down to Mr. P. Cunningham's Hand-book for London,—it would seem that the exact position of Pickt-hatch remains to be determined : "In Shakespeare's time, that portion of London which is now bounded on the North by Old Street, on the East by Golding Lane, on the South by Barbican, and on the West by Goswell Street and the Charter-house, consisted for the most part of scattered collections of small tenements, generally with gardens attached to them, and a few alleys or courts. Somewhere in this small portion of the metropolis was situated the notorious resort of bad characters, which was known as the Pickt-hatch ; that name, it is conjectured, being derived from the iron spikes placed over the half-door, or hatch, one of the characteristics of a house of ill-fame," &c. &c. (HALLIWELL).

pight, fixed, settled : And found him pight to do it, vii. 276.

pig-nuts, earth-nuts, i. 206.

pikes with a vice—You must put in the, ii. 138 : "The circular 'bucklers' of the sixteenth century, now called more commonly targets, had frequently a central spike, or 'pike,' usually affixed by a screw. It was probably found convenient to detach this spike occasionally ; for instance, in cleaning the buckler, or in case of that piece of defensive armour being carried about on any occasion when not actually in use. A sharp projecting spike, four or five inches long, would obviously be inconvenient. . . . 'Vice' is the French vis, a screw, a word still in common use, the female screw being called écrou." Note (communicated by Mr. Albert Way) in Thoms's Three Notelets on Shakespeare, p. 128.

pinch'd thing—A, iii. 436: "The sense, I think, is, . . . a mere child's baby, a thing pinched out of clouts, a puppet for them to move and actuate as they please" (HEATH): Perhaps so.

pink eyne, small, winking, half-shut eyes ("Oeil de rat. A small eye, pinke-eye, little sight." Cotgrave's Fr. and Engl. Dict.), vii. 536.

pinked, worked in eyelet-holes, v. 568.

pioner, a pioneer, vii. 127; viii. 326; pioners, iv. 453; vii. 426: Pioneers were generally soldiers who, on account of misconduct, had been degraded to the office of pioneer (As to the old form of the word, Milton writes "pioners" in Paradise Lost, B. i. 676, and in Paradise Regain'd, B. iii. 330; see the first eds. of those poems; but in the eds. of Todd, Keightley, &c. we find "pioneers").

pip out?—A: see two-and-thirty, &c.

pipe-wine first with him; I'll make him dance—I think I shall drink in, i. 380: "Canary is the name of a dance, as well as of a wine. Ford lays hold of both senses" (TYRWHITT): "Ford terms canary pipe-wine, because the canary dance is performed to a tabor and pipe" (DOUCE): here drink in is merely the old phraseology for "drink."

issing-conduit—The, v. 177: Near the Royal Exchange: it was set up by John Wels, grocer, mayor in 1430.

issing while—A, A short time, i. 311 : The phrase was formerly common enough.

pitch : "A Pitch (measure), modus. They fie a very high Pitch, Admodum excelsè volitant. I would have you tell me what Pitch he was of, Velim mihi dicas quâ staturâ fuerit." Coles's Lat. and Engl. Dict. : "Pitch. The height to which a falcon soared, before she stooped upon her prey. . . It was used also, and still is, for height in general ; but this perhaps was the origin of that use." Nares's Gloss. : Of what validity and pitch soe'er, iii. 327 ; How high a pitch his resolution soars ! iv. 108 ; were the whole frame here, It is of such a spacious lofty pitch (stature), &c. v. 28 ; which flies the higher pitch, v. 29 ; what a pitch she flew, v. 128 ; above his fulcon's pitch, ibid. ; Into what pitch he please, v. 511 ; mount her pitch, vi. 297 ; bound a pitch above dull woe, vi. 401 ; fly an ordinary pitch, vi. 617.

pitch a field, v. 39 ; pitch our battle, v. 313 ; pitchèd battle, iii. 126 ; pitch'd battle, v. 295 : "To understand this allusion ['pitch a field,' First Part of King Henry VI. act iii. sc. 1], it must be remembered that before beginning a battle it was customary for the archers and other footmen to encompass themselves with sharp stakes firmly pitched in the ground, to prevent their being overpowered by the cavalry. Thus, in a previous speech, act i. sc. 1,

'No leisure had he to enrank his men ;
He wanted pikes to set before his archers ;
Instead whereof, sharp stakes, pluck'd out of hedges,
They pitch'd in the ground confusedly,
To keep the horsemen off from breaking in'" (STAUNTON).

"pitch and pay," iv. 444 : A proverbial expression equivalent to "Pay down at once," "Pay on delivery" ("One of the old laws of Blackwell-hall was, that 'a penny be paid by the owner of every bale of cloth for pitching." FARMER ; who, as Nares in Gloss. observes, seems to suggest that the expression originated from pitching goods in a market, and paying immediately for their standing).

pitchers have ears, iii. 166 ; v. 391 : A proverbial saying : "It appears from A Dialogue both Pleasaunt and Pietifull, by William Bulleyn, 1564, that the old proverb is this, 'Small pitchers have great ears'" (MALONE).

piteously perform'd, vi. 340 : see note 139, vi. 375.

placket, iii. 483; vi. 37; plackets, ii. 187; iii. 473; vii. 301: Whether or not placket had originally an indelicate meaning (see Steevens's Amnerian note on King Lear, act iii. sc. 4) is more than I can determine. It has been very variously explained—a petticoat, an under-petticoat, a pocket attached to a petticoat, the slit or opening in a petticoat, and a stomacher; and it certainly was occasionally used to signify a female, as petticoat is now: "The term placket is still in use, in England and America, for a petticoat, and, in some of the provinces, for a shift, a slit in the petticoat, a pocket, &c." (HALLIWELL): "As to the word 'placket,' in 'An exact Chronologie of memorable things' in Wit's Interpreter, 3rd edit., 1671, it is said to be 'sixty-six years since maids began to wear plackets.' According to Middleton, the placket is 'the open part' of a petticoat; and the word is not altogether obsolete, since the opening in the petticoats of the present day is still called 'the placket hole,' in contradistinction to the pocket hole." Chappell's Popular Music of the Olden Time, &c. vol. ii. p. 518, sec. ed. (A writer of the age of Charles the Second uses plackets in the sense of aprons (perhaps of petticoats); "The word Love is a fig-leaf to cover the naked sense, a fashion brought up by Eve, the mother of jilts: she cuckolded her husband with the Serpent, then pretended to modesty, and fell a making plackets presently." Crowne's Sir Courtly Nice, act ii. p. 13, ed. 1685).

plague, a punishment: made her sin and her the plague, iv. 17.

 vii. 589.

platforms, plans, schemes, v. 24.

plats the manes of horses in the night—That very Mab That, vi. 403 :
 According to Douce, this “ alludes to a very singular superstition not yet forgotten in some parts of the country. It was believed that certain malignant spirits, whose delight was to wander in groves and pleasant places, assumed occasionally the likenesses of women clothed in white ; that in this character they sometimes haunted stables in the night-time, carrying in their hands tapers of wax, which they dropped on the horses' manes, thereby plaiting them in inextricable knots, to the great annoyance of the poor animals and vexation of their masters. These hags are mentioned in the works of William of Auvergne, bishop of Paris in the 13th century,” &c.

plausibly, by acclamation, viii. 340.

plausive, pleasing, taking : his plausive words, iii. 214 ; plausive please-man, an officious parasite, ii. 224.

"Please one, and please all"—As the very true sonnet is, iii. 368 : An allusion to "A prettie newe Ballad, intytuled : ●

The Crowe sits vpon the wall, Please one and please all ;"

which consists of seventeen seven-line stanzas, and is signed R. T. It was entered in the Stationers' Books, 18th Jan. 1591-2 : but if the initials R. T. stand for Richard Tarleton the actor (as they most probably do), the ballad must have been current before that period, since Tarleton was dead in 1588.

plighted, "complicated, involved" (JOHNSON) : plighted cunning, vii. 257.

plot—In this private, In this "sequestered spot of ground" (MALONE), v. 135.

powdered bawd, i. 485: Here powdered means subjected, for the cure of the venereal disease, to the process of sweating in a heated tub,—see tub, &c.: "as beef was also usually salted down, or powdered, in a tub, the one process was, by comic or satiric writers, jocularly compared to the other." Nares's Gloss. sub "Tub."

powdering-tub of infamy—The, iv. 436: see the preceding article, and tub, &c.

powers are crescent, and my auguring hope Says it will come to the full—My, vii. 513: This reading is perhaps defensible on the ground that our early writers appear sometimes to have applied it to a preceding plural substantive: but see note 39, vii. 604.

pox of that jest!—A, ii. 212: It may be well to observe that here by "pox" Katharine means the smallpox. (Compare, in a much later work;

"And with great care gives warrant by and by Unto his bailiffs, Fever, Pox, and Gout,

But Pox was nimblest; she got to her face,
And plow'd it up."

A Buckler agaynst the feare of Death, &c. by Benlowes, prefer my sons—I will, I will advance my sons, vii. 731.

preferred—Our play is, ii. 311: Here, as Steevens observes, preferred does not mean "chosen in preference to the others," but "given in among others for the Duke's option."

pregnancy, readiness of wit, iv. 324.

pregnant, "ready and knowing" (JOHNSON), "stored with information" (Nares's Gloss.): the terms For common justice, you're as pregnant in, &c. i. 445.

pregnant, "apprehensive, ready to understand" (Nares's Gloss.): your own most pregnant and vouchsafed ear, iii. 362.

pregnant, "full of force or conviction, or full of proof in itself" (Nares's Gloss.), plain, evident: 'Tis very pregnant, i. 457; a most pregnant and unforced position, vii. 401; 'Twere pregnant they should square, vii. 514; O, 'tis pregnant, pregnant! vii. 704.

pregnant, dexterous, ready: the pregnant ("ingenious, full of art or intelligence," Nares's Gloss.) enemy (the devil), iii. 345; How pregnant ("big with meaning," CALDECOTT) sometimes his replies are! vii. 137; The pregnant ("prepared, instructed," STEEVENS) instrument of wrath, viii. 45; the pregnant ("quick, ready, prompt," JOHNSON) hinges of the knee, vii. 154 (where Nares understands pregnant to mean "artful, designing, full of deceit," and Caldecott is pleased to say that "pregnant is bowed, swelled out, presenting themselves, as the form of pregnant animals").

prejudicial to his crown, "prejudicial to the prerogative of the crown" (STEEVENS), v. 239 ("An exposition in which he [Steevens] is certainly right, if by prerogative of the crown he mean its indefeasible hereditary descent," RITSON).

pride of France—The full, iv. 428; the pride of France, v. 43; the pride of Gallia, v. 62: In these passages Warburton rightly explains pride to mean "haughty power." (Mr. Collier is manifestly wrong when he supposes that in the second passage the allusion is to La Pucelle.)

pridge—I must speak with him from the, iv. 462: pridge, Fluellen's Welsh pronunciation of bridge: According to Theobald, "Fluellen, who comes from the bridge, wants to acquaint the king with the transactions that had happened there. This he calls speaking to the king from the bridge:" but the present passage is not in the quartos; and Malone suspects that the words "from the bridge [pridge]" were caught by the compositor from King Henry's first speech on his entrance.

prig, a thief, a pick-pocket, iii. 465.

prime, first, principal: my prime request, i. 190; no primer business ("no matter of state that more earnestly presses a despatch," Warburton), v. 493.

primero, i. 406; v. 555: A game at cards, which was very fashionable in Shakespeare's time, and which seems to have been (as Gifford observes, note on Jonson's Works, vol. ii. p. 31) "a very complicated amusement." I originally had cited here from Sir John Harington's Epigrams what he calls "The story of Marcus' life at Primero," consisting of forty-two lines: but it is such an obscure detail that I have substituted for it the following portion of Minshew's Pleasant and Delightfull Dialogues in Spanish and English, &c., 1599, from which I leave the reader to gather what he can concerning the game (The speakers are "five gentlemen friends, called Gusman, Rodricke, Sir Lorenço, Mendoça, Osorio a gentleman-vsher, and a Page [two Pages]"):

"O. Now to take away all occasion of strife, I will giue a meane, and let it be Primera. M. You haue saide very well, for it is a meane betweene extremes. L. I take it that it is called Primera because it hath the first place at the play at cardes. R. Let vs goe: what is the summe that we play for? M. Two shillings stake, and eight shillings rest. L. Then shuffle the cardes well. O. I lift to see who shall deale: it must be a coate card; I would not be a coat with neuer a blanke in my purse. R. I did lift an ace. L. I a fower. M. I a sixe, whereby I am the eldest hand. O. Let the cardes come to me, for I deale them; one, two, three, fower, one, two, three, fower. M. Passe. R. Passe. L. Passe. O. I set so much. M. I will none. R. Ile none. L. I must of force see it; deale the cards. M. Giue me fower cards; Ile see as much as he sets. R. See heere my rest; let euery one be in. M. I am come to passe againe. R. And I too. L. I do the selfe same. O. I set my rest. M. Ile see it. R. I also. L. I cannot giue it ouer. M. I was a small prime. L. I am flush. M. I would you were not. L. Is this good neighbourhood? M. Charitie well placed doth first beginne with ones selfe. O. I made five and fiftie, with which I win his prime. L. I flush, whereby I draw. R. I play no more at this play. M. Neither I at any other, for I must goe about a busines that concernes me. L. Pages, take euerie one two shillings a peece of the winnings. P. I pray God you may receiue it a hundred fold. P. In heauen I pray God you may finde it hanged on a hooke." pp. 26, 27.

provoking merit—A, vii. 304 : "Cornwall, I suppose, means the merit of Edmund, which, being noticed by Gloster, provoked or instigated Edgar to seek his father's death" (MALONE) : "Provoking here means stimulating; a merit he felt in himself, which irritated him against a father that had none" (MASON). .

prune himself, iv. 209; Prunes the immortal wing, vii. 718; pruning me, ii. 202 : To prune is a term of falconry, applied to other birds besides hawks, and metaphorically to a human being: a hawk prunes when she picks out damaged feathers, and arranges her plumage with her bill.

prune—A stewed, iv. 261; stewed prunes, i. 352, 459; iv. 344 : This was formerly a favourite dish, and it appears to have been very common in brothels: when, in the last of the passages above referred to, Doll Tearsheet says that Pistol lives upon mouldy stewed prunes and dried cakes, she means, observes Steevens, "he lives on the refuse provisions of bawdy-houses and pastry-cooks' shops." (In Maroccus Extaticus, &c. 1595, we find; "Roger and his Bettrice set up [a brothel] forsooth, with their pamphlet pots, and steeved prunes, nine for a tester, in a sinfull saucer," &c. p. 16. Percy Soc. reprint.)

Publius shall not live, Who is your sister's son, Mark Antony, vi. 663 : A mistake of the poet, as Upton has shown : the person meant, Lucius Cæsar, was uncle by the mother's side to Mark Antony.

Puck—As I'm an honest, ii. 323 : Here the speaker gives himself the epithet honest, because—as Tyrwhitt observes on the expression sweet Puck, earlier in this play—the word Puck alone "signified nothing better than fend or devil."

pudency, modesty, vii. 670.

pugging, priggish, thieving, iii. 463.

puke-stocking, iv. 234 : Here puke most probably means "dark-coloured" (perhaps equivalent to puce) : that it describes the material of the stocking (or hose) is less likely.

pulsidge, the Hostess's corruption of pulse, iv. 341.

pump well-flowered—Then is my, vi. 419 : "The fundamental idea is, that Romeo wore pinked pumps, that is, punched with holes in figures" (JOHNSON); to which note Steevens adds, "See the shoes of the morris-dancers in the plate [from Tollet's painted window, where the figures marked 4 and 10 have pinked shoes] at the conclusion of The First Part of King Henry IV. [Malone's Shakespeare by Boswell, vol. xvi.];" and he then observes, "It was the custom to wear ribbons in the shoes formed into the shape of roses, or of any other flowers."

pun, to pound, to beat, vi. 28.

punto (Ital. punta), a thrust, a stroke (a fencing-term), i. 373.

punto reverso (Ital. punta riversa), a back-handed thrust or stroke (a fencing-term), vi. 418.

purchase, gain, profit, advantage : The purchase is to make men glorious, viii. 5.

purchase, a cant term for stolen goods, booty : thou shalt have a share in our purchase, iv. 226 ; They will steal any thing, and call it purchase, iv. 452 ; Made prize and purchase (booty) of his wanton eye, v. 414.

purchase—After fourteen years', iii. 378 : The meaning must be—After the rate of fourteen years' purchase—at an excessive price. Perhaps in Shakespeare's time the current value of land was fourteen years' purchase.

purchas'd, obtained by unfair means: for what in me was purchas'd, Falls upon thee in a more fairer sort, iv. 385: see the preceding article but one, and note 94, iv. 414.

purchas'd—Hereditary, Rather than, Hereditary, rather than "procured by his own fault or endeavour" (JOHNSON), vii. 508.

puritan amongst them, and he sings psalms to hornpipes—But one, iii. 464: "An allusion to a practice, common at this time among the puritans, of burlesquing the plein chant of the papists, by adapting vulgar and ludicrous music to psalms and pious compositions" (DOUCE).

purples—Long, vii. 191: "This is the early purple orchis (Orchis mascula), which blossoms in April and May; it grows in meadows and pastures, and is about ten inches high; the flowers are purple, numerous, and in long spikes. The poet refers to another name by which this flower was called by liberal shepherds, and says that 'Cold maids did [do] dead men's fingers call them.'

From this I consider that the cold maids mistook one of the other orchids, having palmated roots, for long purples. The Orchis mascula has two bulbs, and is in many parts of England called by a name that liberal shepherds used, and which is found in the herbals of Shakspeare's time. The spotted palmate orchis (Orchis maculata) and the marsh orchis (Orchis latifolia) have palmated roots, and are called 'dead men's fingers,' which they somewhat resemble." Beisly's Shakspeare's Garden, &c. p. 160.

pursuivants of death—The, "The heralds that, forerunning death, proclaim its approach" (JOHNSON), v. 33.

purveyor, vii. 17: "The duty of the purveyor, an officer belonging to the court, was to make a general provision for the royal household. It was the office also of this person to travel before the king whenever he made his progresses to different parts of the realm, and to see that every thing was duly provided" (DOUCE).

push, an exclamation, equivalent to pish: And made a push at chance and sufferance, ii. 130; Push! did you see my cap? vi. 547 (Compare "Push, meet me." The Tryall of Cheualry, 1605, sig. c 4 verso: "Push, ile bee all obseruatiue." Euerie Woman in her Humor, 1609, sig. E 2 verso: "Vncle, you that make a pish at the black art," &c. Day's Law Trickes, 1608, sig. I 2 verso).

put on, to instigate: the powers above Put on their instruments, vii. 60; We'll put on those shall praise your excellence, vii. 190; deaths put on ("instigated, produced," MALONE) by cunning, vii. 211; had he been put on (put forward, put to the trial), ibid.; put it on By your allowance, vii. 269; 'Tis they have put him on the old man's death, vii. 277; I never Had liv'd to put on this, vii. 710; put on the vouch of very malice itself, vii. 399 ; this unwonted putting on, i. 497 ; but by our putting on, vi. 178 ; stand the putting on, vii. 403.

putter-on, an instigator, iii. 438 ; v. 492.

putter-out of one for five—Each, i. 216 : putter-out was a term for a person who, when going abroad was much in fashion, put out a sum of money on condition of receiving great interest for it at his return home ; if he never returned, the deposit was forfeited : “ So, in The Scourge of Folly, by J. Davies of Hereford, printed about the year 1611, ‘ Sir Solus straight will travel, as they say,

And gives out one for three, when home comes he.’

It appears from Moryson's Itinerary, 1617, Part I. p. 198, that ‘ this custom of giving out money upon these adventures was first used in court and among noblemen ;’ and that some years before his book was published, ‘ bankerouts, stage-players, and men of base condition had drawn it into contempt’ by undertaking journeys merely for gain upon their return” (MALONE) : “ In the present passage, Mr. Staunton defends the reading of the folio, ‘ Each putter out of five for one,’ by a quotation from the opening of Cartwright's Ordinary, ‘ I'd put out moneys of being Mayor,’ ‘ of being commonly used by Shakespeare and his contemporaries for on.’ But, granting this, what does the quotation prove ? Why, that it is good Elizabethan English to talk of putting out moneys of or on the chance of an event taking place. This does not warrant such a phrase as putting out moneys on five for one, or on one for five. We might as well maintain that because we talk of betting on a horse, we may properly talk of betting on five to one ; and even because we talk of lending money, we might talk of lending interest” (W. N. LETTSOM) : And see note 38, i. 249.

puttock, a kite, v. 158 ; vi. 82 ; vii. 639.

puzzel, a foul drab (“ From puzza, i. e. malus foetor, says Minsheu,” TOLLET), v. 20.

quilt, a flock-bed : how now, quilt! iv. 268.

quintain, iii. 15 : "Tilting or combating at the quintain is certainly a military exercise of high antiquity, and antecedent, I doubt not, to the justs and tournaments. The quintain originally was nothing more than the trunk of a tree or post set up for the practice of the tyros in chivalry. Afterward a staff or spear was fixed in the earth, and a shield, being hung upon it, was the mark to strike at : the dexterity of the performer consisted in smiting the shield in such a manner as to break the ligatures and bear it to the ground. In process of time this diversion was improved, and instead of the staff and the shield, the resemblance of a human figure carved in wood was introduced. To render the appearance of this figure more formidable, it was generally made in the likeness of a Turk or a Saracen armed at all points, bearing a shield upon his left arm, and brandishing a club or a sabre with his right. The quintain thus fashioned was placed upon a pivot, and so contrived as to move round with facility. In running at this figure it was necessary for the horseman to direct his lance with great adroitness, and make his stroke upon the forehead between the eyes or upon the nose ; for if he struck wide of those parts, especially upon the shield, the quintain turned about with much velocity, and, in case he was not exceedingly careful, would give him a severe blow upon the back with the wooden sabre held in the right hand, which was considered as highly disgraceful to the performer, while it excited the laughter and ridicule of the spectators." Strutt's Sports and Pastimes, &c. p. 104, sec. ed. : There were other sorts of quintains ; but the words of Orlando, "a quintain, a mere lifeless block," seem to show that Shakespeare alludes to the kind above described.

quip, a sharp retort, a taunt, a repartee, iii. 73 ; quips, i. 306, 354 ; ii. 102 ; iv. 211.

quire, a company, an assembly : the whole quire hold their hips and loff, ii. 276.

quit, to acquit: But, for those earthly faults, I quit them all, i. 520; Till thou canst quit thee, iii. 36; Though yet he never harm'd me, here I quit him, iii. 285; God quit you in his mercy! iv. 442.

quit, to requite, to retaliate, to avenge: to quit their griefs ("to retaliate their mournful stories," JOHNSON), iv. 167; I sall quit you with gude leve ("I shall, with your permission, requite you, that is, answer you, or interpose with my arguments," JOHNSON), iv. 453; Unless the Lady Bona quit his pain, v. 284; Your children's children quit it in your age, v. 450; To be full quit of those my banishers, vi. 208; To quit her bloody wrongs upon her foes, vi. 287; To quit him with this arm, vii. 202; Or quit in answer of the third exchange, vii. 207; To quit this horrid act, vii. 311; God quit you, vii. 560; As he shall like, to quit me ("to repay me this insult," JOHNSON), vii. 561; Then I shall quit you, viii. 169; Than I can quit or speak of, viii. 207; your evil quits you well, i. 520.

quit, to set free, to release: God safely quit her of her burden, v. 557.

quit, quitted: the very rats instinctively had quit it, i. 181; and quit the vessel, i. 183; took such sorrow, That he quit being, vii. 636.

quittance, an acquittance, a release, a discharge: bill, warrant, quittance, or obligation, i. 345; omittance is no quittance, iii. 54.

quittance, a requital: Rendering faint quittance ("return of blows," STEEVENS), iv. 317; quittance of desert and merit, iv. 439; All use of quittance ("All the customary returns made in discharge of obligations," WARBURTON), vi. 515.

quittance, to requite: As fitting best to quittance their deceit, v. 23 ("Oh, quoth hee, shall I be so ingrate as to quittance affection with fraude?" Greene's Neuer too late, First Part, sig. II 2, ed. 1611).

quiver, nimble, agile, active: there was a little quiver fellow, iv. 361.

quoif, a cap, iv. 318; quoifs, iii. 472.

quote, to note, to mark,—formerly pronounced, and often written, cote; hence the quibble (quote=coat) in the first of the following passages: And how quote you my folly? Val. I quote it in your jerkin, i. 280; His face's own margin did quote such amazes, ii. 182; We did not quote them so, ii. 232; What curious eye doth quote deformities? vi. 401; Will quote my loathsome trespass in my looks, viii. 310; Her amber hairs for foul have amber quoted (Her amber hairs have noted or marked amber for ugly), ii. 199; He's quoted for a most perfidious slave, iii. 282; Quoted, and sign'd, to do a deed of shame, iv. 56; And quoted joint by joint, vi. 78; I had not quoted him, vii. 181; how she quotes the leaves, vi. 324.

R.

R is for the dog, vi. 423 : Even in the days of the Romans, R was called the dog's letter from its resemblance in sound to the snarling of a dog : Lucilius alludes to it in a fragment, which is quoted with various corruptions by Nonius Marcellus, Charisius, and Donatus on Terence, and which Joseph Scaliger amended thus,

"Irritate canes quod, homo quàm, planiu' dicit"

("canes" being the nom. sing. fem.); and Persius has

"Sonat hic de nare canina Litera."

Sat. i. 109 :

Ben Jonson, in his English Grammar, says that R "Is the dog's letter, and hurreth in the sound ; the tongue striking the inner palate, with a trembling about the teeth." Works, vol. ix. p. 281, ed. Gifford : and various passages to the same effect might be cited from our early authors.

rabato, a kind of ruff or band (Fr. rabat), ii. 114 : "Menage saith it comes from rabbattre, to put back, because it was at first nothing but the collar of the shirt or shift turned back towards the shoulders" (T. HAWKINS).

rabbit-sucker, a sucking rabbit, iv. 243.

rabble, a band of inferior spirits : Go bring the rabble, i. 219 (Compare Ford : "the duke's grace, and the duchess' grace, and my Lord • Fernando's grace, with all the rabble of courtiers," &c. Love's Sacrifice, act ii. sc. 1).

rale, rabble (so written for the rhyme), viii. 166.

race, inborn quality, disposition, nature : thy vile race, i. 188 ; my sensual race, i. 476.

race of heaven—None our parts so poor But was a, vii. 506 : Here Warburton (with the approbation of Johnson) interprets was a race of heaven by "had a smack or flavour of heaven ;" while Malone is "not sure that the poet did not mean 'was of heavenly origin.'" race or two of ginger—A, iii. 464 ; two races of ginger, iv. 224 ; "Raze of ginger ; Theobald pretends that this differs from race of ginger, which means only a root, whereas this means a bale or package. . . . I cannot believe that the words are really different. Both must be derived from the Spanish rayz, meaning a root, and might be applied indifferently to small pieces or large packages." Nares's Gloss.

rack, a mass of vapoury clouds : the rack stand still, vii. 144 ; That . . . the rack dislimns, vii. 576 ; With ugly rack on his celestial face, viii. 365 ("The winds in the upper region, which move the clouds above (which we call the rack)," &c. Bacon's Sylva Sylvarum, or A Naturall Historie, § 115, p. 32, ed. 1658 : Rack, as Horne Tooke first observed, is properly—vapour, steam, exhalation.

tion (that which is reeked) : see Richardson's Dict. in v. : see too note 106 on The Tempest, i. 253).

rack, to move like vapour (see the preceding article) : the racking clouds, v. 252.

rack, to exaggerate : then we rack the value, ii. 124.

rag, a term of contempt,—a ragamuffin : Away, thou rag, iii. 162 ; Thou rag of honour, v. 369 ; that poor rag, vi. 558 ; rags of France, v. 452.

ragged, broken, unequal,—rough : My voice is ragged, iii. 28 ; winter's ragged hand, viii. 352 ; The raggedst (roughest) Jour, iv. 318.

ragged, beggarly, base, ignominious : A ragged and forestall'd remission, iv. 390 (see forestall'd, &c.) ; a ragged name, viii. 312.

raging-wood, raging-mad, v. 64 : see wood.

rake, to cover : Here, in the sands, Thee I'll rake up, vii. 329.

rakes—Ere we become, vi. 135 : Here, of course, the quibbling Citizen alludes to the proverb, "As lean as a rake."

rampallian, iv. 331 : This term of low abuse may mean, according to Steevens, "a ramping riotous strumpet," according to Nares (in Gloss.) "one who associates with rampes or prostitutes."

rang'd empire—The wide arch Of the, vii. 498 : "What in ancient masons' or bricklayers' work was denominated a range is now called a course" (STEEVENS) : "rang'd, meaning—orderly rang'd ; whose parts are now entire and distinct, like a number of well-built edifices" (CAPELL).

rank, a row : The rank of osiers, iii. 63.

rank to market—It is the right butter-woman's, iii. 38 : see note 80, iii. 89 (In a note on these words Mr. Staunton observes, "From a passage in Drayton's poem, 'The Shepherd's Sirena,' it might be inferred that 'rank' was a familiar term for chorus or rhyme ; •

' On thy bank,
In a rank,
Let thy swans sing her : ' "

but by "rank" Drayton assuredly means "row").

rank, exuberant, grown to great height : what, so rank? ("what, was he advanced to this pitch?" JOHNSON), v. 497 ; rank Achilles, vi. 25 ; who else is rank? ("who else may be supposed to have overtopped his equals, and grown too high for the public safety," JOHNSON ; but here Malone, wrongly, I believe, would understand rank as "replete with blood"), vi. 651 ; Rain added to a river that is rank (brimful), viii. 241 ; A ranker rate, vii. 178.

rank, gross : in the rank garb, vii. 403 ; speeches rank, viii. 448.

rarely base, "base in an uncommon degree" (STEEVENS), vii. 591.

rascal, a deer lean and out of season: the noblest deer hath them as huge as the rascal, iii. 48; Come, you thin thing; come, you rascal, iv. 398; Not rascal-like, v. 57; Thou rascal, that art worst in blood to run, vi. 139 (a rather difficult passage; see note 13, vi. 241); You make fat rascals, Mistress Doll, iv. 341.

rash, quick, hasty, sudden, violent: no rash potion, iii. 429; His rash fierce blaze of riot, iv. 123; rash gunpowder, iv. 378; My matter is so rash, vi. 65; too rash, too unadvis'd, vi. 413; so startlingly and rash, vii. 432.

rat, Irish: see Irish rat, &c.

rat without a tail—A, vii. 8: "It should be remembered (for it was the belief of the times) that though a witch could assume the form of any animal she pleased, the tail would still be wanting. The reason given by some of the old writers for such a deficiency is, that though the hands and feet, by an easy change, might be converted into the four paws of a beast, there was still no part about a woman which corresponded with the length of tail common to almost all our four-footed creatures" (STEEVENS).

rated from the heart—Affection is not, Affection is not driven out of the heart by chiding, iii. 118.

rated sinew—A, "A strength on which we reckoned, a help of which we made account" (JOHNSON), iv. 273.

respective, "respectful, formal" (STEEVENS), "mindful, considerate" (STAUNTON): 'Tis too respective and too sociable For your conversion (for a person who has lately been changed from a private gentleman to a knight), iv. 10 (where conversion is explained by Mr. Halliwell "conversation").

respective, worthy of regard or respect, respectable: But I can make respective in myself, i. 316.

respective, regardful, considerate: You should have been respective, ii. 412; respective lenity ("cool, considerate gentleness," MALONE), vi. 430.

respectively, respectfully, vi. 531 (Not obsolete in this sense during the last century; "She bow'd to me very respectively." Defoe's Colonel Jack, p. 241, ed. 1738).

respite of my wrongs—The determin'd, v. 441: "That is, the time to which the punishment for his wrongs was respited" (HANMER): "Wrongs in this line means wrongs done or injurious practices" (JOHNSON).

rest—To set up one's, meaning that the speaker is perfectly determined on a thing, is "a metaphor taken from play, where the highest stake the parties were disposed to venture was called the rest. To appropriate this term to any particular game, as is sometimes done, is extremely incorrect." Gifford's note on Massinger's Works, vol. ii. p. 21, ed. 1813: I have set up my rest to run away, ii. 362; Since you set up your rest 'gainst remedy, iii. 226; The County Paris hath set up his rest, vi. 457; Will I set up my everlasting rest, vi. 468; he that sets up his rest (with a quibble on the word rest = arrest), ii. 36; that is my rest, iv. 435. (And see the quotation from Minshew's Dialogues, under primero.)

re-stem, "to stem or steer the stem back again, (sc.) against tide or current" (Richardson's Dict.), vii. 385.

restful, quiet, peaceful, iv. 157 (Nares, in his Gloss., calls this "an uncommon word:" but I find it in Coles's Lat. and Engl. Dict.; "Restful, Otiosus, quietus").

resty, torpid, idle ("Resty, piger, lentus." Coles's Lat. and Engl. Dict.), vii. 690 (where, according to some critics, it means "uneasy"); viii. 399.

retail, "to recount" (MALONE): "I will retail my conquest won," v. 433; retail'd to all posterity, v. 394.

retention could not so much hold—That poor, viii. 410: "That poor retention is the table-book given to him by his friend, incapable of retaining, or rather of containing, so much as the tablet of the brain" (MALONE).

retire, a retreat: make their retire, ii. 181; a blessed and unwev'd retire, iv. 19; retire of both your armies, iv. 21; a sweet retire, iv. 482; his scandal of retire, v. 256; Beckoning with fiery truncheon my retire, vi. 91; Thou dost miscall retire, vi. 93; a retire upon our Grecian part, vi. 98; Of sallies and retires, iv. 230.

retire, to withdraw, to draw back: And thence retire me to my Milan, i. 235; you must retire yourself Into some covert, iii. 484; The French fight coldly, and retire themselves, iv. 69; give me leave to retire myself, vi. 145; Retire thee, vii. 413; That he, our hope, might have retir'd his power, iv. 132; retired himself to Italy, iv. 159; I have retir'd me to a wasteful cock, vi. 529; Each one by him enforc'd, retires his ward, viii. 296.

retiring minute in an age—One poor, viii. 314: According to Malone, "retiring here signifies returning, coming back again."

return, to return notice to, to make known to: While we return these dukes what we decree, iv. 116; Return them, we are ready, viii. 25.

return so much—You have bid me, vi. 528; Here by so much "he does not mean so great a sum, but a certain sum, as it might happen to be" (MALONE).

reverberate, reverberating, iii. 341.

reverbs, reverberates, vii. 253.

reverse, a fencing term: thy reverse, i. 373: see punto reverso, &c.

revives us—Time, iii. 271: Here Steevens explains revives by "rouses:" but see note 183, iii. 316.

revolts, revolters, rebels, iv. 68, 70; vii. 708.

re-word, to repeat in the same words: I the matter will re-word, vii. 171.

re-word, to re-echo: whose concave womb re-worded A plaintful story, viii. 439.

rheumatic, splenetic, humorsome, peevish: as rheumatic as two dry toasts ("which cannot meet but they grate one another," JOHNSON), iv. 342; then he was rheumatic, iv. 444 (where Malone suggests that the Hostess may mean "then he was lunatic").

Rhodope's of Memphis—Than, v. 22: see note 56, v. 89.

Rialto—The, ii. 353, 354, 356, 377, 378: The Rialto—said to be so named from riva alta—is one of the largest of the islands on which Venice is built, and the first where the foundations of the city were laid: but Shakespeare alludes to the Exchange in the Rialto, described as follows by Coryat; "The Rialto, which is at the farther side of the bridge as you come from St. Marks, is a most stately building, being the Exchange of Venice, where the Venetian gentlemen and the merchants doe meete twice a day, betwixt eleuen and twelue of the clocke in the morning, and betwixt fve and sixe of the clocke in the afternoone. This Rialto is of a goodly height, built all with bricke as the palaces are, adorned with many faire walkes or open gallerie that I haue before mentioned, and hath a pretie quadrangular court adioyning to it. But it is inferiour to our Exchange in London, though indeede there is a farre greater quantity of building in this then in ours." Coryat's Crudities, &c. (reprinted from ed. 1611), vol. i. p. 211: "Rialto is the name, not of the bridge, but of the island from which it is called; and the Venetians say il ponte di Rialto, as we say Westminster-bridge. In that island is the exchange; and I have often walked there as on classic ground. In the days of Antonio and Bassanio it was second to none. 'I sottoportichi,' says Sansovino, writing in 1580, 'sono ogni giorno frequentati da i mercatanti Fiorentini, Genovesi, Milanesi, Spagnuoli, Turchi, e d' altre nationi diverse del mondo, i quali vi concorrono in tanta copia, che questa piazza è annoverata fra le prime dell' universo.' It was there that the Christian held discourse with the Jew; and Shylock refers to it, when he says,

'Signor Antonio, many a time and oft,
In the Rialto, you have rated me;'

'Andiamo a Rialto'—'L' ora di Rialto'—were on every tongue; and continue so to the present day, as we learn from the comedies of Goldoni, and particularly from his Mercanti." Note on Rogers's Italy, p. 254, ed. 1830.

rib, to "enclose, as the ribs enclose the viscera" (STEEVENS): Torib her cerecloth, ii. 371; ribbed and palèd in, vii. 672.

ribaudred nag, lewd strumpet, vii. 552: and see note 121, vii. 615.

Richard, that robb'd the lion of his heart, iv. 13; Nor keep his princely heart from Richard's hand, iv. 12: "Shakespeare here alludes to the old metrical romance of Richard Cœur-de-lion, wherein this once celebrated monarch is related to have acquired his distinguishing appellation by having plucked out a lion's heart, to whose fury he was exposed by the Duke of Austria, for having slain his son with a blow of his fist. From this ancient romance the story has crept into some of our old chronicles : but the original passage may be seen at large in the Introduction to the Third Volume of Reliques of Ancient English Poetry (PERCY) : "Rastell, in his Chronicle, makes mention of this memorable action in the following words ; 'It is sayd that a lyon was put to Kynge Rycharde, beynge in prison, to have devoured hym, and when the lyon was gapyng, he put his arme in his mouthe, and pulled the lyon by the harte so harde, that he slewe the lyon ; and therefore some say he is called Rycharde Cure de Lyon ; but some say he is called Cure de Lyon because of his boldenesse and hardy stomake'" [Sig. B ii verso] (GREY).

Richard . . . By this brave duke came early to his grave, iv. 13 : "The old play [The Troublesome Raigne of Iohn, &c., see vol. iv. 3] led Shakespeare into this error of ascribing to the Duke of Austria the death of Richard, who lost his life at the siege of Chaluz, long after he had been ransomed out of Austria's power" (STEEVENS) : "The producing Austria on the scene is also contrary to the truth of history, into which anachronism our author was led by the old play. Leopold, Duke of Austria, by whom Richard I. had been thrown into prison in 1193, died, in consequence of a fall from his horse, in 1195, some years before the commencement of the present play" (MALONE) : and see Limoges ! &c.

rich'd, enriched, vii. 251.

rid, to dispatch, to get rid of : willingness rids way, v. 311 ("Con quanta furia spacciava il cammino."

Pulci, Morgante Mag. C. vi. 42).

rid, to destroy : The red plague rid you, i. 188 ; will rid his foe, iv. 177 ; you have rid this sweet young prince, v. 315

("The Day-reducing Chariot of the Sun

Stops instantly, and gives the Hebrews space To rid the Pagans that they have in chase."

Sylvester's Du Bartas, The Captaines, p. 184, ed. 1641 ; where the original has "exterminer").

ride the mare—To : see mare—To ride the.

riggish, wanton, vii. 522.

right in thine eye, direct, immediate, in thine eye, iv. 71 : see note 137, iv. 97.

right—Your nose says, no, you are not ; for it stands too, ii. 227 : "It should be remembered, that the head of Alexander was obliquely placed on his shoulders" (STEEVENS).

right now, "just now, even now" (JOHNSON), v. 154.

right-drawn sword, sword drawn in a just cause, iv. 106.

rightly gaz'd upon, directly gazed upon, iv. 131.

rights of memory in this kingdom—I have some, I have some rights "borne in memory, not forgotten [in this kingdom], and thence to have effect given them" (CALDECOTT), vii. 211.

rigol, a circle, a round (Ital. rigolo), iv. 381 ; viii. 337 : and see note 16, viii. 343.

rim out at thy throat—I will fetch thy, iv. 483 : Malone refers to Coles's Lat. and Engl. Dict., which gives "The inner rim of the belly, Peritonæum;" and Steevens cites Philemon Holland and Chapman for "rim" in the same sense. Pistol, however, evidently uses the term as equivalent to entrails (I cannot but wonder at Mr. Staunton's remark, that "Pistol's rim was perhaps, as Mr.
Knight conjectured, no more than a word coined for the nonce, in mimicry of the Frenchman's guttural pronunciation").

ring—He that runs fastest gets the, iii. 117 : "An allusion to the sport of running at the ring" (DOUCE) : "Rather, to the sport of running for the ring. A ring was one of the prizes formerly given in wrestling and running matches" (STAUNTON).

ring-time, time for marriage, iii. 71.

Ringwood, a common name for a dog, i. 362.

ripe, to ripen : ripe not to reason, ii. 285 ; we ripe and ripe, iii. 31 ;
no sun to ripe The bloom, iv. 25.

ripe wants, "wants come to the height, wants that can have no longer delay" (JOHNSON), ii. 355.

ripeness is all, "to be ready, prepared, is all" (STEEVENS ; who compares "the readiness is all," Hamlet, act v. sc. 2), viii. 335.

riping of the time—The very, The very ripeness, maturity of the time, ii. 373.

rivage, a bank, a shore, iv. 449.

rivalry, participation, equality, of rank, vii. 544.

rivall'd for our daughter—Hath, Hath been competitor for our daughter, vii. 254.

rivals, partners, associates : The rivals of my watch, vii. 103.

rive their dangerous artillery—To, v. 56 : "To rive their artillery means only to fire their artillery. To rive is to burst ; and a cannon, when fired, has so much the appearance of bursting, that, in the language of poetry, it may be well said to burst. We say, a cloud bursts, when it thunders" (MASON).

rivets up—Closing, iv. 468 : "This does not solely refer to the business of rivetting the plate-armour before it was put on, but as to part, when it was on. Thus the top of the cuirass had a little projecting bit of iron, that passed through a hole pierced through the bottom of the casque. When both were put on, the owner or armourer presented himself, with his rivetting hammer, to close the great up; so that the party's head should remain steady notwithstanding the force of any blow that might be given on the cuirass or helmet. This custom more particularly prevailed in tournaments: see Variétés Historiques, 1752, 12mo, tom. ii. p. 73" (Deuce).

"rivo," says the drunkard, iv. 235: This Bacchanalian exclamation is not uncommon in our old writers; but its origin is quite uncertain: Gifford suggests (not very probably) that it is "corrupted perhaps from the Spanish rio, which is figuratively used for a large quantity of liquor." Note on Massinger's Works, vol. ii. p. 167, ed. 1813 (In Marlowe's Jew of Malta we find "Hey, Rivo Castillano!" Works, p. 172. ed. Dyce, 1858; and in Day's Law-Trickes, 1608, "Rivo, He bee singuler; my royall expence shall run such a circular course," &c. Sig. F 3).

road, a roadstead, a haven: my father at the road Expects my coming, i. 264; I must unto the road, i. 285; post to the road, ii. 29; my ships Are safely come to road, ii. 415; Marseilles' road, iii. 138, piers, and roads, ii. 345.

road, a journey: with easy roads ("by short stages," STEEVENS) he came to Leicester, v. 549.

road, an inroad: make road upon us, iv. 428; make road Upon again, vi. 179.

road—This Doll Tearsheet should be some, iv. 338. Here road is evidently the cant term for a prostitute; but the word, I believe, is not found elsewhere in this sense. (Compare, however, the following passage;

"Sister. Alas,

What course is left for vs to live by, then?

Thomas In troth, sister, we two to beg in the fields,
And you to betake yourselfe to the old trade, Filling of small cannes in the suburbes.

Sister Shall I be left, then, like a common road,
That euery beast that can but pay his tole
May tranell ouer, and, like to cammomile, Flourish the better being trodden on?"

Wilkins's Miseries of Incontinent Marriage, sig. E 4 verso, ed. 1629)

Robin Hood's fat friar, Friar Tuck, who is so celebrated in the old Robin Hood ballads (to say nothing of Sir Walter Scott's Ivanhoe), i. 304.

Robin ostler, Robin the ostler, iv. 224: Compare William cook.

rogues, wandering beggars, vagrants: rogues forlorn, vii. 331.

roisting, bullying, defying, vi. 36.

romage, "tumultuous hurry" (JOHNSON), vii. 106: "Romage Only another way of writing rummage, which is still common as a verb, though not perhaps as a substantive; tumultuous movement." Nares's Gloss. in v.; see, too, Richardson's Dict. sub "Rummage or Roomage" (Caldacott would establish a connection between the present word romage and "Romelynge" in the Promptorium Parvulorum: and Mr. Halliwell approvingly cites his note).

Roman fool—The, perhaps Cato Uticensis, vii. 70.

Roman sworder and banditto slave—A, "Herennius, a centurion, and Popilius Lænas, tribune of the soldiers" (STEEVENS), v. 168.

Rome, pronounced Room: That I have room with Rome to curse awhile! iv. 33; Now is it Rome indeed, and room enough, vi. 621 (Compare "To whome though Rome for harbour be deny'd, Yet hath he room in all the world beside."

The Tragedie of Claudius Tiberius Nero, 1607, sig. F verso:

"Mausolus' stately Tomb,
The Walls and Courts of Babylon and Rome."

Sylvester's Du Bartas, The Colonies, p. 180, ed. 1641:

"We must haue *room*e, more then the whole City of Rome." Hawkins's Apollo Shroving, acted at Hadleigh School in 1626-7, p. 88: The different pronunciation in The First Part of King Henry VI., This Rome shall remedy. War. Roam thither, then, v. 38, may perhaps be considered as one of the proofs that Shakespeare was not the author of that play).

Romish, Roman, vii. 655.

rondure, a round, a belt, a circle (Fr. rondeur), iv. 19; viii. 359.

ronyon, a mangy, scabby creature (Fr. rogneux), i. 399; vii. 8.

rood—The, The cross, the crucifix, iv. 355; v. 400, 429; vi. 399; vii. 167 (It would appear that, at least in earlier times, the rood signified not merely the cross, but the image of Christ on the cross).

roof, house: within this roof The enemy of all your graces lives, iii. 23 ("Mr. Collier's Ms. Corrector very erroneously reads 'beneath this roof.'—Compare

'He answer'd him; Ile tell all strictly true,
If time, and foode, and wine enough accrue Within your roofe to vs,' &c.

Chapman's Odyssey, B. xiv. p. 216, ed. folio.

'Minerua, who in Joues high roofe, that beares the rough shield,' &c.
Chapman's Iliad, B. i. p. 6").

rook'd, squatted down, lodged, roasted, v. 317.

rooky wood, vii. 37: see note 61, vii. 85 (My friend the late Dr. Richardson was very unhappy in his suggestion that in this passage "Rooky seems to be merely rooking, i.e. covering, protecting, sheltering." Dict. sub "Rock").

rope! a rope!—I cry, a: see parrot, "Beware," &c.

ropery, roguery, vi. 421: see the next article.

rope-tricks—He'll rail in his, iii. 123: Rope-tricks, such as deserve the rope, the same as ropery,—roguery: "Ropery or rope-tricks originally signified abusive language, without any determinate idea; such language as parrots are taught to speak" (MALONE): Some critics suppose that here Grumio either confounds rope-tricks with rhetoric, or plays on the semblance of the words.

rose—That in mine ear I durst not stick a, iv. 9: see three-farthings goes, &c.

Rose, within the parish Saint Lawrence Poultney—The, v. 496: The Rose is "'The Manor of the Rose,' of which a crypt remains between Duck's-foot-lane and Merchant Tailors' School," &c. Cunningham's Handbook for London, sub "Lawrence (St.) Poultney."

rosemary remembrance, iii. 468; Doth not rosemary and Romeo begin both with a letter? vi. 423; she hath the prettiest sententious of it, of you and rosemary, ibid.; stick your rosemary On this fair corse, vi. 459; There's rosemary, that's for remembrance, vii. 184 (where Ophelia seems to be addressing Laertes): Rosemary was formerly supposed to strengthen the memory; hence it was regarded as a symbol of remembrance—

"He from his lasse him lauander hath sent, Shewing her loue, and doth requitall craue;
Him rosemary his sweet-heart, whose intent Is that he her should in remembrance haue."

Drayton's Ninth Eglogue— and it was used both at weddings and at funerals.

rosemary and bays!—My dish of chastity with, viii. 60: "Anciently many dishes were served up with this garniture, during the season of Christmas. The Bawd means to call her a piece of ostentatious virtue" (STEEVENS).

roses on my razed shoes—Two Provincial: see Provincial roses, &c.

rother, a horned beast, vi. 550 ("Rother-Beasts (N.C.), horned Beasts; as Cows, Oxen; &c."—"Rother-soil or Rosech, the Soil or Dung of such Cattel." Kersey's Dict. sec. ed.).

Rouge-mont, v. 422: "Hooker, who wrote in Queen Elizabeth's time, in his description of Exeter mentions this as a 'very old and ancient castle, named Rugemont; that is to say, the Red Hill, taking that name of the red soil or earth whereupon it is situated'" (REED).

round, a dance in a circle with joined hands: dance in our round, ii. 278; your antic round, vii. 49.

round, a diadem: the golden round, vii. 15; the round And top of sovereignty, vii. 48.

round, plain-spoken, unceremonious: Am I so round with you as you with me (with a quibble,—spherical), ii. 14; I must be round with you, iii. 348; Your reproof is something too round, iv. 474; I must be round with him, vi. 524; let her be round with him, vii. 152; Pray you, be round with him, vii. 167.

round, roundly, unceremoniously, without reserve: I went round to work, vii. 135.

round, to surround: that must round my brow, v. 418; rounds thine eye, iii. 219; That rounds the mortal temples of a king, iv. 146.

round, to grow round: your mother rounds apace, iii. 434.

round, to whisper: rounded in the ear, iv. 28; whispering, rounding, iii. 427 ("To round one in the eare. S'accouter à l'oreille, s'accouter." Cotgrave's Fr. and Engl. Dict.: Other poets, besides Shakespeare, use in the same sentence whisper and round,—see my note on Skelton's Works, vol. ii. p. 120; but, I apprehend, it would not be easy to show wherein the difference of the meaning of the two words consists: in the following couple of stage-directions they were manifestly intended to be synonymous; "He roundeth with Frescobaldi" . . . "He whispereth with Cæsar." Barnes's Devils Charter, 1607, sig. E 4).

round hose, round swelling breeches, trunk hose, ii. 351.

roundel, a dance (the same as round,—see first round), ii. 281 (It also meant a song; but the context shows that here it is used to signify a dance).

rouse, a large draught, a bumper, a carouse: the king's rouse, vii. 111; takes his rouse, vii. 119; o'ertook in's rouse, vii. 129; given me a rouse, vii. 405 (According to Gifford, "A rouse was a large glass ('not past a pint,' as Iago says) in which a health was given, the drinking of which by the rest of the company formed a carouse. . . . In process of time both these words were used in a laxer sense." Note on Massinger's Works, vol. i. p. 240, ed. 1813: Compare

"Where slightly passing by the Thespian spring, Many long after did but onely sup;
Nature, then fruitful, forth these men did bring,
To fetch deepe rowsses from Joves plentiful cup."

Drayton's Verses prefixed to Chapman's Hesiod, 1618).

rout, a company, a multitude, a tumultuous crowd, a rabble: the common rout, ii. 25; the rout is coming, iii. 147; a rout of rebels, iv. 369; that traitorous rout, v. 55; all this rout, v. 132; viii. 168; the rout of nations, vi. 551; all the rout, vi. 619; sleep yslakèd hath the rout, viii. 34; a merry rout, viii. 166; abject routs, iv. 361.

rout, a tumult, a brawl: How this foul rout began, who set it on, vii. 409.

Rowlands: see Olivers, &c.

royal, a gold coin, "a Roiall in money. Vi. Riall . . . a Riall, or 10 shillings" (Minsheu's Guide into Tongues, ed. 1617): thou comest not of the blood royal, if thou darest not stand for ten shillings, iv. 213; there is a nobleman . . . Give him as much as will make him a royal man, iv. 280: The second of these quibbling passages has been already noticed under nobleman, &c.: and see face-royal, &c.

royal faiths—Our, iv. 368; My royal choice, v. 503; their royal minds, v. 545; see note 75, iv. 412: but on the third of these passages Steevens observes, "Royal, I believe, in the present instance, only signifies noble."

royal merchant, ii. 386, 395: According to Warburton, this term was properly applied to merchants of the highest rank, such as the Sanudos, the Giustiniani, the Grimaldi, the Summaripos, and others, who, by virtue of a license from the republic of Venice, "erected principalities in several places of the Archipelago (which their descendants enjoyed for many generations), and thereby became truly and properly royal merchants,"—an explanation which is approvingly quoted by Gifford, note on Massinger's Works, vol. ii. p. 156, ed. 1813: but, according to Hunter, "A royal merchant, in the middle ages, was a merchant who transacted business for a sovereign of the time. Thus, King John calls Brand de Doway 'homo noster et dominicus mercator noster.' See a protection granted to him, Rotuli Selecti, &c. 8vo, 1834, p. 23." New Illustr. of Shakespeare, vol. i. p. 308.

roynish, mangy, scabby (Fr. rogneux)=scurvy, paltry; iii. 22.

rub on, and kiss the mistress, vi. 49; I fear too much rubbing, ii. 192: On the first of these passages Malone observes, "The allusion is to bowling. What we now call the jack seems, in Shakspeare's time, to have been [was certainly] termed the mistress [see mistress]. A bowl that kisses the jack or mistress is in the most advantageous situation. Rub on is a term at the same game" ("To rub at bowles. Sautler." "A rubbe at bowles. Saut." Cotgrave's Fr. and Engl. Dict.: "To rub at Bowls, Impingo." Coles's Lat. and Engl. Dict.: "Rub . . . at the game of bowls, it means to incline inwards towards the jack." Dyche's Dict.: "I doe not know any thing fitter to bee compared to bowling then wooing or louers, for if they doe not see one another in two dayes, they will say, Good Lord, it is seuen yeeres since we saw each other; for louers doe thinke that in absence time sleepeth, and in their presence that hee is in a wild gallop: So a bowler, although the allye or marke bee but thirty or forty paces, yet sometimes I haue heard the bowler cry rub, rub, rub, and sweare and lye that hee was gone an hundred miles, when the bowle hath bene short of the blocke two yards, or that hee was too short a thousand foot, when hee is vpon the head of the iacke, or ten or twelue foot beyond." Taylor's Wit and Mirth, p. 193, Workes, 1630).

rubious, red, ruddy, iii. 334.

ruddock, the redbreast, vii. 701.

rudesby, a rude fellow, a blusterer, iii. 143, 379.

rue . . . Grace, &c. iii. 468; rue, sour herb of grace, iv. 156; there's rue for you; and here's some for me:—we may call it herb-grace o' Sundays: O, you must wear your rue with a difference (see differences), vii. 184 (in which passage Ophelia is addressing the Queen): Florio, in his Ital. and Engl. Dict., has "Ruta, the hearbe of Grace or Rue.;" and Cotgrave, in his Fr. and Engl. Dict., "Rue: Rue, Hearbe Grace." The origin of the name herb grace or herb of grace is uncertain: "There is no ground," observes Malone, "for supposing, with Dr. Warburton, that rue was called herb of grace from its being used in exorcisms performed in churches on Sundays;" but Warburton was only repeating what he had read in the works of a great divine,—Jeremy Taylor, who says (referring to the Flagellum Dæmonum), "First, They [the Romish exorcisers] are to try the devil by holy water, incense, sulphur, rue, which from thence, as we suppose, came to be called 'herb of grace,'" &c. A Dissuasive from Popery, Part i. ch. ii. sect. ix., Works, vol. x. p. 233, ed. 1839: According to Henley, "The following passage from Greene's Quip for an Upstart Courtier will furnish the best reason for calling rue herb of grace o' Sundays; '—some of them smil'd and said, Rue was called Herbegrace, which though they scorned in their youth, they might wear in their age, and [that] it was never too late to say miserere'" [sig. B verso, ed. 1620]: In the last two of the above passages of Shakespeare there is a quibble—rue=ruth, i.e. sorrow (Alleyn the actor, in a letter to his wife, makes a distinction between rue and herb of grace; for he bids her, on account of the plague which was then raging, "haue in yo^r windowes good store of rue and herbe of grace;" and from a letter purporting to be the joint-composition of Henslowe, Mrs. Henslowe, and Mrs. Alleyn, in which they thank Alleyn for his "good counsell" about taking precautions against the plague, it appears that they understood "herbe of grace" to mean "wormwode." see Malone's Shakespeare, by Boswell, vol. xxi. p. 390, and Collier's Memoirs of Edward Alleyn, &c. pp. 26, 30, ed. It seems, indeed, to be admitted, on all hands, that the term Sack was originally applied to certain growths of Spain . . . Dr. Percy has the credit of restoring the original interpretation of the term. In a manuscript account of the disbursements by the chamberlain of the city of Worcester for the year 1592, he found the ancient mode of spelling to be seck ('Item, For a gallon of clarett wyne and seck, and a pound of sugar geven to Sir John Russell, iiiis.'), and thence concluded that Sack was merely a corruption of sec, signifying a dry wine. Minsheu . . renders the term vin sec; and Cotgrave, in his Dictionary, gives the same translation. The most satisfactory evidence, however, in support of this opinion, is furnished by the French version of a proclamation for regulating the prices of wines, issued by the privy council in 1633, where the expression vins secs corresponds with the word sacks in the original copy (Rymer's Fœdera, Tom. viii. Part iv. p. 46). It may also be remarked, that the term sec is still used as a substantive by the French, to denote a Spanish wine ('On dit aussi quelquefois absolument du sec, pour dire, du vin d'Espagne.' Dict. de Trevoux); and that the dry wine of Xerez is distinguished at the place of its growth by the name of vino seco. These several authorities, then, appear to warrant the inference that Sack was a dry Spanish wine. But, on the other hand, numerous instances occur in which it is mentioned in conjunction with wines of the sweet class. The act of Henry VIII. speaks of 'sakkes or other swete wyne.' In like manner, the Mystery of Vintners, published by Dr. Merret in 1675, gives a receipt 'to correct the rankness and eagerness of wines, as Sack and Malago, or other sweet wines.' Glas, in his History of the Canary Islands, makes no distinction between Malmsey and Canary Sack; and Nichols, in the account which he has given of Teneriffe, expressly says, 'that island produces three sorts of excellent wines,—Canary, Malmsey, and Verdona; which all go under the denomination of Sacks' (Aistle's Voyages, vol. i. p. 541). To get rid of the difficulty which thus arises, Mr. Nares [in his Gloss.] has recourse to the supposition, that Sack was a common name for all white wines. But it has been already shown that the appellation was originally confined to the growths of Spain; and if it had been used to designate white wines in general, there can be no reason why it should not have been applied to those of France or Candia, which were then imported in large quantity. If, again, we suppose that the name denoted a sweet wine, we shall be equally at a loss to discover the circumstances which could have given rise to such a distinction between it and the other kinds then in use; not to mention, that such an application of the term would have been wholly at variance with the etymology as above deduced. A more particular examination of the characters assigned to Sack by the few writers who have described it, will perhaps enable us to reconcile these discrepancies, and remove much of the perplexity in which the question has hitherto been involved. In the first place, we are told by Venner, that 'Sacke is completely hot in the third degree, and of thin parts, and therefore it doth vehemently and quickly heat the body: wherfore the much and untimely use of it doth overheat the liver, inflame the blood, and exsiccate the radical humour in lean and dry bodies' (Via Recta ad Vitam Longam, p. 22). This description accords with the epithet 'sprightly,' which is given to it in some verses published in 1641 (Preparative to the Study or Vertue of Sack, 4to, 1641), and sufficiently proves, that it could not have been of a thick luscious quality, like most of the dessert-wines then in vogue. That, however, it was a liquor of considerable strength and body, may be inferred from a subsequent passage of the last-mentioned work, where it is extolled as 'the elixir of wine;' an expression apparently borrowed from one of Ben Jonson's plays (Every Man out of his Humour, Prol. [Introductory scene]). Herrick, again, calls it a 'frantic liquor;' expatiating, with rapture, on its 'witching beauties,' 'generous blood,' &c. (Farewell to Sack and Welcome to Sack, Herrick's Hesperides, pp. 48, 87): and most of the dramatic writings of the age contain frequent allusions to its enlivening virtues and other fascinating properties. Had there been nothing new or uncommon in the nature of the wine, it could hardly have excited such extravagant admiration, or come into such universal request, at a time when our countrymen were already familiar with the choicest vintages from almost all parts of the globe. The practice which prevailed of mixing sugar with Sack has been thought by most persons to indicate a dry wine, such as Rhenish or Sherry. Dr. Drake, indeed, is of a contrary opinion, alleging that there would be no humour in Falstaff's well-known jest on Sack and sugar, if the liquor had not been of the sweet kind (Shakspeare and his Times, vol. ii. p. 130). But on this point little stress can be laid; as at that time it was a general custom with the English to add sugar to their wines (See Fynes Moryson's Itinerary, Part iii. p. 152. Hentzner's Travels, &c.). The testimony of Venner, however, who has discussed the question, 'whether Sack be best to be taken with sugar or without,' clearly points to a dry wine. 'Somo,' he observes, 'affect to drinke Sacke with sugar, and some without, and upon no other ground, as I thinke, but that, as it is best pleasing to their pallates. I will speake what I deeme thereof, and I thinke I shall well satisfie such as are judicious. Sacke, taken by itself, is very hot, and very penetrative: being taken with sugar, the heat is both somewhat allayed, and the penetrative quality thereof also retardated. Wherfore let this be the conclusion: Sacke taken by itself, without any mixture of sugar, is best for them that have cold stomackes, and subject to the obstructions of it, and of the meseraicke veines. But for them that are free from such obstructions, and fear lest that the drinking of sacke, by reason of the penetrative faculty of it, might distemper the liver, it is best to drinke it with sugar; and so I leave every man that understandeth his owne state of body, to be his own director herein' (Vid. Recta ad Vitam Longam, p. 23). A passage in Shakspeare ('Fal. Your rogue, here's lime in this sack top,' &c. 1 K. Henry IV. Act ii. sc. 4), which has been thought to allude merely to the adulteration of sack by the vintners, throws, in fact, much light on its genuine qualities; and proves it to be of the same nature as the wines still manufactured, in Spain and other countries, from the ripest grapes, which receive a sprinkling of burnt lime or gypsum, before they are pressed and introduced into the vat. But if any doubt remained on the subject, it would be completely removed by the account which Sir Richard Hawkins gives of these wines. 'Since the Spanish sacks,' he observes, 'have been common in our taverns, which for conservation are mingled with the lime in the making, our nation complains of calentures, of the stone, the dropsy, and infinite other distempers, not heard of before this wine came into common use. Besides, there is no year that it wasteth not two millions of crowns of our substance, by conveyance into foreign countries' (Observations on a Voyage into the South Sea. London, 1622). It thus becomes manifest, that the sacks which were first imported into England in the reign of Henry VIII., and which had come into general request before the end of the seventeenth century, belonged, as Minshew had correctly defined them, to the class of dry wines, and resembled those liquors which still pass under that denomination. If, indeed, we may credit the statement of Howell, there was one species of sack known at an earlier period, and that was the Romanie. Nor is the fact unimportant in the history of wines; for it not only affords a further explanation of the latter name, but serves to show, that the Spaniards had borrowed from the Greeks the practice of adding gypsum to the must, which they afterwards improved upon, and perfected to such a degree, as to be enabled to excel all other nations in the manufacture of dry wines. It was from the Ionian islands, as we collect from Bacci, that the Romanie originally came: and, at the present day, there is so little difference between the best white wines of Cephalonia and Zante, and some of the vintages of Spain and Portugal, which have been prepared in a similar manner, that a person not much accustomed to observe the nicer shades of distinction among wines might easily mistake the one for the other. Howell mentions a Cephalonian muscadel, that was imported into England in his time: and Fynes Moryson found an excellent white wine at Palermo, in Natolia; 'which,' he observes, 'is like the Spanish sacke, but more pleasant to the taste, being not so sweete as the Canary wines, nor so harsh and strong as the Sherry sacke' (Itinerary, Part iii. p. 130). Sack was used as a generic name for the wines in question: but occasionally the growths were particularly specified. Thus, in one of the scenes in 'The Second Part of K. Henry IV. we have a laboured panegyric by Falstaff on the attributes of Sherrie-sack, or dry Sherry; and for a long time the words Sack and Sherry were used indiscriminately for each other (Jonson's Bartholomew Fair, Act v. sc. 6 [3]; his New Inn, Act i. sc. 2 [1]). In like manner we frequently read of Canary Sack, and find the latter term sometimes employed to express that particular wine (Jonson's Staple of News, Act v. sc. 4 [2]; Herrick's Welcome to Sack,—Hesperides, p. 86; Heywood and W. Rowley's Fortune by Land and Sea, 1655, p. 4); although it differed materially from Sherry in quality, and scarcely came within the description of a dry wine. 'Canarie wine,' says Venner, 'which beareth the name of the islands from whence it is brought, is of some termed a Sacke, with this adjunct sweete ('An ocean of sweet Sack,' Fletcher's Rule a Wife and have a Wife, act v. sc. 5), but yet very improperly, for it differeth not onely from Sacke in sweetnesse and pleasantnesse of taste, but also in colour and consistence: for it is not so white in colour as Sacke, nor so thin in substance; wherefore it is more nutritive than Sacke, and less penetrative. It is best agreeable to cold constitutions, and for old bodies, so that they be not too impensively cholericke: for it is a wine that will quickly enflame, and therefore very hurtfull unto hot and cholericke bodies, especially if they be young' (Via Recta, &c. p. 24). This passage is the more deserving of attention, as it not only illustrates the nature of the Canary wine in use at the commencement of the seventeenth century, but shows that there were considerable differences in the quality of the wines which bore the general name of Sacks, and thus removes much of the confusion that has arisen from the misnomer above alluded to. Whether the Canary Islands then furnished any dry wines, similar to those which are now imported from Teneriffe, seems doubtful: but it is clear, that Canary Sack resembled the liquor which still passes under that denomination. Of the precise degree of sweetness which it possessed, we may form some idea from the observation of Howell, who informs us, that 'Sherries and Malagas well mingled pass for Canaries in most taverns, more often than Canary itself' (Familiar Letters, Part ii. Lett. 60). Ben Jonson mentions his receiving a present of Palm-sack, that is, sack from the island of Palma. With these decisive authorities before us, we can readily understand the description which Markham has given of the various kinds of Sack known in his time. 'Your best Sacks,' he observes, 'are of Xeres, in Spain,—your smaller, of Galicia and Portugall; your strong Sacks are of the islands of the Canaries and of Mallico; and your muskadine and malmseys are of many parts, of Italy, Greece, and some special islands' (English Housewife, p. 118). . . . Judging from what is still observable of some of the wines of Spain, we may easily imagine, that many of the Sacks, properly so called, might, at the same time, be both dry and sweet. At all events, when new, they would belong to the class of sweetish wines; and it was only after having been kept a sufficient length of time, to ensure the decomposition of the greater part of the free saccharine matter contained in them, that they could have acquired the peculiar dryness for which they were distinguished. We find, accordingly, that they were valued in proportion to their age; and the calls for 'old Sack,' as Sack κατ' ἔξοχην, were very common ('Give me Sacke, old Sacke, boys,' &c. Pasquil's Palinodia, 1619 [?]). We may also presume, that there would be much less difference of taste among the several species of Sack, in their recent state, than after they had been long kept; for even the sweetest wines betray at first some degree of roughness, which is gradually subdued by age; while the character of dryness, on the other hand, will hardly apply to any of the durable wines, as they come from the vat. Mountain and Canary were always sweeter than Sherry; but between the richer kinds there is often a strong resemblance in flavour, which is the less extraordinary, as they are made from the same species of grape, though growing in different soils. It was, therefore, not without reason, that they were considered as 'near allied,'

('Two kinsmen neare allyde to Sherry Sack, Sweet Malligo and delicate Canary.' Pasquil's Palinodia).

The conclusion at which we thus arrive is so far satisfactory, as it proves that the wines formerly known under the name of Sacks, though they may, upon the whole, have been inferior, yet differed in no essential quality from those with which we are at present supplied by the same countries that originally produced them, and which are still held in such deserved estimation. They probably first came into favour, in consequence of their possessing greater strength and durability, and being more free from acidity, than the white wines of France and Germany; and owed their distinctive appellation to that peculiar sub-astringent taste which characterizes all wines prepared with gypsum." Henderson's History of Ancient and Modern Wines, pp. 298-308.

cover to keep the salt clean. There was but one salt-cellar on the dinner-table" (MALONE): "The tables being long, the salt was commonly placed about the middle, and served as a kind of boundary to the different quality of the guests invited. Those of distinction were ranked above; the space below was assigned to the dependents, inferior relations of the master of the house, &c." Gifford's note on Massinger's Works, vol. i. p. 170, ed. 1813.

Samingo, a corruption or abbreviation of, or intended blunder for, San Domingo, and used as the burden to a drinking-song, iv. 395 (where see foot-note): "Why St. Domingo should have been considered as the patron of toppers I know not; but he seems to have been regarded in this light by Gonzalo Berceo, an old Castilian poet, who flourished in 1211. He was a monk, much of the same cast with our facetious Arch-deacon Walter de Mapes. In writing the life of the saint, he seeks inspiration in a glass of good wine.

' — De un confessor sancto quiero fer una prosa, Quiero fer una prosa en Roman Paladino,
En qual suele el pueblo fablar a su vecino,
Ca no son tan letrado por fer otro Latino, Bien valdra, oome creo, un vaso de buen vino ' " sanctuarize, to protect as a sanctuary does, to shelter, vii. 190.

sand-bag fastened to it—Bearing his staff with a, v. 138: "As, according to the old laws of duels, knights were to fight with the lance and sword; so those of inferior rank fought with an ebon staff or battoon, to the farther end of which was fixed a bag crammed hard with sand. To this custom Hudibras has alluded in these humorous lines;

' Engag'd with money-bags, as bold As men with sand-bags did of old ' " (WARBURTON):

"Mr. Sympson, in his notes on Ben Jonson, observes, that a passage in St. Chrysostom very clearly proves the great antiquity of this practice" (STEEVENS).

an edition which only wants a fuller glossary to be an excellent one).

say, an assay, a sample, a taste : some say of breeding, vii. 340.

say, thou serge, nay, thou buckram lord!—Thou, v. 178 : "It appears from Minsheu's Dict. 1617, that say was a kind of serge. It is made entirely of wool," &c. (MALONE) : Cotgrave has "Seyette : Serge, or Sage," and "Say (stoffe), Seyette." Fr. and Engl. Dict.

say'd, assayed : viii. 8 : see note 12, viii. 76.

sayst—There thou, There thou sayest true, "say'st something, speak'st to the purpose" (CALDECOTT), vii. 193.

scald, properly "scabby," but used as "a word of contempt, implying poverty, disease, and filth" (JOHNSON) : rascally, scald, iv. 496 ; scald knave, iv. 497 ; scald rhymers, vii. 593.

scald such chickens as you are—She's e'en setting on water to, vi. 526 : "Randle Holme, in his Academy of Arms and Blazon, B. iii. ch. ii. p. 441, has the following passage ; 'He beareth Argent, a Doctor's tub (otherwise called a Cleansing Tub), Sable, Hooped, Or. In this pockified, and such diseased persons, are for a certain time put into, not to boyl up to an heighth, but to parboil,' &c." (STEEVENS) : "It was anciently the practice, and in inns perhaps still continues, to scald off the feathers of poultry instead of plucking them. Chaucer hath referred to it in his Romaunt of the Rose, 6820, 'Without scalding they hem pulle'" (HENLEY) : and see tub, &c.

'souse, an excuse, ii. 406; vii. 438.

scut, a tail, i. 411.

Scylla, your father, I fall into Charybdis, your mother—When I shun, ii. 392: "Originally from the Alexandreis of Philippe Gaultier; but several translations of this adage were obvious to Shakespeare [it occurs over and over again in our old writers] . . . Philippe Gaultier de Chatillon . . . was born towards the latter end of the 12th century. In the Fifth Book of his heroic poem, Darius (who, escaping from Alexander, fell into the hands of Bessus) is thus apostrophized;

'Nactus equum Darius, rorantia cæde suorum Retrogrado fugit arva gradu. Quo tendis inertem, Rex periture, fugam? nescis, heu! perditæ, nescis Quem fugias: hostes incurris dum fugis hostem; Incidis in Scyllam, cupiens vitare Charybdim.' . . .

The author of the line in question (who was unknown to Erasmus [see his Adagia, &c. pp. 493-4, ed. 1629]) was first ascertained by Galeottus Martius, who died in 1476 (see Menagiana, vol. i. p. 173, ed. 1715); and we learn from Henricus Gandavensis, De Scriptoribus Ecclesiasticis [i.e. Henry of Gaunt], that the Alexandreis had been a common school-book. . . . The corrupt state in which this poem (of which I have not met with the earliest edition) still appears, is perhaps imputable to frequent transcription, and injudicious attempts at emendation. Every pedagogue through whose hands the Ms. passed, seems to have made some ignorant and capricious changes in its text; so that in many places it is as apparently interpolated and corrupted as the ancient copies of Shakespeare" (STEEVENS): I, like Steevens, have not seen the first edition of the Alexandreis; but I possess a copy of the rare edition of 1513, which, I find, gives the above passage exactly as he cites it: After all, the substance of the line, "Incidis in Scyllam, cupiens vitare Charybdim," has been traced to St. Augustine, who writes as follows; "Distingue intelligentiâ, noli separare perfidiâ; ne iterum, quasi fugiens Charybdim, in Scyllam incurras . . . a Charybdi quidem evasisti, sed in Scyllæis scopulis naufragiati. In medio naviga, utrumque periculosum latus evita." In Johannis Evang. cap. 8. Tractatus xxxvi. Opp. t. iii. p. 726, ed. 1797.

sea of wax, vi. 508: see wax—Sea of.

sea-bank, the sea-shore, vii. 440; sea-banks, ii. 408.

sea-maid, a mermaid, i. 486; ii. 278.

sealed quarts, quart-measures officially stamped to show that they would hold the proper quantity, iii. 112.

this adventure in The Destruction of Troy [see vi. 21] : "Johnson cast his eyes all bewept on him [Hercules], and was all shamed to see his greatness and his beauty." See B. i. p. 221, 4th edit. 1617" (MALONE).

sea-monster—More hideous Than the, vii. 270 : Stevens quotes, and seemingly with approbation, the remark of Upton, that here the sea-monster means "the hippopotamus, the hieroglyphical symbol of impiety and ingratitude : " but that animal is a river monster.

seamy side without—The, "That is, inside out" (JOHNSON), vii. 448.

sear, the yellow leaf—Fall'n into the, vii. 64 : Here some critics consider sear to be a substantive, "the state of being withered."

sear up my embracements from a next With bonds of death ! vii. 638 : see note 7, vii. 737.

search, to probe : And thus I search [=apply a remedy to] it with a sovereign kiss, i. 270 ; Now to the bottom dost thou search my wound, vi. 309 ; with this good sword . . . search (=pierce) this bosom, vi. 681 ; searching of thy wound, iii. 26.

season, to confirm, to establish : my blessing season ("infix in such a manner as that it never may wear out," JOHNSON) this in thee ! vii. 117 (where Caldecott explains season "give a relish to, quicken ; or, it may be, keep alive in your memory") ; to take From Rome all season'd office ("all office established and settled by time, and made familiar to the people by long use," JOHNSON), vi. 197 ; Directly seasons him his enemy, vii. 158.

season, in "a culinary sense, to preserve by salting" (MALONE) : the best brine a maiden can season her praise in, iii. 208 ; all this to season A brother's dead Love, iii. 328 ; the spice and salt that season a man, vi. 15.

season, to temper : When mercy seasons justice, ii. 400 ; Season your admiration for a while, &c. vii. 118.

season—A day of, A seasonable day, iii. 277.

sect, a cutting: a sect or scion, vii. 393.

secure, careless, over-confident: a secure fool, i. 365; a secure ass
i. 372; a secure and wilful Actæon, i. 379; secure, fool-hardy king
iv. 173; Surety secure, vi. 31; my sécure ("unguarded," CALDE COTT) hour, vii. 124; not jealous, nor secure, vii. 422; in a secur couch ("in a couch in which he is lulled into a false security and confidence in his wife's virtue," MALONE), vii. 438.

secure thy heart, assure thy heart,—be confident, vi. 529.

securely, carelessly, over-confidently: she dwells so securely, &c.
i. 371; securely perish ("perish by too great confidence in our security," MALONE), iv. 129; 'Tis done like Hector; but securely done (done with "a negligent security arising from a contempt of the object opposed," WARBURTON), vi. 74.

security, carelessness, over-confidence: through our security, iv.
142, too much security, iv. 439; security Is mortals' chiefest enemy,
vii. 44.

security enough to make fellowships accursed, i. 489. "The speaker here alludes to those legal securities into which fellowship leads men to enter for each other" (MALONE).

seedness, seed-time, i. 455.

seel, to close up the eyes, to blind; properly a term of falconry, to seel a hawk meaning to close up her eyelids either partially or entirely, by running a fine thread through them, in order to make her tractable and endure the hood ("Siller les yeux. To seele, or sow vp, the eye-lids; (& thence also) to hoodwink, blind, keepe in darknesse, deprive of sight." Cotgrave's Fr. and Engl. Dict: "To seel a hawk, Accipitris oculos consuere." Coles's Lat. and Engl.
Dict.): when light-wing'd toys Off feather'd Cupid seel with wanton dullness My speculative and offic'd instruments, vii. 391 (where, according to Nares in his Gloss., is probably an allusion to seeling the eyelids with a small feather, which was sometimes used instead of a thread: but qy. ?); To seel her father's eyes up, vii. 422; the wise gods seel our eyes, vii. 560; Come, seeling night, vii. 57.

seeming, "specious" (STEEVENS): the so seeming Mistress Page,
i. 379; that little seeming substance, vii. 255.

seeming, fair appearance: these keep seeming and savour, iii. 468.

seeming, seemly, becomingly: bear your body more seeming, iii. 73.

seen in thought, "seen in silence, without notice or detection" (JOHNSON), v. 409.

seen—Well: see well seen.

seethe, to boil, vi. 562; seethes, vi. 44; seething, ii. 312.

segregation, a separation, a dispersion, vii. 395.

seiz'd, possessed (a law-term): all those his lands Which he stood seiz'd of, vii. 106.

seld, seldom, vi. 76; viii. 459.

seldom comes the better, v. 388: A not uncommon proverbial saying, of great antiquity. (Douce cites an account of its origin from a Ms. collection of stories in Latin compiled about the time of Henry III.)

seldom-when, rarely, not often, i. 496; iv. 378.

seld-shown flamens, "priests who seldom exhibit themselves to public view" (STEEVENS), vi. 164.

self, self-same: one self mate and mate ("the same husband and the same wife," JOHNSON), vii. 319.

self exhibition—That, That very allowance or pension (see exhibition), vii. 654.

self-abuse: see first abuse.

self-admission, self-allowance, self-approbation, vi. 40.

self-bounty, "inherent generosity" (WARBURTON), vii. 422.

self-cover'd thing—Thou changèd and, vii. 316: "I cannot but think that by self-cover'd the author meant, thou that hast disguised nature by wickedness, thou that hast hid the woman under the fiend" (JOHNSON): "By 'thou self-cover'd thing,' the poet, I think, means, thou who hast put a covering on thyself which nature did not give thee. The covering which Albany means is, the semblance and appearance of a fiend" (MALONE). ● self-figur'd knot—A, "A knot formed by yourself [themselves]" (JOHNSON), vii. 664.

self-sovereignty, &c.—Do not curst wives hold that, ii. 189: "Not a sovereignty over, but in, themselves. So, self-sufficiency, self-confidence, &c." (MALONE).

semblable, a resemblance, a likeness: His semblable (=fellow-creature), yea, himself, Timon disdains, vi. 551; his semblable is his mirror; and who else would trace him, his umbrage (shadow), nothing more, vii. 203. (Nares must have recollected only the second of these passages, when (in his Gloss.) he remarked that the substantive semblable was "intended, however, by Shakespeare, as a specimen of ridiculous affectation.") semblable, like, resembling, similar : the semblable coherence of his men's spirits and his, iv. 388 ; thousands more Of semblable import, vii. 543.

semblably, in like, in similar manner, iv. 281.

semblative, resembling, iii. 334.

seniory, seniority, v. 425.

sennet, a particular set of notes on the trumpet or cornet (the etymology of the word being doubtful), v. 142, 241, 518 ; vi. 17, 167, 618 ; vii. 31, 533.

Senoy's, the Siennese, the people of the republic of Sienna, iii. 213.

separable spite—A, "A cruel fate, that spitefully separates us from each other. Separable for separating" (MALONE), viii. 367.

septentrion—The, The north, v. 250.

sequent, a follower : a sequent of the stranger queen's, ii. 196.

sequester, a sequestration, a separation, vii. 431.

sequestration—An answerable, vii. 393 : Steevens believes that here sequestration is used for sequel ; but he allows that it may mean no more than "separation,"—which, no doubt, it does.

sere—The clown shall make those laugh whose lungs are tickled o' the, vii. 140 : "i.e. those who are asthmatical, and to whom laughter is most uneasy. This is the case (as I am told) with those whose lungs are tickled by the sere or serum" (STEEVENS) : "The clown shall make even those laugh whose lungs are tickled with a dry cough or huskiness ; by his merriment shall convert even their coughing into laughter" (SINGER, after DOUCE) : tickled o' the sere, according to Mr. Halliwell, means "wanton,"—an explanation which he feels confident is right, but which is inconsistent with the word "lungs."

sergeant, a bailiff, a sheriff's officer : this fell sergeant, death, Is strict in his arrest, vii. 209.

serpigo, a sort of tetter or dry eruption on the skin, i. 477; vi. 38.

servant, a lover: Sir Valentine and servant, i. 276; I thank you, gentle servant, ibid.; And so, good morrow, servant, ibid.; Sil. Servant,—Val. Mistress? i. 280; Servant, you are sad, ibid.; Who is that, servant, i. 281; &c.

servanted, subjected, vi. 224.

service is no heritage, a proverbial expression, iii. 216: Ray gives "Service is no inheritance." Proverbs, p. 155, ed. 1768.

sessa, iii. 105; vii. 301, 307: This, according to Theobald, is the Spanish "Cessa, i.e. be quiet;" according to Hanmer, "Peace, be quiet, Lat. Cessa;" according to Capell, a "corruption of cessa (Ital.) and cessez (Fr.), both deriv'd from the Latin word cessa, and both signifying, as that does, 'leave, have done, let alone;'" and Johnson (with whom Nares in Gloss. agrees) "takes it to be the French word cessez . . . an interjection enforcing cessation in any action, like be quiet, have done." (I must confess that I do not feel satisfied with these notes on sessa: qy. if the word, as used in at least the second and third of the passages above referred to, may be illustrated by the following lines of Sylvester's Du Bartas, ed. 1641? Joshua urges on his troops;

"Sa, sa, my Hearts! turn, turn again upon them, They are your own; now charge, and cheerly on them."

The Capitaines, p. 182;

Ses, ses, here Dogs, here Bitches! doe not spare This Bitch that gnaw'd her subjects' bones so bare."

The Decay, p. 229;

where the original has "Sus, lyces, deschirez," &c.) Compare, too; "Spa. Well played, dog! well played, bear! Sa, sa, sa! to't, to't!" Ford's Fancies Chaste and Noble, act iv. sc. 1.

set, to set by, to value, to estimate: coldly set Our sovereign process, vii. 177.

set a match, make an appointment (in the cant language of thieves, plan a robbery), iv. 212.

set of wit well play'd—A, ii. 212: "A term from tennis. So in King Henry V. [act i. sc. 2] 'play a set,' &c." (STEEVENS).

set. Jul. As little by such toys as may be possible—Your ladyship can, i. 269: Here, of course, by set Lucetta means "set a song to music," while, in Julia's rejoinder, set by signifies "make account of." (Mr. Chappell remarks that this passage, your ladyship can set,

"adds one more to the many proofs of the superior cultivation of the science [of music] in those days. We should not now readily attribute to ladies, even to those who are generally considered to be well educated and accomplished, enough knowledge of harmony to enable them to set a song correctly to music, however agile their fingers may be." Popular Music of the Olden Time, &c. vol. i. p. 221, sec. ed.)

set cock-a-hoop!—You will: see cock-a-hoop, &c.

set from London, set out from London, iv. 434.

set up one's rest—To: see rest—To set up one's.

Setebos, i. 188, 234: "A gentleman of great merit, Mr. Warner, has observed on the authority of John Barbot that 'the Patagons are reported to dread a great horned devil, called Setebos.' It may be asked, however, how Shakspeare knew any thing of this, as Barbot was a voyager of the present century? Perhaps he had read Eden's History of Travayle, 1577, who tells us, p. 434, that the gigantes, when they found themselves fettered, 'roared like bulls and cried upon [their great devil] Setebos to help them'" (FARMER): "We learn from Magellan's Voyage that Setebos was the supreme god of the Patagons, and Cheleule was an inferior one" (TOLLET): "Setebos is also mentioned in Hackluyt's Voyages, 1598" (MALONE): "In Dr. Farmer's note it should have been added that the passage from Eden's History of Travayle was part of Magellan's Voyage; or in Mr. Tollet's that Magellan was included in Eden's collection" (DOUCE).

setter, one who watches, and points out to his comrades, the persons to be plundered: O, 'tis our setter, iv. 227.

seven [sins]—The deadly, Pride, envy, wrath, sloth, covetousness, gluttony, lechery, i. 480.

several they be—My lips are no common, though, ii. 181; Why should my heart think that a several plot, viii. 417: "Fields that were enclosed were called severals, in opposition to commons, the former belonging to individuals, the others to the inhabitants generally. When commons were enclosed, portions allotted to owners of freeholds, copyholds, and cottages, were fenced in, and termed severals: so Maria says, playing on the word,—my lips are not common, though they are certainly several, once part of the common; or, though my lips are several, a field, they are certainly no common. According to Mr. Hunter [New Illust. of Shakspeare, vol. i. p. 267], 'severals, or several lands, are portions of common assigned for a term to a particular proprietor, the other commoners waiving for the time their right of common over them;' but, although the term may have been used in this and some other restricted senses, there can be no doubt but that the meaning was generally accepted in accordance with the explanation given above" (HALLIWELL).

severals and unhidden passages, &c.—The, iv. 424: see note 6, iv. 409.

sewer, an officer, who placed the dishes on the table, took them off, &c.: a Sewer, and divers Servants with dishes, vii. 18.

shadow, a shadow, a shady place: I'll go find a shadow, iii. 60.

shaft or a bolt on't—Make a: see make a shaft, &c.

shaft, I shot his fellow, &c.—When I had lost one, ii. 349: "This method of finding a lost arrow is prescribed by P. Crescentius in his treatise De Agricultura, lib. x. cap. xxviii., and is also mentioned in Howel's Letters, vol. i. p. 183, edit. 1655, 12mo" (DOUCE).

shales, shella, the outer coats of fruit, iv. 478.

shard-borne beetle—The, "The beetle borne along the air by its shards or scaly wings [properly wing-cases]" (STEEVENS), vii. 36. ("The beetle is furnished with two large membranaceous wings, which are protected from external injury by two very hard, horny wing-cases, or, as entomologists term them, elytra. The old English name was 'shard.' . . . These shards or wing-cases are raised and expanded when the beetle flies, and by their concavity act like two parachutes in supporting him in the air. Hence the propriety and correctness of Shakspeare's description, 'the shard-borne beetle,' a description embodied in a single epithet." Patterson's Letters on the Nat. Hist. of the Insects mentioned in Shakspeare's Plays, p. 65.)

sharded beetle—The, vii. 677: see the preceding article.

shards, and he their beetle—They are his, "i.e. They are the wings [properly wing-cases] that raise this heavy lumpish insect from the ground" (STEEVENS), vii. 359: see shard-borne beetle.

shards, fragments of broken pottery, of pots, of tiles, &c.: Shards, flints, and pebbles, vii. 198.

share—Half a, vii. 160: "Alluding to the shares, or proportions, into which the receipts at a theatre were divided, and given to the performers, according to their several rates of interest, or rank in the company" (COLLIER): The words which immediately follow here—A whole one, I (and which Malone most improperly proposed altering to "A whole one, ay")—mean, "I think myself entitled to a whole one" (STEEVENS), or "A whole one, say I" (CALDECOTT).

shark'd up, "picked up without distinction, as the shark-fish collects his prey" (STEEVENS), "collected in a banditti-like manner" (Nares's Gloss.), "snapped up with the eager voracity of a shark, caught up from any or all quarters for a bellyful" (CALDECOTT), vii. 106.

Shaw . . . to Friar Penker—To Doctor, v. 408: "Shaw [brother of the Lord Mayor] and Penker [Provincial of the Augustine Friars] were two popular preachers" (MALONE).

shealed, shaled, shelled, vii. 268.

shearman, one who shears woollen cloth, v. 172.

shears between us—There went but a pair of, "We are both of the same piece" (JOHNSON), i. 448 : this proverbial expression is common enough.

sheav'd hat, a straw hat, viii. 440.

sheen, brightness, splendour : borrow'd sheen, vii. 157.

sheen, shining, bright : starlight sheen, ii. 275.

sheep, formerly often pronounced (as it still is in certain counties) ship, and even so written : hence the quibbles,—Twenty to one, then, he is shipp'd already, And I have play'd the sheep in losing him, i. 265 ; Why, thou peevish sheep, What ship of Epidamnum stays for me? ii. 33 ; Mar. Two hot sheeps, marry. Boyet. And wherefore not ships? ii. 181 (Compare Dekker's Satiromastix, 1602 ; "A hood shall flap vp and downe heere, and this shipskin-cap shall be put off." Sig. F 3 verso : That in Dryden's time ship was occasionally pronounced sheep appears from a rhyme in his translation of Virgil ;

"With whirlwinds from beneath she toss'd the ship, And bare expos'd the bosom of the deep." Æn. B. i. 64 ; and that such was the case even at a later period is shown by a couplet in Nereides or Sea-Eclogues, 1712, by a poetaster named Diaper, who is several times mentioned in Swift's Journal to Stella ;

"You'll find the fish, that stays the labouring ship, Tho' ruffling winds drive o'er the noisy deep." Ecl. x. p. 44).

sheep-biter, a cant term for a thief, iii. 355.

sheep-biting, thievish, thief-like, i. 516.

sheer, pure : Thou sheer, immaculate, and silver fountain, iv. 174.

sheer ale—Fourteen pence on the score for, iii. 110 : Here, according to some expositors, sheer ale is "ale alone, nothing but ale," rather than "unmixed ale." • shent, the pret. and past part. of shend, to chide, to rate, to scold : He shent our messengers, vi. 38 ; I am shent for speaking to you, iii. 383 ; Do you hear how we are shent, vi. 224 ; How in my words soever she be shent ("reproved harshly, treated with rough language," STEEVENS ; "hurt, wounded, punished," HENDERSON), vii. 163.

shent, treated roughly, ruined, undone : We shall all be shent (where some take shent to mean "chidden, scolded"), i. 356.

sheriff's post—Like a, iii. 338 : At the doors of sheriffs were usually set up ornamented posts, on which royal and civic proclamations were fixed.

sherfis-sack: see sack, &c.

shipman's card—The: see card—The shipman's.

ship-tire,—The, A sort of head-dress, perhaps adorned with ribbons as a ship is with streamers; or perhaps a head-dress formed to resemble a ship, i. 382.

shive—Easy it is Of a cut loaf to steal a, vi. 299: shive, i. e. slice: Ray gives "Tis safe taking a shive of a cut loaf." Proverbs, p. 48, ed. 1768.

shock, "to meet force with force" (Todd's Johnson's Dict.), And we shall shock them, iv. 76.

shoe—This left, i. 279: "Shoes, in Shakespeare's time, appear to have been adapted to the right and left foot, a fashion revived in our time. So, in King John, act iv. sc. 2;

'Standing on slippers, which his nimble haste Had falsely thrust upon contrary feet'

(MALONE).

shog, to jog, iv. 435, 444.

shoon, shoes, v. 174; vii. 180.

siege, a seat (Fr. siège): the very siege of justice, i. 496.

("Who thus from lofty siege [the original has seggio] his pleasure told." Fairfax's translation of Tasso's Gerusalemme, B. x. st. 85.)

siege, place, rank: Of the unworthiest siege, vii. 189; men of royal siege, vii. 381.

siege, a stool (in the dirtiest sense of the word): the siege of this moon-calf, i. 205.

Sienna's brother, vii. 705: "i. e. (as I suppose Shakespeare to have meant) brother to the Prince of Sienna: but, unluckily, Sienna was a republic. See W. Thomas's Historye of Italye, 4to, bl. l. 156^l, p. 7 b" (STEEVENS).

sieve—Unrespective: see second unrespective.

sigh, That hurts by easing—A spendthrift, vii. 190; sighs of love, that cost the fresh blood dear, ii. 294; blood-consuming sighs, v. 154; blood-drinking sighs, ibid.; blood-sucking sighs, v. 296: "All alluding to the ancient supposition, that every sigh was indulged at the expense of a drop of blood" (STEEVENS).

sightless, unsightly: sightless stains, iv. 30.

sightless, invisible: your sightless substances, vii. 15; the sightless couriers of the air ("winds, air in motion," JOHNSON), vii. 18.

sights of steel, "the perforated part of their helmets, through which they could see to direct their aim. Visiers, Fr." (STEEVENS), iv. 366.

sign, to show, to denote, to mark: You sign your place and calling, v. 521; Quoted, and sign'd, to do a deed of shame, iv. 56; Sign'd in thy spoil, vi. 652.

significant, affectedly used by Armado in the sense of "letter," ii. 186; significants, quoted in Todd's Johnson's Dict. under the head of "that which expresses something beyond the external mark," v. 30.

signs of war—The, The ensigns of war, iv. 443.

signs well—It, "It is a good sign, it bodes well" (STEEVENS), vii. 566.

silenc'd with that, "Wrapped in silent wonder at the deeds performed by Macbeth, &c." (MALONE), vii. 10.

silent of the night—The, The silence of, &c. v. 125.

silly, harmless, inoffensive: silly women (here "a term of affection, not of reproach. It denotes that which appealed to the stronger sex for protection in its innocence and simplicity." Hunter's New Illust. of Shakespeare, vol. i. p. 106), i. 305; silly sheep, v. 266.

silly, plain, simple: it is silly sooth (truth), iii. 352; a fourth man, in a silly habit, vii. 714.

silly-cheat—The, iii. 463: "One of the technical terms belonging to the art of coney-catching or thievery. I think it means picking pockets" (STEEVENS).

simplicity, folly: The shape of Love's Tyburn that hangs up simplicity, ii. 198; profound simplicity, ii. 212; To prove, by wit, worth in simplicity, ii. 213; And simple truth miscall'd simplicity, viii. 382.

simular, a simulator, vii. 296.

simular, counterfeited: with simular proof, vii. 727.

Sinel's death—By, vii. 10: This name of Macbeth's father is from Holinshed, who followed Bellenden's version of H. Boethius.

single, weak, feeble : a single thing, i. 190 ; your wit single, iv. 325 ; my single state of man, vii. 12.

single, simple, void of guile : I speak it with a single heart, v. 563.

single-soled, jest, a poor, feeble, silly jest (with a quibble on soled), vi. 419 ("Bas relief. Gentilhomme de bas relief. A thredbare, or single-soled Gentleman, a Gentleman of low degree." Cotgrave's Fr. and Engl. Dict., sub "Relief").

singularities, curiosities, rarities, iii. 502.

sink-a-pace, a corruption of cinque-pace (quod vide), iii. 333.

Sins—The deadly seven : see seven, &c.

sins do bear their privilege on earth—Some, "There are sins that, whatever be determined of them above, are not much censured on earth" (JOHNSON), iv. 12.

sir, a gentleman : the worthiest sir, vii. 655 ; a sir so rare, ibid.

sir, a gallant, a courtier : which now again you are most apt to play the sir in, vii. 399.

sir : "A title formerly applied to priests and curates in general ; for this reason : dominus, the academical title of a bachelor of arts, was usually rendered by sir in English at the Universities ; so that a bachelor, who in the books stood Dominus Brown, was in conversation called Sir Brown. This was in use in some colleges even in my memory. Therefore, as most clerical persons had taken that first degree, it became usual to style them sir [though they had not received a degree from the Universities]." Nares's Gloss. : Sir Hugh, i. 345, 350, 358 (twice), 364, &c. ; Sir Oliver Martext, iii. 47, 48 ; Sir Oliver, iii. 66 ; Sir Topas, iii. 380 (six times), 381 (seven times), &c. ; Sir John Hume, v. 118 ; Sir John, v. 401 ; Sir Christopher Urswick, v. 439.

sir, used by a speaker in soliloquy : Now, sir, the sounds that tell what hour it is, iv. 178 ; see note 132, iv. 201 : to the passages there cited I have to add one from Sir Walter Scott, who makes Jeanie Deans, while soliloquising, use the address sirs ; and doubtless those Scotchmen who read the passage see no impropriety in it ; "Dear sirs," SHE SAID TO HERSELF, 'I wonder how my cousin's silk manty, and her gowd watch,' &c. The Heart of Mid-Lothian, vol. iii. p. 283, ed. 1818.

sire, to beget, to produce : base things sire base, vii. 695.

sirrah, used not as a word of disrespect, but as a familiar address : Ah, sirrah, a body would think, &c. iii. 65 ; sirrah, I have cases of buckram, iv. 214 ; Ah, sirrah! vi. 322 ; Ah, sirrah, this unlook'd-for.

Skogan's head—I saw him break, iv. 355: It appears that there were two Skogans of considerable celebrity; Henry Skogan, a poet, who lived in the reign of King Henry the Fourth, and John Skogan, a facetious personage, educated at Oriel College, Oxford, who lived at a later period in the fifteenth century; and that in spite of the anachronism, Shakespeare here alludes to John Skogan: "Holinshed, speaking of the great men of Edward the Fourth's time, mentions 'Scogan, a learned gentleman, and student for a time in Oxford, of a pleasaunte witte, and bent to mery deuises, in respect whereof he was called into the courte, where, giuing himselfe to his naturall inclination of mirthe and pleasaunt pastime, he plaied many sporting parts, although not in suche vnciuill maner as hath bene of hym reported'" (RITSON): "The geystes of skoggon, gathered together in this volume," were entered in the Stationers' Books by Thomas Colwell in 1556-6 (see Extracts from the Registers of the Stationers' Company, &c. edited by Mr. Collier for the Shakespeare Soc., vol. i. p. 120); and no doubt the said Colwell put forth an edition of them,—perhaps, however, only a reprint of an impression by Wyer, whom he succeeded as printer and bookseller (see Mr. W. C. Hazlitt's Introduction to Scoggins' Jests, 1866): but the earliest edition now known to exist is dated 1626, with the following title—The First and Best Part of Scoggins Jests. Full of Witty Mirth and Pleasant Shifts, done by him in France and other places: being a Preservative against Melancholy. Gathered by Andrew Boord, Doctor of Physicke. London. Printed for Francis Williams, 12° b. l.: if we are to believe Anthony Wood, who is not always to be trusted, these Jests have been "unjustly fathered on Dr. Borde."

so-ho! the cry of sportsmen when the hare is found in her seat, vi. 421.

soiled horse, vii. 325: "Is a term used for a horse that has been fed with hay and corn in the stable during the winter, and is turned out in the spring to take the first flush of grass, or has it cut and carried in to him. This at once cleanses the animal, and fills him with blood" (STEEVENS).

soilure, stain, defilement, vi. 63.

solace, to render mirthful, to amuse: We will with some strange pastime solace them, ii. 207. *

solace, to be mirthful, to take pleasure: This sickly land might solace as before, v. 389; But one thing to rejoice and solace in, vi. 458; solace I the dungeon by a snuff, vii. 653.

solely, alone: Leave me solely, iii. 443. *

solicit Henry with her wondrous praise, v. 74; How he solicits heaven, Himself best knows, vii. 57; So tell him, with th' occurrents, more or less, Which have solicited—, vii. 210: "Solicit, like many other words derived from the Latin,—as religion for worship or service, &c.,—had not yet lost its strict Latin meaning." Walker's Crit. Exam. &c. vol. iii. p. 274; where the editor of that work adds the following note; "The original signification of the Latin word seems to have been to move, and the various meanings attached to it by lexicographers are but modifications of this primary one. In the language of Shakespeare, Edward solicited, or moved, heaven by means known to himself [vii. 57]; Suffolk proposed to solicit, or move, Henry by speaking of the wonderful endowments of Margaret [v. 74]; and Hamlet, though his speech was cut short by death, seems to have been thinking of the events that had solicited, or moved, him to recommend Fortinbras as successor to the throne [vii. 210]." The meaning of solicited, as used by the dying Hamlet, is uncertain.

soliciting, solicitation, "incitement" (JOHNSON): This supernatural soliciting, vii. 11.

solicitings, solicitations,—courtship: hath his solicitings . . . All given to mine ear, vii. 135.

solicits, solicitations,—courtship, vii. 661.

solidares, vi. 532: "I believe this coin is from the mint of the poet" (STEEVENS): Is it worth while to mention that Florio, in his Ital. and Engl. Dict., has "Soldo, a coine called a sould or shilling"?

solve, solution, viii. 383. (I find that here the Cambridge editors print soil, because "as the verb 'to soil' is not uncommon in old English, meaning 'to solve,' so the substantive 'soil' may be used in the sense of 'solution:'" but surely the reading of the quarto "soyle" is more likely to be a misprint for "solve" than for "soyle," which is substituted in ed. 1640.)

sometime, sometimes: sometime he angers me, iv. 250; Sometime he talks as if, &c. v. 162; Sometime she gallops, vi. 403; sometime comes she, ibid.; Sometime she driveth, ibid.; Which sometime hath sort, to bring to a good issue, (and simply) to bring to an issue: But God sort all! ii. 411; if God sort it so, v. 389.

sort, to fall out, to happen in the issue: if it sort not well, ii. 124; I am glad that all things sort so well, ii. 142; And so far am I glad it so did sort, ii. 301; Sort how it will, v. 119.

sortance, suitability, agreement, iv. 363. *

sorted to no proof—And all my pains is, "And all my labour has ended in nothing, or proved nothing" (JOHNSON): "Rather—all my labour is adapted to no approval, or I have taken all this pains without approbation" (DOUCE), iii. 160.

sorts, classes or orders of persons: of all sorts enchantingly beloved, iii. 9.

sorts, "different degrees" (STEEVENS), "portions or companies" (DOUCE): They have a king, and officers of sorts, iv. 430.

sot, a fool, i. 212, 378; ii. 20; iii. 338, 390; vii. 315; sots, vii. 726.

Soto, iii. 108: Theobald supposes that this means the Soto in Beaumont and Fletcher's Woman Pleased, "who," he observes, "is a farmer's son, and a very facetious servingman:" but, as Tyrwhitt remarks, the Soto in that play "does not woo any gentlewoman."

soud, soud, soud, soud, soud! iii. 153: "These words seem merely intended to denote the humming of a tune, or some kind of ejaculation, for which it is not necessary to find out a meaning" (MASON): "This, I believe, is a word coined by our poet, to express the noise made by a person heated and fatigued" (MALONE).

spirit of sense, vi. 7, 56 : see note 6, vi. 102.

spit white, iv. 325 : "The meaning of the words is plain ; but the application of them may be doubted, when Falstaff says that, when the armies join,

'If it be a hot day, an I brandish anything but my bottle, I would I might never spit white again.' 2 Hen. IV. i. 2.

His meaning is, may I never again have wine enough to produce that effect : or rather, perhaps, may I never have a debauch overnight, to make me thirsty in the morning. I fear we must condemn the intemperance of our ancestors, when we find that this effect was often observed and alluded to. Spungius says, in Mas-singer, 'Had I been a pagan still, I should not have spit white for want of drink.' Virg. Mart. iii. 8.

That is, for want of more drink, to remedy the effect of what he had taken before. It was noticed also as a consequence of habitual intemperance. The unlucky pages in Lyly's Mother Bom-bie say that their masters had sodden their livers in sack for forty years, and 'That makes them spit white broath, as they do.' Act iii. sc. 1."

*Nares's Gloss.

spoom her before the wind, make her go right before the wind without any sail, viii. 162. (Vide Smith's Sea-man's Grammar, &c. 1691, p. 82 :—but it is doubtful if "spoom" be the true reading in the present passage.)

spoon,—I have no long, i. 205; he must have a long spoon that must eat with the devil, ii. 37: Ray gives this well-known proverb thus, "He had need of a long spoon that eats with the devil." Proverbs, p. 97, ed. 1768: Tyrwhitt cites from Chaucer's Squieres Tale, 10,916,

"Therefore behoveth him a ful long sponne That shal ete with a fend."

spoons—Come, come, my lord, you'd spare your, v. 567; The spoons will be the bigger, sir, v. 568: Spoons of silver gilt—called apostle-spoons because the figure of an apostle was carved at the extremity of the handle of each—were in the time of Shakespeare (and much earlier) the usual present of sponsors at christenings to the child: "Such," says Steevens, "as were at once opulent and generous, gave the whole twelve [apostles]; those who were either more moderately rich or liberal, escaped at the expense of the four evangelists; or even sometimes contented themselves with presenting one spoon only, which exhibited the figure of any saint, in honour of whom the child received its name." Even in Dryden's days the practice of sponsors giving spoons at christenings was not obsolete: In the London curiosity-shops apostle-spoons are still occasionally to be seen.

spot—A fine, vi. 146: see note 32, vi. 243.

springhalt, v. 498: Or "stringhalt. This is a sudden and spasmodic action of some of the muscles of the thigh when the horse is first led from the stable. One or both legs are caught up at every step with great rapidity and violence, so that the fetlock sometimes touches the belly; but, after the horse has been out a little while, this usually goes off, and the natural action of the animal returns. In a few cases it does not perfectly disappear after exercise, but the horse continues to be slightly lame." The Horse, by Youatt, p. 151, ed. 1848.

spited with a fool, "haunted by a fool as by a sprite" (STEEVENS), vii. 664.

square of sense, vii. 251: see note 6, vii. 347.

square on't—The work about the, iii. 472: Tollet explains this to mean "the work or embroidery about the bosom part of a shift;" and he cites from Fairfax's translation of Tasso's Gerusalemme, B. xii. 64,

"Between her breasts the cruel weapon rives Her curious square, emboss'd with swelling gold," an apt enough quotation; but probably he never looked into the original, which throws no light on the word square;

"E la veste, che d' or vago trapunta, Le mammelle stringea tenera e leve, L' empie d' un caldo fiume."

square, to quarrel: But they do square, ii. 275; such fools To square for this, vi. 300; 'Twas pregnant they should square, vii. 514; Mine honesty and I begin to square, vii. 557.

stablishment, an establishment, a settled inheritance, a kingdom, vii. 545.

staff . . . broke cross: see break cross, &c.

staff more reverend than one tipped with horn—No, ii. 145: Douce was the first who made an approach towards the true interpretation of this passage: "it is possible," he observed, "that the walking-sticks or staves used by elderly people might be intended, which were often headed or tipped with a cross piece of horn or sometimes amber. They seem to have been imitated from the crutched sticks, or potences as they were called, used by the friars, and by them borrowed from the celebrated tau of Saint Anthony:" "The double meaning," says Mr. Halliwell, "is obvious,—the Prince, when he marries, as Benedick jocularly implies, will be tipped with horn, and no staff is more reverend than one so fashioned."

stage, to exhibit publicly, to represent on the stage, i. 447; vii. 593; staged, vii. 557.

stagger, to make to stagger, to make to reel: That staggers thus my person, iv. 180.

staggers, a kind of apoplexy which attacks horses, commencing with dulness, staggering, sleepiness, and sometimes ending with convulsions and blindness: see The Horse, by Youatt, pp. 188-9, &c., ed. 1848: "A violent disease in horses; hence, metaphorically, any staggering or agitating distress." Nares's Gloss.: stark spoiled with the staggers, iii. 144; I will throw thee from my care for ever Into the staggers ("One species of the staggers, or the horse's apoplexy, is a raging impatience, which makes the animal dash himself with a destructive violence against posts or walls. To this the allusion, I suppose, is [here] made" (JOHNSON), iii. 234; How come these staggers (this "wild and delirious perturbation," JOHNSON) on me? vii. 728.

stale, a stalking-horse, a pretence, a mask (see stalking-horse): poor I am but his stale ("Adriana unquestionably means to compare herself to a stalking-horse, behind whom [which] Antipholus shoots at such game as he selects," MALONE), ii. 15.

stale, a cant term for a prostitute: a contaminated stale, ii. 95; a common stale, ii. 119 (Compare

"For what is she but a common stall [stale], That lones thee for thy coine, not for thy name?
Such lone is beastly, rotten, blind, and lame."

The Faire Maide of Bristow, 1605, sig. A 3 verso).

stale, seems to be nearly equivalent to "laughing-stock" in the following passages: "I pray you, sir, is it your will To make a stale of me amongst these mates? (where stale is generally and wrongly explained "harlot;" and where I once thought that Katherine meant; "Is it your will to set me up as a decoy among these fellows, in order that, if you can get either of them to marry me, you may carry out your project with respect to my sister's marriage"), iii. 115; Had he none else to make a stale but me? Then none but I shall turn his jest to sorrow, v. 287; I'll trust, by leisure, him that mocks me once . . . Was there none else in Rome to make a stale, But Saturnine? vi. 291.

stale, to render stale, to make cheap or common: Must not so stale his palm, nobly acquir'd, vi. 41; To stale't a little longer, vi. 137; To stale with ordinary oaths my love, vi. 619; nor custom stale Her infinite variety, vii. 522; out of use, and stal'd by other men, vi. 664.

stalk, to creep stealthily and stoopingly, as the fowler does towards his game: stalk on, stalk on; the fowl sits, ii. 98 (Here, we see, Shakespeare uses stalk as a fowler's term; but that it was also a hunter's term might be shown by quotations from various old writers, besides the following one from a very early poem, The Weddyng of Sir Gawen and Dame Ragnell;

"The hartt was in a bracken ferne,
And hard the boundes and stode full derne:
Alle that sawe the kyng [i. e. Arthur];—
'Hold you styll euery man,
And I woll goo my self, yf I can,
With craft of stalkyng.'
The kyng in his hand toke a bowe,
And wodmanly he stowpyd lowe,
To stalk vnto that dere," &c.

Madden's Sir Gawayne, p. 298e).

stalking-horse, either a real horse or an artificial one, under cover of which the fowler approached towards and shot at his game: He uses his folly like a stalking-horse, iii. 74. ("It is particularly described in the Gentleman's Recreation; 'But sometime it so happeneth that the fowl are so shie, there is no getting to shoot at them without a stalking-horse, which must be some old jade trained up for that purpose, who will, gently, and as you will have him, walk up and down in the water, which way you please, fodding [qy. ?] and eating on the grass that grows therein.' Fowling, p. 16, 8vo. He [sic] then directs how to shoot between the horse's neck and the water, as more secure and less perceivable than shooting under his belly. But 'To supply the want of a stalking-horse, which will take up a great deal of time to instruct and make fit for this exercise, you may make one of any pieces of old canvas, which you must shape into the form of an horse, with the head bending downwards, as if he grazed, &c.' Ibid. He directs also to make it light and portable, and to colour it like a horse." Nares's Gloss. in v.)

stall, to dwell: we could not stall together In the whole world, vii. 585.

stall, to keep as in a stall, to keep close: stall this in your bosom, iii. 218.

stall, to install, to invest: Deck'd in thy rights, as thou art stall'd in mine! v. 368.

stamp about their necks—Hanging a golden, vii. 57: "This was the coin called an angel. So Shakespeare, in The Merchant of Venice [act ii. sc. 6];

'A coin that bears the figure of an angel Stamp'd in gold,' &c."

(STEEVENS):

and see third angel.

(With the above passages compare Drayton's Battle of Agincourt,

"And therefore now it standeth them upon,
To fight it bravely, or else yeeld, or dye." p. 44, ed. 1627:

and Shelton's translation of Don Quixote, "Tel me your name; for it stands me very much upon to know it." Part Second, p. 482, ed. 1620: Even Horace Walpole writes to the Countess of Ossory, Oct. 19, 1788, "It stands me upon, Madam, to hurry my answer, when I have to thank you for your very pretty and very flattering poetry." Letters, vol. ix. p. 155, ed. Cunningham.)

steely bones—Virtue's, iii. 209: see note 12, iii. 288.

steepy night—Hath travell'd on to age's, viii. 380: "So in the 7th Sonnet,

'Lo, in the orient, when the gracious light Lifts up his burning head—
And having climb'd the steep-up heavenly hill, Resembling strong youth in his middle age—'.

These lines fully explain what the poet meant by the steepy night of age" (MALONE).

stell'd, A face where all distress is, viii. 328; hath stell'd thy beauty's form in table of my heart, viii. 361: In these passages stell'd (a doubtful reading?) is explained "fixed,"—from stell a "lodge, or fixed place of abode:" see Nares's Gloss.

stelled, starry, vii. 310.

stem, the prow or fore-part of a ship ("The stem of a ship, Nos-trum," Coles's Lat. and Engl. Dict.): And fell below his stem, vi. 169; From stem to stern, viii. 47.

stones in heaven But what serve for the thunder?—Are there no, vii. 466: see thunder-stone.

stonish'd, astonished, viii. 266.

stool-ball, viii. 200: "Stool-ball is frequently mentioned by the writers of the three last centuries, but without any proper definition of the game. Doctor Johnson [in his Dict.] tells us, it is a play where balls are driven from stool to stool, but does not say in what manner or to what purpose. I have been informed, that a pastime called stool-ball is practised to this day in the northern parts of England, which consists in simply setting a stool upon the ground, and one of the players takes his place before it, while his antagonist, standing at a distance, tosses a ball with the intention of striking the stool; and this it is the business of the former to prevent by beating it away with the hand, reckoning one to the game for every stroke of the ball; if, on the contrary, it should be missed by the hand and touch the stool, the players change places [Note. I believe the same also happens if the person who threw the ball can catch and retain it when driven back, before it reaches the ground]; the conqueror at this game is he who strikes the ball most times before it touches the stool. Again, in other parts of the country a certain number of stools are set up in a circular form, and at a distance from each other, and every one of them is occupied by a single player; when the ball is struck, which is done as before with the hand, they are every one of them obliged to alter his situation, running in succession from stool to stool, and if he who threw the ball can regain it in time to strike any one of the players, before he reaches the stool to which he is running, he takes his place, and the person touched must throw the ball, until he can in like manner return to the circle. Stool-ball seems to have been a game more properly appropriated to the women than to the men; but occasionally it was played by the young persons of both sexes indiscriminately," &c. Strutt's Sports and Pastimes, p. 89, sec. ed.

stoop, a term in falconry—to rush down violently from a height in the air upon the prey ("Stoup, or Stouping on the Wing, is when the Hawk is aloft upon her wings, and then descends to strike her Prey." R. Holme's Acad. of Armory and Blazon (Terms of Art used in Falconry, &c.), B. ii. ch. xi. p. 240): till she stoop, she must not be full-gorg'd, iii. 155; when they stoop, they stoop with the like wing, iv. 472; the way which they stoop'd eagles, vii. 713; the holy eagle Stoop'd as to foot us, vii. 718.

stoop, or stoup, sometimes used to signify a cup, sometimes a much larger vessel, iii. 345; vii. 194, 404; stoops, vii. 207.

store—For, "To be preserved for use" (MALONE): those whom Nature hath not made for store, viii. 354.

storm of fortunes, braving of fortunes, vii. 390: see note 23, vii. 474.

story, to relate, to give an account of: stories His victories, viii. 273 (and see note 6, viii. 280); He stories to her ears her husband's fame, viii. 290; rather than story him in his own hearing, vii. 644.

stout, unbending, obstinate, stubborn: I will be strange, stout (haughty), in yellow stockings, iii. 359 (see note 60, iii. 404); For grief is proud, and makes his owner stout, iv. 30; As stout and proud as he were lord of all, v. 114; correcting thy stout heart, vi. 192.

stoutness, obstinacy, stubbornness: Thy dangerous stoutness, vi. 194; his stoutness When he did stand for consul, vi. 234.

stover, i. 220: "Stover. Fodder and provision of all sorts for cattle; from estovers, law-term, which is so explained in the Law Dictionaries. Both are derived from estouvier, in the old French, defined by Roquefort, 'Convenance, nécessité, provision de tout ce qui est nécessaire.' Dictionn. de la Langue Rom." Nares's Gloss.: "Stover (in Cambridgeshire and other counties) signifies hay made of coarse rank grass, such as even cows will not eat while it is green. Stover is likewise used as thatch for cart-lodges and other buildings that deserve but rude and cheap coverings" (STEEVENS): "Stover, Pabulum." Coles's Lat. and Engl. Dict.

Strachy—The lady of the, iii. 356: An allusion to some story which is not now known. Hanmer thought that Strachy "should be perhaps Stratarch, which (as well as Strategue) signifies a general of an army, a commander-in-chief:" Payne Knight remarked; "The Governors employed by the Greek Emperors in Sicily and Italy, from the sixth to the tenth century, were called ΣΤΡΑΤΗΓΟΙ, Generals or Prætors, corrupted by the Italians, partly through their own, and partly through the Byzantine pronunciation, to stratici, pronounced stratichi; which continued to be a title of magistracy in many states long afterwards; and this word strachy, which has so puzzled all the commentators, is only a further corruption of it acquired in its passage through successive French and English translations of some old Italian novel, in which the widow of one of those magistrates had married an inferior officer of her household. See Giannone, Hist. di Napoli, l. xi. c. vi. : "The lady of the Strachy," writes Mr. Halliwell, "is the lawyer's or judge's lady or widow. The term is now only preserved in the Russian language; but it was probably taken by Shakespeare from some novel or play, upon which he may have founded the comic incidents of this drama. '[Corroboration can, however, be derived] from the list of all the Crown servants of Russia, sent every year to the State Secretary of the Home Department at St. Petersburg; in which, for 1825 and 1826, Procureur Botwinko was reported to be imprisoned at Vilna for the above case, and that the Strapchy of Oszmiana was acting in his stead as Procureur pro tem.' Household Words, March 15th, 1851." (After all, are we not as far as ever from having ascertained the meaning of Strachy?) straight—Make her grave, vii. 192: Here straight, which Johnson erroneously explains "from east to west in a direct line parallel to the church," means merely "straightway, immediately."

straight-pight, straight - pitched, straight - built, upright (see pight), vii. 726.

strain, a turn, a tendency, an inborn disposition: unless he know some strain (evil tendency, "vicious conduct," GIFFORD, Intro. to Ford's Works, p. cxlvii.) in me, i. 361; all of the same strain, i. 385; so degenerate a strain as this, vi. 34; your valiant strain, vii. 337 (in this passage Mr. Grant White explains strain "lineage;" but would Albany here compliment on his "lineage" the man whom he soon after calls "half-blooded fellow"?).

strain, a stock, a race, a lineage: he is of a noble strain, ii. 94; he is bred out of that bloody strain, iv. 446; The strain of man's bred out Into baboon and monkey ("Man is exhausted and degenerated; his strain or lineage has worn down into a monkey," JOHNSON,—who in his Dict. quotes this passage as an example of "strain" meaning "hereditary disposition"), vi. 514; the noblest of thy strain, vi. 677; of what a noble strain you are, viii. 53.

strain, &c.—And, in the publication, make no, vi. 25: "'And make no difficulty, no doubt, when this duel comes to be proclaimed, but that Achilles, dull as he is, will discover the drift of it.' So afterwards, in this play, Ulysses says,

'I do not strain at the position,'

i. e. I do not hesitate at, I make no difficulty of it" (THEOBALD).

strain courtesy, vi. 419; viii. 268: On the latter passage now referred to, Mr. Staunton observes; "When any one hesitated to take the post of honour in a perilous undertaking, he was sarcastically said to strain courtesy. Turberville applies the expression to dogs, as Shakespeare does; 'for many hounds will strain courtesy at this chase.'" strain'd, t' appear thus—With what encounter so uncurrent I Have: see encounter so uncurrent, &c.

strains of honour—The fine, "The niceties, the refinements [of honour]" (JOHNSON), vi. 229.

strait, strict, rigorous: some strait decrees, iv. 271; such a strait edict, v. 159; his creditors most strait, vi. 510; Proceed no straiter 'gainst our uncle Gloster, v. 153.

strait, niggardly: you are so strait, And so ingrateful, you deny me that, iv. 74.

straited For a reply, Put to difficulty, puzzled for a reply, iii. 476.

strange, coy, shy, reserved: Or strange, or self-affected! vi. 42; more cunning to be strange, vi. 412; I should have been more strange, ibid.; strange love, grown bold, vi. 433: and see make strange.

strange, foreign, a stranger: As strange unto your town as to your talk, ii. 19; he is strange and peevish, vii. 652; I am something curious, being strange, vii. 656.

strange Even to the disposition that I owe, &c.—You make me, vii. 42: "'You prove to me that I am a stranger even to my own disposition, when I perceive that the very object which steals the colour from my cheek permits it to remain in yours.' In other words, 'You prove to me how false an opinion I have hitherto maintained of my own courage, when yours, on the trial, is found to exceed it'" (STEEVENS): "'You render me a stranger to, or forgetful of, that brave disposition which I know I possess, and make me fancy myself a coward, when I perceive that I am terrified by a sight which has not in the least alarmed you'" (MALONE): "I believe it only means, 'you make me amazed'" (REED): "To owe here means to own or possess. The sense expressed is, You make me feel as strange or unnatural, the very disposition to fear, which belongs or is natural to me on beholding such sights, when I see you so wholly unaffected by them" (ELWIN).

strangely, "Used by way of commendation, merveilleusement, 'to a wonder'" (JOHNSON): Hast strangely stood the test, i. 218.

strangely, with a distant reserved manner: pass strangely by him, vi. 54.

strangeness, coyness, shyness, distant behaviour, reserve: ungird thy strangeness, iii. 378; the savage strangeness he puts on, vi. 39; your strangeness and his pride, vi. 54; in strangeness stand no further off, vii. 416; She puts on outward strangeness, viii. 249; Measure my strangeness with my unripe years, viii. 256.

strangle—I will acquaintance, "I will put an end to our familiarity" (MALONE), viii. 393.

strangle thy propriety—That makes thee: see propriety.

strappado—The, iv. 238: "The Half Strappado is to have the Mans hands tyed cross behind his Back, and so by them to be drawn up to a considerable height, and so let down again; this, in the least of it, cannot but pull either the Shoulders or Elbows or both out of Joynt.—The Whole Strappado is when the person is drawn up to his height, and then suddenly to let him fall half-way with a jerk, which not only breaketh his Arms to pieces, but also shaketh all his Joynts out of Joint; which Punishment is [sic] better to be Hanged than for a Man to undergo." R. Holme's Academy of Armory and Blazon, B. iii. c. vii. p. 310: "It was," observes Douce, "a military punishment. . . . The term is evidently taken from the Italian strappare, to pull or draw with violence."

stratagem, a dreadful, a disastrous event, a calamity: the father of some stratagem, iv. 314; What stratagems, how fell, how butcherly, v. 267.

strawy, straw-like, no better than straw, vi. 94.

stray, "act of wandering" (Johnson's Dict.), a dereliction: I would not from your love make such a stray, &c. vii. 255.

stray, stragglers: pursue the scatter'd stray, iv. 373.

stray, to make to stray, to mislead: Hath not else his eye Stray'd his affection, &c. ii. 44.

strength of limit, "the limited degree of strength which it is customary for women to acquire before they are suffered to go abroad after child-bearing" (MASON), iii. 452.

stretch our eye—How shall we, "How wide must we open our eyes" (JOHNSON), iv. 439.

stricture, strictness, i. 453.

stride, to over-stride, to over-pass: To stride a limb, vii. 677.

strike (a naval term), to lower the sails: And yet we strike not, but securely perish, iv. 129; Than bear so low a sail, to strike to thee, v. 306 (The second passage at least includes the idea of lowering the colours in token of surrender).

strike, "to blast or affect by sudden and secret influence" (Nares's Gloss.): then ne planets strike, vii. 108.

strike, to tap: Strike the vessels, ho! vii. 535 (Weber was the first to explain rightly the meaning of strike in this line, comparing it with a passage in Fletcher's Monsieur Thomas, act v. sc. 10, "Home, Launce, and strike a fresh piece of wine:" that it should have puzzled Johnson, Steevens, Ritson, and Holt White, is the more extraordinary, because the word occurs with the same signification in a well-known modern poem ;

" L'Avare, not using half his store,
Still grumbles that he has no more ;
Strikes not the present tun, for fear
The vintage should be had next year," &c.

Prior's Alma, C. iii.).

strikers—No long-staff, sixpenny, iv. 225, "No fellows that infest the road with long staffs, and knock men down for sixpence" (JOHNSON) : Cotgrave has "Haut à la main . . . a striker, one with whom there is but a word and a blow." Fr. and Engl. Dict. : "A striker had some cant signification with which at present we are not exactly acquainted. It is used in several of the old plays. I rather believe in this place, 'no six-penny striker' signifies 'not one who would content himself to borrow, i. e. rob you for the sake of six-pence.' That to borrow was the cant phrase for to steal, is well known ; and that to strike likewise signified to borrow, let the following passage in Shirley's Gentleman of Venice confirm ;

'Cor. You had [were] best assault me too.

Mal. I must borrow money,
And that some call a striking,' &c.

Again, in Glapthorne's Hollander, 1640 ;

'The only shape to hide a striker in.'

Again, in an old Ms. play [printed in 1824] entitled The Second Maiden's Tragedy ;

'one that robs the mind,

Twenty times worse than any highway striker' " (STEEVENS) :

"In Greene's Art of Coneycatching, 1592, under the table of Cant Expressions used by Thieves ; '—the cutting a pocket or picking a purse is called striking ;' again, '—who taking a proper youth to be his prentice, to teach him the order of striking and foisting' " (COLLINS) : "See also The London Prodigal, 1605 ; 'Nay, now I have had such a fortunate beginning, I'll not let a six-penny-purse escape me' " (MALONE).

strings to your beards—Good, ii. 311 : The strings were to prevent the false beards from falling off.

strong, determined : Strong and fasten'd villain ! vii. 276.

strossers—In your strait, In your tight close drawers, iv. 465 : Theobald thought that here strait strossers meant "naked skin ;" but he was certainly mistaken, for these Irish strossers (a form of trossers) are frequently mentioned : he also altered strossers to trossers,—an improper alteration which Mr. Collier persists in retaining ("ij payer of black strocers." Inventory of theatrical dresses,—Malone's Shakespeare, by Boswell, vol. iii. p. 310 : "Nor the Danish sleeve sagging down like a Welch wallet, the Italian's close strosser, nor the French standing collar." Dekker's Gull's Hornbook, p. 40, reprint, 1812: "Or, like a toiling, usurer, sets his son a-horseback in cloth-of-gold breeches, while he himself goes to the devil a-foot in a pair of old strossers." Middleton's No Wit, no Help like a Woman's, act ii. sc. 1, Works, vol. v. p. 39, ed. Dyce).

stroy'd, destroyed, vii. 554.

stuck, more properly stock, an abbreviation of stoccado; see first stock: he gives me the stuck-in with such a mortal motion, iii. 374; your venom'd stuck, vii. 191.

stuck upon him, as the sun, &c.—It (i. e. His honour), iv. 339; and therein stuck A sun and moon, vii. 589: To modern readers there is perhaps something odd in this use of the word stuck; but it was familiar enough to those of Shakespeare's days;

"While Lucifer fore-shewes Auroras springs, And Arctos stickes about the earth vnmon'd," &c.

Chapman's Byrons Tragedie, sig. x 4 verso, ed. 1608:

"No black-eyed star must sticke in vertues spheare."

Dekker's Satiromastix, 1602, sig. x 2.

stuff, luggage, movables: fetch our stuff from thence, ii. 42; to get our stuff aboard, ibid.

stuffed, filled, stored: stuffed with all honourable virtues, ii. 76; Of stuff'd sufficiency, "Of abilities more than enough" (JOHNSON), iii. 440.

subscribe, "to agree to" (STEEVENS): As I subscribe not that, nor any other, But in the loss of question, 474: and see note 74, i. 532.

subscribe, to yield, to give way, to surrender: when I had subscrib'd To mine own fortune, iii. 279; subscrib'd his power! vii. 258; All cruels else subscrib'd (all cruelty or inhumanity "yielded, submitted to the necessity of the occasion," JOHNSON), vii. 310; Hector . . . subscribes To tender objects, vi. 75; Death to me subscribes, viii. 402.

subscribe for thee—To the possibility of thy soldiership, will, iii. 254: "'I will subscribe' (says Bertram) 'to the possibility of your soldiership.' His doubts being now raised, he suppresses that he should not be so willing to vouch for its probability" (STEEVENS): "I believe Bertram means no more than that he is confident Parolles will do all that soldiership can effect. He was not yet certain that he was 'a hilding'" (MALONE).

subscription, submission, obedience, vii. 295.

substance, Whose grossness little characters sum up, vi. 25: "Substance is estate, the value of which is ascertained by the use of small characters, i. e. numerals. So, in the Prologue to King Henry V.,

‘a crooked figure may

Attest, in little space, a million.’

The gross sum is a term used in The Merchant of Venice [no:—in The Sec. Part of K. Henry IV. act ii. sc. 1: "the gross" occurs in The Merchant of Venice, act i. sc. 3]. Grossness has the same meaning in this instance" (STEEVENS).

substractors, detractors, iii. 331.

subtilities o' th' isle—You do yet taste Some, i. 229: "This is a phrase adopted from ancient cookery and confectionary. When a dish was so contrived as to appear unlike what it really was, they called it a subtilty. Dragons, castles, trees, &c. made out of sugar, had the like denomination. See Mr. Pegge's Glossary to the Form of Cury, &c., Article Sotiltees. Froissart complains much of this practice, which often led him into mistakes at dinner," &c. (STEEVENS).

subtle, smooth: Like to a bowl upon a subtle ground, vi. 222 (where Johnson, in his Dict., and Malone understand subtle to mean "deceitful").

succeeding, a consequence: not to be understood without bloody succeeding, iii. 235.

success, a succession: In whose success we are gentle (By succession from whom we have our gentility), iii. 432; success of mischief shall be born, iv. 370.

success, the issue, the sequel, the consequence of a thing: success Will fashion the event, ii. 124; give me leave to try success, iii. 222; their opinions of success, vi. 640; Mistrust of my success (of what had been the issue with me), vi. 682; Mistrust of good success, ibid.; My speech should fall into such vile success, vii. 422; what is the success? vii. 544.

successantly, vi. 338: see note 135, vi. 374.

successive title—My, "My title to the succession" (MALONE), vi. 283.

successively, "by order of succession" (JOHNSON): So thou the garland wear'st successively, iv. 385; But as successively, from blood to blood, v. 413.

sudden, hasty, precipitately violent: her sudden quips, i. 306; sudden and quick in quarrel, iii. 34; Sudden, malicious, vii. 55; sudden in cholera, vii. 402.

sue his livery: see livery, &c.

suffered, allowed, not restrained: being suffer'd in that harmful slumber, v. 160; being suffer'd with (allowed to engage with) the bear's fell paw, v. 191; Which, being suffer'd, rivers cannot quench,

v. 303; Else, suffer'd, it will set the heart on fire, viii. 252: and see note 204, v. 228.

sufficiency—Of stuff'd: see stuffed.

sugar mixed with wine: see wine and sugar—Such.

suggest, to tempt, to incite, to seduce: suggest thee from thy master, iii. 272; Suggest ("Prompt, set on by injurious hints," STEEVENS) his soon-believing adversaries, iv. 107; suggest by treasons, iv. 441; We must suggest ("prompt," STEEVENS) the people in what hatred, &c. vi. 165; suggest at first with heavenly shows, vii. 413; do suggest me still, viii. 421; tender youth is soon suggested, i. 292; Suggested us to make them, ii. 232; what Eve, what serpent, hath suggested thee, iv. 155; Suggested this proud issue of a king, viii. 288; suggests the king our master, v. 489; sweet-suggesting Love, i. 287.

suggestion, temptation, seduction: They'll take suggestion ("any hint of villany," JOHNSON) as a cat laps milk, i. 201; the strong'st suggestion Our worser Genius can, i. 218; their blood, Mingled with venom of suggestion ("Though their blood be inflamed by the temptations to which youth is peculiarly subject," MALONE), iv. 377; why do I yield to that suggestion, vii. 11; Suggestions are to others as to me, ii. 167; in those suggestions for the young earl, iii. 249.

suggestion Tith'd all the kingdom—One that by, v. 550: "The word suggestion, says the critic [Dr. Warburton], is here used with great propriety and seeming knowledge of the Latin tongue: and he proceeds to settle the sense of it from the late Roman writers and their glossers. But Shakspeare's knowledge was from Holinshed, whom he follows verbatim; 'This cardinal was of a great stomach, for he computed himself equal with princes, and by craftie suggestions got into his hands innumerable treasure: he forced little on simonie, and was not pitifull, and stood affectionate in his own opinion: in open presence he would lie, and seie untruth, and was double both in speech and meaning: he would promise much and perform little: he was vicious of his bodie, and gave the clergie evil example.' Edit. 1587, p. 922" (STEEVENS): The above passage was borrowed by Holinshed from Hall: In the line of our text Nares (Gloss.) understands suggestion to mean "crafty device."

suit, a court-solicitation, a petition or request made to a prince or statesman: It is my only suit (with a quibble on the double meaning of suit—"apparel" and "petition"), iii. 31; And then dreams he of smelling out a suit, vi. 403; For obtaining of suits (repeated with a quibble on suits—"petitions" and "clothes of a person hanged"), iv. 212.

suit, a love-suit: Which late her noble suit in court did shun ("Who lately retired from the solicitation of her noble admirers," MALONE), viii. 446.

suit, suit-service, service due to a superior lord : Give notice to such men of sort and suit As are to meet him, i. 504 : "In the feudal times all vassals were bound to hold suit and service to their overlord ; that is, to be ready at all times to attend and serve him, either when summoned to his courts, or to his standard in war. 'Such men of sort and suit as are to meet him,' I presume, means the Duke's vassals or tenants in capite." Edinburgh Magazine, Nov. 1786 : and see second sort.

suit, to clothe, to dress : Description cannot suit itself in words, &c. iv. 479 ; suit myself As does a Briton peasant, vii. 711 ; one meaning well suited (one meaning put into different suits or dresses), ii. 135 ; How oddly he is suited ! ii. 351 ; richly suited, but unsuitable, iii. 211 ; So went he suited to his watery tomb, iii. 391 ; suit In like conditions as our argument, vi. 5 ; Be better suited (Put on better clothes), vii. 330.

sullens, moroseness : And let them die that age and sullens have, iv. 126 ("Like you, Pandion, who being sick of the sullens, will seek no friend." Lyly's Sapho and Phao, sig. D 2, ed. 1591).

sum—The, "Be brief, sum thy business in a few words" (JOHNSON), vii. 498.

sumless, not to be computed, inestimable, iv. 429.

summer's story, viii. 398 : "By a summer's story Shakspeare seems to have meant some gay fiction" (MALONE).

summoners, "officers that summon offenders before a proper tribunal" (STEEVENS), vii. 296.

sumpter, a horse to carry necessities on a journey, vii. 290.

sun—I am too much of the, vii. 110 : "He perhaps alludes to the proverb, 'Out of heaven's blessing into the warm sun'" (JOHNSON) : see heaven's benediction com'st To the warm sun !—Thou out of.

sun—Our half-fac'd, v. 167 : "Edward the third bare for his device the rays of the sun dispersing themselves out of a cloud." Camden's Remains concerning Britain, &c. (Impresses), p. 451, ed. 1674.

sun of York—Made glorious summer by this, v. 351 : An allusion to the cognisance of Edward IV. ; see the next article (Here perhaps a quibble was intended: compare, in The Third Part of King Henry VI. act ii. sc. 1, “henceforward will I bear Upon my target three fair-shining suns.

Rich. Nay, bear three daughters,” &c.).

suns P—Do I see three, v. 252: “This circumstance is mentioned both by Hall and Holinshed; ‘—at which tyme the son (as some write) appeared to the earle of March like three sunnes, and so dainely joyned altogither in one, uppon whiche sight hee tooke such courage, that he fiercely setting on his enemyes put them to flight; and for this cause menne ymaged that he gave the sun in his full bryghtnesse for his badge or cognisance.’ These are the words of Holinshed” (MALONE).

sun-burned, uncomely, homely, ill-favoured: I am sun-burned, ii. 93; The Grecian dames are sunburnt, vi. 24.

superfluous, possessed of more than enough: Cold wisdom waiting on superfluous folly (“Cold for naked, as superfluous for over-clothed,” WARBURTON; but see note 13, iii. 289), iii. 209; our basest beggars Are in the poorest thing superfluous, vii. 291; Let the superfluous (“one living in abundance,” WARBURTON) and lust-dieted man, vii. 314.

surfeiter, a glutton, a feaster, a reveller, vii. 514.

surmise, "speculation, conjecture concerning the future" (MALLONE) : function Is smother'd in surmise, vii. 12.

surplice of humility over the black gown of a big heart—It will wear the, iii. 217 : "This passage refers to the sour objection of the puritans to the use of the surplice in divine service, for which they wished to substitute the black Geneva gown. At this time the controversy with the puritans raged violently. Hooker's Fifth Book of Ecclesiastical Polity, which, in the 29th chapter, discusses this matter at length, was published in 1597. But the question itself is much older—as old as the Reformation," &c. Note signed "S." in Knight's Shakspeare.

sur-reined, over-reined, over-worked, iv. 458.

suspect, suspicion, ii. 24 ; v. 122, 146, 156, 292, 406 ; vi. 564 (twice) ; viii. 273, 384 (twice) ; suspects, v. 365.

suspiration, the act of drawing the breath from the bottom of the breast, vii. 110.

suspire, to breathe, iv. 43, 381.

sustaining garments—Their, i. 183 : This, I believe, means the garments that bore them up (not, as Mason supposes, their garments which bore, without being injured, the drenching of the sea).

swabber, a sweeper of the deck of a vessel, i. 203 ; iii. 340.

swag-bellied, having a large loose heavy belly, vii. 405.

swam in a gondola, iii. 56 : "That is, been at Venice" (JOHNSON).

swayed in the back, iii. 144 : "Of the swayings of the backe. This is called of the Italians mal feruto, and, according to Russius and Martins opinions, commeth either by some great straine, or else by heauey burthens : you shall perceive it by the reeling and rolling of the horses hinder parts in his going, which will faulter many times, and sway, sometime backward, and sometime sidel-ling, and bee ready to fall even to the ground, and the horse being laid, is scant able to get uppe," Blundevile's Order of Curing Horses Diseases, 1609 (quoted by Halliwell).

swear'st thy gods in vain—Thou, Thou swearest by thy gods, &c. vii. 253.

sweat—Till then I'll, vi. 100 : An allusion to the cure of the venereal disease by means of sweating : see tub.

sweat, what with the gallows,—What with the, i. 449 : Here, it would seem, the sweat means "the sweating-sickness," and not the method used for the cure of the venereal disease.

sweet-and-twenty, twenty times sweet, iii. 347 : A term of endearment : Steevens cites, from The Merry Devil of Edmonton, "his little wanton wagtailes, his sweet and twenties," &c.

sweet mouth—She hath a, i. 299 : Here a sweet mouth is equivalent to "a sweet tooth ;" but Launce, in his rejoinder, chooses to understand the words literally.

sweeting, a kind of sweet apple, and used as a term of endearment 'in all the passages now referred to, except the fourth,—iii. 160, 346 ; v. 47 ; vi. 420 ; vii. 410.

sweetmeats, perfumed sugar-plums (see kissing-comfits) : Because their breaths with sweetmeats tainted are, vi. 403 : and such perhaps is the meaning of sweetmeats, ii. 266.

sweetness—Their saucy, i. 472 : Here Steevens understands sweetness to mean "lickerishness."

swinged, whipped, beaten, chastised, i. 275, 300, 415 (twice), 510; iv. 20, 398 (twice).

Swinstead, iv. 69: The name ought to be Swineshead: but the error was derived from the old play, The Troublesome Raigne of Iohn, &c. (see iv. 3), and from ballads concerning that king.

Swithold, vii. 301: The contraction of Saint Withold (supposed by Tyrwhitt to mean St. Vitalis), who, it appears, was commonly invoked against the nightmare.

Switzers, vii. 182: The Swiss in Shakespeare's days, as in recent times, were ready to serve for pay in any part of Europe.

swoop, the sudden descent of a bird of prey on its quarry, vii. 60.

swoopstake, "by wholesale, undistinguishingly" (CALDECOTT), vii. 183.

sword, nor hatchment o'er his bones—No trophy, vii. 185: "It was the custom, in the times of our author, to hang a sword over the grave of a knight" (JOHNSON): "This practice is uniformly kept up to this day," &c. (SIR J. HAWKINS).

sword—To swear by a: "The singular mixture of religious and military fanaticism which arose from the crusades, gave rise to the extraordinary custom of taking a solemn oath upon a sword. In a plain unenriched sword, the separation between the blade and the hilt was usually a straight transverse bar, which, suggesting the idea of a cross, added to the devotion which every true knight felt for his favourite weapon, and evidently led to this practice; of which the instances are too numerous to be collected. The sword, or the blade, were often mentioned in this ceremony, without reference to the cross." Nares's Gloss.: "In consequence of the practice of occasionally swearing by a sword, or, rather by the cross or upper end of it, the name of Jesus was sometimes inscribed on the handle or some other part. Such an instance occurs on the monument of a crusader in the vestry of the church at Winchelsea," &c. (DOUCE): Swear by this sword, iii. 447; Swear by my sword, vii. 126 (twice): Hence Falstaff says jestingly that Glendower swore the devil his true liegeman upon the cross of a Welsh hook, iv. 241; see Welsh hook, &c. (The custom of swearing by a sword prevailed even among the barbarous worshippers of Odin; "The Scythians commonly substituted a sword as the most proper symbol to represent the supreme god. It was by planting a spear in the middle of a field, that they usually marked out the place set apart for prayers and sacrifices: and when they had relaxed from their primitive strictness, so far as to build temples and set up idols in them, they yet preserved some traces of the ancient custom, by putting a sword in the hands of Odin's statues. The respect they had for their arms made them also swear by instruments so valuable and so useful, as being the most sacred things they knew. Accordingly, in an ancient Icelandic poem, a Scandinavian, to assure himself of a person's good faith, requires him to swear 'by the shoulder of a horse, and the edge of a sword.' This oath was usual more especially on the eve of some great engagement: the soldiers engaged themselves by an oath of this kind, not to flee though their enemies should be never so superior in number." Mallet's Northern Antiquities, &c., transl. by Percy, vol. i. p. 216, ed. 1770).

sword-and-buckler Prince of Wales—That same, That same Prince of Wales who brawls and fights in the lowest company, iv. 221: "Upon the introduction of the rapier and dagger, the sword-and-buckler fell into desuetude among the higher classes, and were accounted fitting weapons for the vulgar only, such as Hotspur implies were the associates of the prince" (STAUNTON). ("My olde master kept a good house, and twenty or thirty tall sword and buckler men about him." Wilkins's Miseries of Inforst Marriage, sig. E 4, ed. 1629.) sworder, a swordsman, a cutthroat, a gladiator, v. 168; vii. 557.

sword-hilts: see hilts.

sworn brother, an expression originally derived from the fratres jurati, who, in the days of chivalry, mutually bound themselves by oath to share each other's fortune, ii. 76; iii. 483; iv. 166, 232, 362; sworn brothers, iv. 434, 452.

Fitzwater then throws down his gage, a pledge of battle; and tells him that if he stands upon sympathies, that is, upon equality of blood, the combat is now offered him by a man of rank not inferior to his own. Sympathy is an affection incident at once to two subjects. This community of affection implies a likeness or equality of nature, and thence our poet transferred the term to equality of blood" (JOHNSON).

tale, my lord: "it is not so, nor 'twas not so; but indeed, God forbid it should be so"—Like the old, ii. 80: "I believe none of the commentators have understood this; it is an allusion, as the speaker says, to an old tale, which may perhaps be still extant in some collections of such things, or which Shakespeare may have heard, as I have, related by a great-aunt, in his childhood.

"Once upon a time, there was a young lady (called Lady Mary in the story), who had two brothers. One summer they all three went to a country-seat of theirs, which they had not before visited. Among the other gentry in the neighbourhood who came to see them was a Mr. Fox, a bachelor, with whom they, particularly the young lady, were much pleased. He used often to dine with them, and frequently invited Lady Mary to come and see his house. One day that her brothers were absent elsewhere, and she had nothing better to do, she determined to go thither; and accordingly set out unattended. When she arrived at the house, and knocked at the door, no one answered. At length she opened it, and went in; over the portal of the hall was written 'Be bold, be bold, but not too bold.' she advanced; over the staircase, the same inscription: she went up; over the entrance of a gallery, the same: she proceeded; over the door of a chamber 'Be bold, be bold, but not too bold, lest that your heart's blood should run cold.' She opened it; it was full of skeletons, tubs full of blood, &c. She retreated in haste: coming down stairs, she saw out of a window Mr. Fox advancing towards the house, with a drawn sword in one hand, while with the other he dragged along a young lady by her hair. Lady Mary had just time to slip down, and hide herself under the stairs, before Mr. Fox and his victim arrived at the foot of them. As he pulled the young lady up stairs, she caught hold of one of the banisters with her hand, on which was a rich bracelet. Mr. Fox cut it off with his sword: the hand and bracelet fell into Lady Mary's lap, who then contrived to escape unobserved, and got home safe to her brother's house. After a few days, Mr. Fox came to dine with them as usual (whether by invitation, or of his own accord, this deponent saith not). After dinner, when the guests began to amuse each other with extraordinary anecdotes, Lady Mary at length said, she would relate to them a remarkable dream she had lately had. I dreamt, said she, that as you, Mr. Fox, had often invited me to your house, I would go there one morning. When I came to the house, I knocked, &c., but no one answered. When I opened the door, over the hall was written 'Be bold, be bold, but not too bold.' But, said she, turning to Mr. Fox, and smiling, 'It is not so, nor it was not so;' then she pursues the rest of the story, concluding at every turn with 'It is not so, nor it was not so,' till she comes to the room full of dead bodies, when Mr. Fox took up the burden of the tale, and said 'It is not so, nor it was not so, and God forbid it should be so:' which he continues to repeat at every subsequent turn of the dreadful story, till she came to the circumstance of his cutting off the young lady's hand, when, upon his saying as usual, 'It is not so, nor it was not so, and God forbid it should be so,' Lady Mary retorts, 'But it is so, and it was so, and here the hand I have to show,' at the same time producing the hand and bracelet from her lap: whereupon the guests drew their swords, and instantly cut Mr. Fox into a thousand pieces.

"Such is the old tale to which Shakespeare evidently alludes, and which has often 'froze my young blood,' when I was a child, as, I dare say, it had done^{his} before me. I will not apologize for repeating it, since it is manifest that such old wives' tales often prove the best elucidation of this writer's meaning" (BLAKEWAY).

The above may really be a modernised version of "the old tale" alluded to by Shakespeare: but Blakeway was not aware that one of the circumstances in the good lady's narrative is borrowed from Spenser's description of what Britomart saw in the castle of Bunsyrane;

"Tho, as she backward cast her busie eye,
To search each secreete of that goodly sted,
Over the dore thus written she did spye
Be bold: she oft and oft it over-red,
Yet could not find what sence it figured:

But whatso were therein or writ or ment,
 She was no whit thereby discouraged
 From prosecuting of her first intent,
 But forward with bold steps into the next roome went.

And as she lookt about, she did behold
 How over that same dore was likewise writ Be bolde, be bolde, and every where, Be bold;
 That much she mus'd, yet could not construe it
 By any ridling skill or commune wit.
 At last she spyde at that rowmes upper end Another yron dore, on which was writ Be not too bold; whereto though she did bend
 Her earnest minde, yet wist not what it might intend."
The Faerie Queene, B. iii. C. xi. stanzas 50, 54.

Another illustration of the present passage of Shakespeare is supplied to me by my friend, the Rev. Canon Harness. "My nurse," he says, "used, with considerable dramatic effect, to tell me in my childhood the following story. A very wicked king had killed his beautiful daughter. The act, from beginning to end, was overseen by one of his courtiers. This person took occasion to relate, as fiction, all the circumstances of the transaction to his master, continually interrupting the tale, as he perceived the consciousness of the murderer excited, by the words 'But it is not so, and it was not so, and God forbid it should be so.' At last, having brought his tale to its conclusion, he exclaimed, at the same time stabbing the wicked king to the heart, 'But it is so, and it was so; and you are the man that made it so.'—It is very nearly seventy years since I heard this story, and I may have confused it in some respects with others, of which old nurse had a glorious collection. My impression is—but of that I am not certain—that the wicked king killed his daughter by shutting her up and leaving her to starve inside a Golden Bull which he had had made, and that The Golden Bull was the name of the story."

talent be a claw, look how he claws him with a talent—If a, ii. 194 : Here the quibble positively requires that the old form talent (i.e. talon) be retained. (In The First Part of King Henry IV. act ii. sc. 4, the earliest quartos and the first three folios have "an eagles talent;" and, in Pericles, act iv. sc. 3, all the old eds. have "thine eagles talents." Compare, also, "Or buying armes of the herald, who giues them the Lion without tongue, taile, or talents." Nash's Pierce Pennilesse his Supplication, &c. sig. F 4, ed. 1595 :

Tales—The Hundred Merry, ii. 88: This work—A. C. Mery Talys—was not known to exist till 1815, when a large portion of an undated edition of it (forming the pasteboard covers of an old volume) was discovered by the Rev. J. J. Conybears, and reprinted the same year in Singer's Shakespeare's Jest-Book: and, a comparatively short time ago, a complete copy of an edition dated 1526 was found in the Royal Library of the University of Göttingen by Dr. Herman Oosterley, who has put forth a careful reprint of it in the present year (1866). Both the old editions are from the press of Bastell, but differ very considerably in the text. Dr. Oosterley has been at great pains in tracing the sources of these tales: many of them, however, are unquestionably original. The collection, with all its nonsense, is amusing enough; that it should have a sprinkling of indecency was only to be expected.

Sagittarius, Capricornus, Aquarius, and Pisces, intimate, by various pictorial devices, their influence over the lower limbs. 2. In the calendar which precedes the aforesaid figure, we are assured that Taurus 'gouerneth the necke, throat, and voyce,' and, moreover, that it is a 'fortunate signe in most things.' The above facts, or reputed facts, serve to illustrate the characters of the two renowned knights. Sir Toby, who is a merciless wit, artfully draws in Sir Andrew to betray his ignorance, and then misleads him by a confident, 'No, sir; it is legs and thighs'—in order to make him give proof of his boastful pretension, 'Faith, I can cut a caper!'" temper, temperament, constitution: A man of such a feeble temper, vi. 620.

temper, to mould, to work, to fashion: When you may temper her, i. 302; And temper him, with all the art I have, To, &c. vi. 338; I have him already tempering between my finger and my thumb, and shortly will I seal with him, iv. 376; What was so frozen but dissolves with tempering? viii. 258; That tempers him to this extremity, v. 353.

temper, to compound, to form by mixture: The poison of that lies in you to temper, ii. 95; a poison, I would temper it, vi. 445; To temper poisons for her, vii. 728 (where, according to Mr. Collier, temper does not mean merely to prepare or compound, but render them of a peculiar strength); a poison tempered by himself, vii. 209.

temper, to work together to a proper consistence: temper clay with blood of Englishmen, v. 150; with this hateful liquor temper it, vi. 348; cast you, with the waters that you lose, To temper clay, vii. 271.

temper with the stars, "conform their temper to their destiny" (JOHNSON), "accept their destiny without complaint" (STAUNTON), v. 298.*

temperance, temperature: of subtle, tender, and delicate temperance, i. 194: on the immediately following speech, Temperance was a delicate wench, Steevens observes that "in the puritanical times it was usual to christen children from the titles of religious and moral virtues."

temple—First, forward to the, ii. 359: As these words completely puzzled Mr. Keightley, who felt confident that "temple" should be altered to "table" (see Notes and Queries, Third Series, vol. iv. p. 121), I may observe that the Prince of Morocco was to go "forward to the temple," there to take the oath required from each of Portia's suitors before the trial of the caskets : this is to be gathered from the rest of the passage ;

" Por. You must take your chance ;
And either not attempt to choose at all,
Or swear before you choose,—if you choose wrong, Never to speak to lady afterward
In way of marriage : therefore be advis'd.
Mor. Nor will not. Come, bring me unto my chance.
Por. First, forward to the temple : after dinner Your hazard shall be made :"

and it becomes perfectly certain from the dialogue between Portia and the Prince of Arragon in act ii. sc. 8 ;

" Por. Behold, there stand the caskets, noble prince, &c.
Ar. I am enjoin'd by oath t' observe three things :—
First, never to unfold to any one Which casket 'twas I chose ; next, if I fail
Of the right casket, never in my life
To woo a maid in way of marriage ; lastly,
If I do fail in fortune of my choice,
Immediately to leave you and be gone.
Por. To these injunctions every one doth swear That comes to hazard for my worthless self.
Ar. And so have I address'd me," &c.—

which concluding words Steevens rightly explains, "I have prepared myself by the same ceremonies:" "The temple" we may suppose to have been somewhere in the grounds of Portia at Belmont ; but Shakespeare doubtless troubled himself no more about its exact locality than he did about the impropriety of a Moorish prince taking an oath in a Christian place of worship.

temporary meddler, "one who introduces himself, as often as he can find opportunity, into other men's concerns" (HENLEY), i. 510.

temptation, Where prayers cross—For I Am that way going to, i. 469 : "The petition of the Lord's Prayer, 'lead us not into temptation,' is here considered as crossing or intercepting the onward way in which Angelo was going ; this appointment of his for the morrow's meeting being a premeditated exposure of himself to temptation, which it was the general object of prayer to thwart" (HENLEY).

ten bones—By these, By these fingers, v. 124.

ten commandments—My, The nails of my fingers, v. 122.

ten groats is for the hand of an attorney—As fit as, iii. 228 : This sum, three shillings and fourpence, was formerly his fee.

ten groats too dear—Groom. Hail, royal prince ! K. Rich. Thanks, noble peer ; The cheapest of us is, iv. 179 : "It must be recollected that royals and nobles were names of coins" (BOSWELL) : see royal and second noble in the present Glossary.

ten masts at each, vii. 323 : see note 101, vii. 363.

ten [godfathers] more—Thou shouldst have had, "i. e. a jury of twelve men, to condemn thee to be hanged" (THEOBALD), ff. 486.

tench—I am stung like a, iv. 224 : see toach, &c.

tender, regard, kind concern, care : And show'd thou mak'st some tender of my life, iv. 284 ; in the tender of a wholesome weal, vii. 269, tender, "dear, the object of tenderness and care" (MALONE) : Whose life's as tender to me as my soul, i. 320.

tender, to regard, to esteem, to take care of, to have consideration for, to look upon with kindness or affection : And how does your content Tender your own good fortune ? i. 200 ; I thank you, madam, that you tender her, i. 314 ; He shall not die, so much we tender him, ii. 46 ; By my life, I do ; which I tender dearly, iii. 69 ; tender well my hounds, iii. 106 ; But we our kingdom's safety must so tender, iv. 442 ; I tender so the safety of my liege, v. 149 ; As well I tender you and all of yours ! v. 392 ; I tender not thy beautiful princely daughter ! v. 435 ; Tender yourself more dearly, vii. 118 ; Tender my suit, viii. 302 ; Tendering my ruin ("Watching me with tenderness in my fall," JOHNSON), v. 64.

tender-hefted, vii. 288 : "Hefted seems to mean the same as hefted. Tender-hefted, i. e. whose bosom is agitated by tender passions" (STEEVENS) : compare hefts.

tenner, tenour (so written for the rhyme), viii. 167.

tent, a roll of lint for searching or cleansing a wound or sore, a probe : the tent that searches To the bottom of the worst, vi. 31 ; Who keeps the tent now (quibbled upon), vi. 81 ; Nor tent to bottom that, vii. 682.

tent, to search with a tent, to probe (see the preceding article) : And tent themselves with death, vi. 156 ; You cannot tent yourself, vi. 187 ; I'll tent him to the quick, vii. 147.

tent in my cheeks—The smiles of knaves, vi. 194 : Here, says Johnson, "to tent is to take up residence ;" which, I believe, is the right explanation, though Mr. Grant White gives a very different one.

tents, and canopies—Costly apparel, iii. 138 : Here tents has been explained "hangings."

tercel, for all the ducks & the river—The falcon as the, vi. 49 : see tassel-gentle : "Pandarus means that he'll match his niece against her lover for any bet. The tercel is the male hawk ; by the falcon we generally understand the female" (THEOBALD) : "Mr. M. Mason observes, that the meaning of this difficult passage is, 'I will back the falcon against the tiercel,—I will wager that the falcon is equal to the tiercel'" (STEEVENS).

Tereus, &c.—Some, vi. 311 : "Tereus having ravished Philomela his wife's sister, cut out her tongue, to prevent a discovery" (MALONE).

Termagant—Whipped for cler'doing, vii. 153 : Termagant (a Saracen deity, at least such according to the crusaders and the old romance-writers) was, like Herod, along with whom Shakespeare here mentions him, a character in our early Miracle-plays.

terminations, words, terms, ii. 91.

termless, beyond the power of terms or words to describe justly, viii. 442.

test—overt, "open proofs, external evidence" (JOHNSON), vii. 387.

testament of bleeding war—The purple, iv. 150 : "I believe our author uses the word testament in its legal sense. Bolingbroke is come to open the testament of war, that he may peruse what is decreed there in his favour. Purple is an epithet referring to the future effusion of blood" (STEEVENS).

tested gold, gold brought to the test, pure, i. 468.

tester, a coin, the value of which in Shakespeare's days was sixpence, i. 355 ; iv. 361. (The word was variously written,—teston, tester, testern, testril,—and derived from a silver French coin named teston, because it had the king's head (teste) on it.)

testerned me, given me a testern, i. 266 : see the preceding article.

testimonied, witnessed, tested, tried, i. 487.

testril, a sixpence, iii. 346 : see tester.

tetchy, touchy, peevish, fretful, v. 429 ; vi. 8, 398.

tetter, to infect with tetter, scab, scurf, vi. 182.

Tewksbury mustard, iv. 348 : It "was famous very early. Shakespeare speaks only of its thickness, but others have celebrated its pungency." Nares's Gloss.

than, a form of then, for the sake of the rhyme : and than Retire again, viii. 328.

thane, "a title of honour, used among the ancient Scots, which seems gradually to have declined in its signification" (Jamieson's Etym. Dict. of the Scottish Language, where much will be found concerning the term), vii. 7, 9 (twice), 10 (three times), 11 (eight times), 15, 16, 17, 24, 26, 48 ; thanes, vii. 13, 64, 65, 70, 72.

thanking, thanks, iii. 252 ; thankings, i. 506 ; vi. 446 ; vii. 733.

tharborough, a corruption of thirdborough (quod vide), ii. 168.

thatch your poor thin roofs With burdens of the dead, vi. 554 : When our author wrote this play, the wearing of false hair was in high fashion among ladies : compare his lxviiith Sonnet. • thick, in quick succession, rapidly : As thick as hail, vii. 10 ; Why do you send so thick? vii. 512 ; Weak words, so thick come in his poor heart's aid, &c. viii. 388 ; My heart beats thicker than a feverous pulse, vi. 48 ; thick-coming fancies, vii. 65.

thick—Speak: see speak thick.

thick-pleached, thickly interwoven, ii. 83 : see pleached.

thick-skin, a numskull, a lout, i. 403 ; ii. 292.

think, and die, give way to thought or melancholy and die, vii. 556 :
see thought. *

think scorn, to disdain: I think scorn to sigh, ii. 172; these lovers think no scorn, ii. 315; the nobility think scorn, v. 169; their blood thinks scorn (is indignantly impatient), vii. 710.

thinks't thee, vii. 202: see note 150, vii. 241.

thirdborough, iii. 106: "The office of thirdborough is the same with that of constable, except in places where there are both, in which case the former is little more than the constable's assistant" (Ritson).

thirds his own worth . . . When that his action's dregg'd with mind assur'd, 'Tis bad he goes about!—What man, viii. 131: "The meaning is, what man can exert a third part of his powers when his mind is clogged with a consciousness that he fights in a bad cause, &c.?" (MASON.)

this, used for this: What am I, that thou shouldst condemn me this?
viii. 246.

Thomas Tapster, i. 450: "Why does she [Mistress Overdone] call the clown by this name, when it appears from his own showing that his name was Pompey? Perhaps she is only quoting some old saying or ballad" (DOUGL): No; Thomas or Tom was the name commonly applied to a tapster; for the sake of the alliteration, it would seem: see the passage cited from Greene under froth and hme.

thought, melancholy : that was begot of thought, iii. 59 ; take thought, and die for Caesar, vi. 635 ; the pale cast of thought, vii. 150 ; Thought and affliction, vii. 184; but thought will do, vii. 589. (To this sense of thought Malone refers the pl'd in thought, iii. 354; but, as Douce observes, "maladjusted" occurs in the next line).

thread of mine own life—A, 1, 218: see note 94, 1, 251: In a volume which I published in 1863, I observed: "In case any future editor should still be inclined to make Prospero term Miranda 'a third of his life' (the folio having here 'third'—thrid, thread), it may be well to remark, that in the language of poetry, from the earliest times, a beloved object has always been spoken of, not as the third, but as the HALF of another's life or soul: so Meleager, ἀνὴρ μὲν τῆς ψυχῆς; and Horace, agimur dimidium meum." [1866. So, too, in prose; "But when I came againe to my selfe, and saw my selfe alone in that Galley, and the other steering a contrary course, and gone cleane out of sight from us, carrying away with them the one halfe of my soule [Leonissa], or, to say better, all of it, my heart was clouded anew," &c. Mabbe's translation of Cervantes's Exemplarische Novells, The Liberrall Lover, p. 125, ed. 1640.] This remark, however, which I still think holds good against the reading of the folio, had no weight with the late Joseph Hunter (a lover of subtleties), who, in a printed Letter addressed to me, defended that reading, attaching to it a ridiculously forced meaning: nor has my remark had any influence on the Cambridge Editors, who retain here the misprint, or rather the old spelling (due to some scribe probably), "third."

thread and thrum, ii. 319: "An expression borrowed from weaving; the thread being the substance of the warp, the thrum the small tuft beyond, where it is tied." Nares's Gloss.

Thracian fatal steeds—The, v. 293: "We are told by some of the writers on the Trojan story, that the capture of these horses was one of the necessary preliminaries to the fate of Troy" (STEEVENS).

Thracian poet's feet—At the, Orpheus, vi. 312.

Thracian tyrant—The, Polymeston or Polymnestor, vi. 287: see note 6, vi. 355.

thrasonical, boastful (from Thraso), ii. 207 ; iii. 68.

Three—The picture of We, iii. 346: "Shakespeare had in his thoughts a common sign, in which two wooden heads are exhibited with this inscription under it, 'We three loggerheads be.' The spectator or reader is supposed to make the third" (MALONE): "The original picture, or sign as it sometimes was, seems to have been two fools . . . Sometimes, as Mr. Henley has stated, it was two asses" (DOUCE).

three-farthings goes!—Look, where," iv. 9: An allusion to the three-farthing silver pieces of Queen Elizabeth, which were very thin, and had the profile of the sovereign with a rose at the back of her head: and we must remember that in Shakespeare's time sticking roses in the ear was a court-fashion.

three-hooped pot—The: see hoops, &c.

three-inch fool, a fool three inches long (alluding to Grumio's diminutive size, iii. 150).

three-man beetle—fillip me with a, iv. 326: "A diversion is common with boys in Warwickshire and the adjoining counties, on finding a toad, to lay a board about two or three feet long, at right angles, over a stick about two or three inches diameter. Then placing the toad at one end of the board, the other end is struck by a bat or large stick, which throws the creature forty or fifty feet perpendicular from the earth, and its return in general kills it. This is called Filliping the Toad.—A three-man beetle is an implement used for driving piles; it is made of a log of wood, about eighteen or twenty inches diameter, and fourteen or fifteen inches thick, with one short and two long handles. A man at each of the long handles manages the fall of the beetle, and a third man, by the short handle, assists in raising it to strike the blow. Such an implement was, without doubt, very suitable for filliping so corpulent a being as Falstaff" (JOHNSON, the architect).

three-man songmen, singers of songs in three parts, iii. 464.

three-nook'd, "Having three corners or angles" (Craven Gloss.): the three-nook'd world, vii. 569. (Compare, in the concluding speech of King John, "Come the three corners of the world in arms," &c.)

three-pence bow'd would hire me—A, v. 515: An allusion, as Mr. Fairholt observes, to the old custom of ratifying an agreement by a bent coin: but there were no three-pences so early as the reign of Henry VIII.

three-pile, three-piled velvet, velvet of the richest and costliest kind, iii. 463.

three-piled, used metaphorically; see the preceding article: thou'rt a three-piled piece, i. 448; Three-pil'd hyperboles, ii. 222: In the former passage three-piled seems to mean "first-rate," but with a quibbling allusion; see piled: in the second passage Three-piled is equivalent to "high-flown."

threne, a funeral song, a dirge, viii. 470.

thrice-crowned queen of night, iii. 36: "Alluding to the triple character of Proserpina, Cynthia, and Diana" (JOHNSON).

thrice-repured, thrice-repurified—thrice purified, vi. 48.

throng—A short knife and a, Go and cut purses in a crowd (purses being formerly worn at the girdle), i. 366: compare Nor cutpurses come not to throngs, vii. 297.

thronged, crowded, pressed : earth is throng'd By man's oppression ("The earth is oppressed by the injuries which crowd upon her," BOSWELL), viii. 9 ; A man throng'd up (pressed up, drawn together, shrunk up ?) with cold, viii. 22 ; Here one, being throng'd, bears back, viii. 327.

throstle, the thrush (properly the song-thrush), ii. 289, 351.

throughfare, a thoroughfare, vii. 641 ; throughfares, ii. 371.

thoroughly, thoroughly, i. 214, 270, 358, 513 ; ii. 123, 399 ; iii. 165, 437 ; v. 558 ; vii. 183, 332, 665, 691.

throw—You can fool no more money out of me at this, iii. 386 : Here perhaps throw is used with a quibble,—the word meaning both "a throw of the dice" and "time" (the latter signification being common in our earliest poets).

thrum : see thread and thrum.

thrummed hat, a hat composed of weaver's thrums (see thread and thrum) or of very coarse woollen cloth, i. 397.

thumb at them—I will bite my : see bite my thumb, &c.

thump, then, and I flee, ii. 184 ; thumped him with thy bird-bolt, ii. 197 : "Thumping was a technical term in shooting, applied to the stroke of the bullet or arrow" (HALLIWELL).

thunder-stone, vi. 627 ; vii. 703 ; Are there no stones in heaven But what serve for the thunder ? vii. 466 : "Thunder-stone. The same as thunderbolt ; both formed upon an erroneous fancy, that the destruction occasioned by lightning was effected by some solid body." Nares's Gloss. : "The thunder-stone is the imaginary product of the thunder, which the ancients called Brontia, mentioned by Pliny (N. H. xxxvii. 10) as a species of gem, and as that which, falling with the lightning, does the mischief. It is the fossil commonly called the Belemnite, or Finger-stone, and now known to be a shell" (CRAIK).

thwart, perverse, vii. 271.

Tib, a low, common woman ("A tib, mulier sordida." Coles's Lat. and Engl. Dict.), iii. 228 ; viii. 60.

tice, to entice, iii. 432 ; tic'd, vi. 304.

tick-tack, properly, a game at tables, a sort of backgammon, i. 452 : "'Jouer au tric-trac' is used in French in a wanton sense" (MALONE). (In Weaver's Lusty Juuentus, Hipocriasye, seeing Lusty Juuentus kiss Abhominable Lyuing, says,

"What a hurly burly is here !
Smicke smacke, and all thys gere !
You well [will] to tycke take, I fere, Yf thou had tyme." Sig. v i verso, ed. 4to, n. d.)

tickle, tottering, unsteady : thy head stands so tickle on thy shoulders, i. 452 ; the state of Normandy Stands on a tickle point, v. 114.

tickle-brain, a cant name for a species of strong liquor, iv. 242.

tickled o' the sere : see sere—The clown, &c.

tide—Even at the turning o' the, iv. 443 : "It has been a very old opinion, which Mead, De imperio solis, quotes as if he believed it, that nobody dies but in the time of ebb : half the deaths in London confute the notion ; but we find that it was common among the women of the poet's time" (JOHNSON).

tide of times—In the, "In the course of times" (JOHNSON), vi. 654.

tides, times : high tides ("solemn seasons, times to be observed above others," STEEVENS), iv. 31 ; he keeps his tides well (with a quibble), vi. 517.

tidy, in good condition, plump, iv. 347.

tied were lost—It is no matter if the, i. 279 : Boswell traces this quibble to Heywood's Three Hundred Epigrams ;

"The tide tarieth no man, but here to scan, Thou art tide so, that thou taryest every man."

Ep. 170, sig. o 4, Workes, 1598.

Tiger—Master o' the : see Aleppo, &c.

tight, adroit, alert : my queen's a squire More tight at this than thou, vii. 567.

tightly, adroitly, alertly, smartly : i. 355, 374.

tike, a dog, a cur : Base tike (as a term of reproach), iv. 435 ; bob-tail tike, vii. 307.

tilly-fally : see the next article.

tilly-vally, iii. 348 : An interjection of contempt : its etymology is quite uncertain ; Steevens would derive it from the Latin titi-vilitium ; according to Douce, it is properly a hunting phrase borrowed from the French : The Hostess corrupts it to tilly-fally, iv. 343.

tilth, land tilled, cultivated, prepared for sowing : Bourn, bound of land, tilth, vineyard, none, i. 197 ; Our corn's to reap, for yet our tilth's to sow, i. 493.

tilth, tillage : Expresseth his full tilth and husbandry, i. 455.

time and the hour, vii. 12 : A pleonastic expression not unfrequent in our early writers : see note 20, vii. 77.

Time Goes upright with his carriage, i. 226 : "Alluding to one carrying a burden. This critical period of my life proceeds as I could wish. Time brings forward all the expected events, without faltering under his burden" (STEEVENS).

timeless, untimely, i. 291 ; iv. 157 ; v. 157, 317, 359 ; vi. 309, 469 ; timeless-cruel, v. 75.

timely, early : to call timely on him, vii. 26 ; too timely shaded, viii. 458 ; timelier than my purpose, vii. 530.

timely-parted ghost—A, v. 157 : Here, as frequently in our early writers, the word ghost signifies "a dead body :—" "A timely-parted ghost means a body that has become inanimate in the common course of nature ; to which violence has not brought a timeless end. The opposition is plainly marked afterwards by the words 'As guilty of Duke Humphrey's timeless death'" (MALONE) : "It has been very plausibly suggested that timely signifies in proper time, as opposed to timeless ; yet in this place it seems to mean early, recently, newly" (DOUCE). (That the word ghost continued to be used in the sense of "dead body" long after Shakespeare's days is shown by the following lines ;

"What stranger who had seen thy shriv'led skin, Thy thin, pale, gastly face, would not have been Conceited he had seen a ghost i' th' bed,
New risen from the grave, not lately dead?"

An Elegie on the death of Mr. Frear, &c., Hookes's Amanda, 1658, p. 207 [107].)

time-pleaser, "one who complies with prevailing opinions whatever they be" (Johnson's Dict.), iii. 350 ; Time-pleasers, vi. 180.

tinct, colour, dye, stain : As will not leave their tinct, vii. 169. ; blue of heaven's own tinct, vii. 659.

tinct, tincture, the grand elixir of the alchemists : the tinct and multiplying medicine, iii. 279 ; that great medicine hath With his tinct gilded thee, vii. 511 (see medicine hath With, &c.).

tinctures, stains—Great men shall press For, vi. 642 : "Tinctures and stains are understood both by Malone and Steevens as carrying an allusion to the practice of persons dipping their handkerchiefs in the blood of those whom they regarded as martyrs. And it must be confessed that the general strain of the passage, and more especially the expression 'shall press for tinctures,' &c., will not easily allow us to reject this interpretation. Yet does it not make the speaker assign to Cæsar by implication the very kind of death Calphurnia's apprehension of which he professes to regard as visionary ? The pressing for tinctures and stains, it is true, would be a confutation of so much of Calphurnia's dream as seemed to imply that the Roman people would be delighted with his death ;

'Many lusty Romans

Came smiling, and did bathe their hands in it.'

Do we refine too much in supposing that this inconsistency between the purpose and the language of Decius is intended by the poet, and that in this brief dialogue between him and Cæsar, in which the latter suffers himself to be so easily won over,—persuaded and relieved by the very words that ought naturally to have confirmed his fears,—we are to feel the presence of an unseen power driving on both the unconscious prophet and the blinded victim ?" (ORAIK.)

tire, to pull, to tear, to seize eagerly, to feed ravenously ; often used metaphorically (a term in falconry, and frequently applied to other birds of prey, as well as to hawks: Frr tīrer): Tire on the flesh of me and of my son, v. 242; And in his will his wilful eye he tir'd ("glutted," STEEVENS), viii. 299; Tires with her beak on feathers, flesh, and bone, viii. 241; disedg'd by her That now thou tir'st on, vii. 681; Upon that were my thoughts tiring, vi. 544.

tire, to attire: the tired horse (the horse adorned with ribbons or trappings), ii. 196: Farmer chose to fancy that Bankes's horse (see horse—The dancing) is here alluded to.

tire, an attire, a dress: in that tire Shall Master Slender steal my Nan away, i. 403.

tire, a head-dress: If I had such a tire, i. 316; any tire of Venetian admittance, i. 382; I like the new tire within, ii. 114; my tires and mantles, vii. 525.

tire about you—Rich, viii. 39: qy. does tire here mean bed-clothes (στρώματα)?

tire-valiant—The, Some sort of fanciful head-dress, i. 382.

tiring-house, attiring-house,—dressing-room of a theatre, ii. 286.

tithing to tithing—From, vii. 302: "A tithing is a division of a place, a district; the same in the country as a ward in the city" (STEEVENS).

title-leaf—Like to a, iv. 316: "In the time of our poet, the title-page to an elegy, as well as every intermediate leaf, was totally black" (STEEVENS): He means, I believe, that the title-page exhibited the title in white letters on a black ground: the intermediate leaves were, of course, quite black.

to, a prefix very common in our earliest writers: And, fairy-like, to-pinch the unclean knight, i. 402; And all to-topple, viii. 39; the gods to-bless your honour! viii. 56; It was not she that call'd him all to-naught, viii. 272: "To, in composition with verbs, is usually augmentative, but sometimes pleonastic." Madden's Glossary to Havelok the Dane: In such sentences when all precedes to, some editors print all-to; but wrongly: "It is a mistake to suppose that in these instances all is coupled with to, and that it becomes equivalent to omnino from being thus conjoined. It would have this sense quite as much if to did not follow; as, all tattered and torn, all forlorn; and it is no more coupled with to than with be in all besmeared. In such expressions as all to torne, all to broke, the to is connected with the following participle as a prefix; and frequently occurs without being preceded by all, not only in old English writers, but in Anglo-Saxon and in other Teutonic dialects." R. T. in Boucher's Glossary of Arch. and Prov. Words, sub "All" (Compare, among many parallel passages which might be cited, the following;

"All to-ragged and to-rente

He was all to-bledde with blode.

Tyll bothe his shynnes he all to-brest."

Some of these be mery and very pleasaunt, they will daunce and sing, some others be as colde and reasonable to talke withall. These begge money, eyther when they come at farmoures houses, they will demaund baken, eyther cheese, or wool, or any thinge that is worth money, and if they espye small company within, they will with firc countenaunce demaunde somewhat. Where for feare the maydes will giue them largely to be ryd of them," &c. Harman's Caueat or Warening for Common Cursetors, &c. 1573, cap. ix. p. 29, reprint 1814: "Of all the mad rascalls (that are of this wing) the Abraham-man is the most phantastick: The fellow (quoth this old Lady of the Lake vnto me) that sat halfe naked (at table to day) from the girdle vpward, is the best Abraham-man that euer came to my house, & the notablest villaine: he sweares he hath bin in Bedlam, and will talke frantickly of purpose; you see pinnes stuck in sundry places of his naked flesh, especially in his armes, which paine hee gladly puts himselfe to (beeing indeede no torment at all, his skin is either so dead with some fowle disease, or so hardned with weather), onely to make you beleue he is out of his wits: he calls himselfe by the name of Poore Tom, and coming neere any body, cryes out, Poore Tom is a cold. Of these Abraham men some be exceeding mery, and doe nothing but sing songs, fashioned out of their owne braines; some will dance, others will doe nothing but either laugh or weepe; others are dogged and so sullen both in looke and speech, that spying but small company in a house, they boldly and bluntly enter, compelling the seruants through feare to giue them what they demaund, which is commonly bacon, or some thing that will yeelde ready mony. The Vpright-man and the Rogue are not terribler enemies to poultry ware than Poore Tom is." Dekker's Belman of London, &c. sig. D 2, ed. 1608: The following account from Aubrey's unpublished Natural History of Wiltshire was, I believe, first cited by D'Israeli in his Curiosities of Literature; I now give it as quoted by Mr. Halliwell from Royal Soc. Ms.; "Till the breaking out of the Civill Warres, Tom o' Bedlams did trauell about the country. They had been poore distracted men that had been putt into Bedlam, where recovering to some sobernesse, they were licentiated to goe a begging. E.g. they had on their left arm an armilla of tinn, printed in some workes, about four inches long; they could not get it off: they wove about their necks a great horn of an ox in a string or bawdric, which, when they came to an house for almes, they did wind; and they did putt the drink given them into this horn, whereto they did putt a stopple. Since the warres I doe not remember to have seen any one of them:" A later hand has added, "I have seen them in Worcestershire within these thirty years, 1756."

trains, artifices, stratagems : Macbeth by many of these trains hath sought, &c. vii. 56.

trammel up the consequence, and catch, With his surcease, success—If th' assassination Could, If the assassination could tie up, or net up, the consequences of it, and, along with its cessation, stop, or conclusion, catch success, vii. 18 (A trammel means both a kind of draw-net and a contrivance for teaching horses to pace or amble).

tranect, ii. 391 : see note 64, ii. 424.

tranquillity, iv. 225 : see note 36, iv. 228.

translate, to transform, to change : translate thy life into death, iii. 67 ; translate his malice towards you into love, vi. 171 ; the force of honesty can translate beauty into his likeness, vii. 150 ; The rest I'll give to be to you translated, ii. 270 ; bless thee! thou art translated, ii. 289 ; sweet Pyramus translated, ii. 292 ; to present slaves and servants Translates his rivals, vi. 509.

transport, to remove from this world to the next : to transport him in the mind he is Were damnable, i. 501 ; Out of doubt he is transported, ii. 310.

trash, a worthless person : this poor trash of Venice, vii. 403 (but see note 37, vii. 478) ; I do suspect this trash (=strumpet), vii. 457. (With the second of the above passages compare

"I heare say there's a whore here that draws wine,

And I would see the trash."

Heywood's Fair Maid of the West, First Part, p. 85, ed. 1631.)

trash, to check the pace of a too forward hound by means of a trash ; which—whether a strap, a rope dragging loose on the ground, or a weight—was fastened to his neck : Trash Merriman, iii. 106 (see note 3, iii. 181) ; this poor trash of Venice, whom I trash For his quick hunting, vii. 403.

trash for over-topping—Who t' advance, and who To, i. 179 : "To trash, as Dr. Warburton observes, is to cut away the superfluities. This word I have met with in books containing directions for gardeners, published in the time of Queen Elizabeth [?]. The present explanation may be countenanced by the following passage in Warner's Albion's England, 1602, b. x. ch. 57 ;

'Who suffreth none by might, by wealth or blood to overtopp, Himself gives all preferment, and whom listeth him doth lop.'

Again, in our author's King Richard II. [act iii. sc. 4] ;

'Go thou, and, like an executioner,
Cut off the heads of too-fast-growing sprays,
That look too lofty in our commonwealth.'

(STEEVENS):

It may be added, that in Davenant and Dryden's alteration of The Tempest, the passage now in question runs thus,

"whom to advance,

Or lop for over-topping:"

"To trash . . . In [the present passage of] The Tempest, from being joined with overtopping, it has been supposed to allude to lopping of trees ; but if we examine the context, no such violent measure seems there suggested. Prospero says that his brother, having the care of government deputed to him, became

'Perfected how to grant suits, How to deny them ;, whom to advance, and whom
To trash for overtopping.'

Temp. i. 2.

It stands, therefore, opposed only to advance, and seems to mean no more than that those who were too forward, he kept back,—did not advance. To cut them off would have been a measure to create alarm. . . . I conceive, therefore, that it is a hunting term, for checking or stopping the dogs, when too forward [see the preceding article],” &c. Nares’s Gloss.: “Trash, to shred or lop. . . . Overrun, overshoot, overslip, are terms in hunting; overtop never. . . . Trash occurs as a verb in the sense above given, act i. sc. 2 of The Tempest; ‘Who t’ advance, and who to trash for overtopping.’ I have never met with the verb in that sense elsewhere, but overtop is evermore the appropriate term in arboriculture. To quote examples of that is needless. Of it metaphorically applied, just as in Shakespeare, take the following example; ‘Of those three estates, which awayeth most, that in a manner doth overtop the rest, and like a foregrown member depriveth the other of their proportion of growth.’ Andrewes’ Sermons, vol. v. p. 177, Lib. Ang.-Cath. Theol. Have we not the substantive trash in the sense of shavings, at p. 542, book iii. of a Discourse of Forest Trees, by John Evelyn? The extract that contains the word is this; ‘Faggots to be every stick of three feet in length, excepting only one stick of one foot long, to harden and wedge the binding of it; this to prevent the abuse, too much practised, of filling the middle part and ends with trash and short sticks, which had been omitted in the former statute.’ . . . Trash no one denies to be a kennel term for hampering a dog, but it does not presently follow that the word bore no other signification; indeed there is no more fruitful mother of confusion than homonymy” (ARROWSMITH, Notes and Queries, First Series, vol. vii. p. 566): “In my [preceding] note on the word trash, I said (somewhat too pre-emptorily), that overtop was not even a hunting term. At the moment I had forgotten the following passage; ‘Therefore I would persuade all lovers of hunting to get two or three couple of tried hounds, and once or twice a week to follow after them a train-scent; and when he is able to top them on all sorts of earth, and to endure heats and colds stoutly, then he may the better rely on his speed and toughness.’ The Hunting-horse, chap. vii. p. 71, Oxford, 1685” (ARROWSMITH, Notes and Queries, First Series, vol. viii. p. 121).

travel?—How chances it they, vii. 140: Here travel is equivalent to the modern term “stroll.”

traverse, athwart the heart of his lover, &c.—Breaks them bravely, quite: see break cross, &c.

traverse, (a term in fencing) to use a posture of opposition, or to oppose a movement: to see thee traverse, i. 373.

traverse, (a military term) to march (“Traverse’ (says Bullokar), ‘to march up and down, or to move the feet with proportion, as in dancing," MALONE) : Hold, Wart, traverse; thus, thus, thus, iv. 361 ; Traverse, go, vii. 393.

travers'd arms, crossed arms, vi. 573.

tray-trip, "a game at cards, played with dice as well as with cards, the success in which chiefly depended upon the throwing of treys" (HALLIWELL), iii. 359.

treachers, traitors, vii. 261.

treasury, treasure : a mass of public treasury, v. 122 ; sumless treasuries, iv. 429.

treaties, entreaties, supplications, vii. 554.

Trebles thee o'er—I am more serious than my custom : you Must be so too, if heed me ; which to do, i. 199 : "This passage is represented to me as an obscure one. The meaning of it seems to be—'You must put on more than your usual seriousness, if you are disposed to pay a proper attention to my proposal ; which attention if you bestow, it will in the end make you thrice what you are.' Sebastian is already brother to the throne ; but, being made a king by Antonio's contrivance, would be (according to our author's idea of greatness) thrice the man he was before. In this sense he would be trebled o'er" (STEEVENS).

trench, to cut, to carve : trenched, i. 301 ; vii. 39 ; viii. 274 ; trenching, iv. 207.

trenchant, cutting, sharp, vi. 553.

trencher-knight, one who holds a trencher, a parasite, ii. 224.

Tribulation of Tower-hill, or the Limbs of Limehouse, their dear brothers, are able to endure—These are the youths that thunder at a playhouse, and fight for bitten apples ; that no audience, but the, v. 569 : The allusion is, I believe, to certain puritanical congregations : one of the characters in Jonson's Alchemist is named "Tribulation-Wholesome, a pastor of Amsterdam ;" and Mr. Grant White notices that "within the memory of men now living 'Tribulation' was a common name among New-England families of Puritan descent:" Steevens observes ; "I can easily conceive that the turbulence of the most clamorous theatre has been exceeded by the bellowings of puritanism against surplices and farthingales. . . . The phrase dear brothers is very plainly used to point out some fraternity of canters allied to the Tribulation both in pursuits and manners, by tempestuous zeal and consummate ignorance:" When Mr. Staunton asked, "Can any thing be more evident than that by the 'Tribulation of Tower-hill' and the 'Limbs of Limehouse' are meant the turbulent and mischievous 'long-shore rabble, the only congenial audience at a play-house for their 'dear brothers,' 'the Hope of the Strand'?"—he failed to perceive that the "dear brothers" mean the so-called brothers of "the Tribulation of Tower- hill," and assuredly not those of "the youths that thunder at a play-house." (Here Steevens cites from Skelton's Magnyfycence,

"Some fall to foly them selfe for to spyll,
And some fall prechynge on [at the] Toure Hyll."

Works, vol. i. p. 295, ed. Dyce; and evidently supposes that "some fall prechynge at the Toure Hyll" means "some set up for preachers on Tower-hill," while it really means "some finish their course by being executed on Tower-hill, where, in their last moments, they make an exhortation to the reprobate.") tribunal plebs, vi. 334: Perhaps the Clown means, as Hanmer conjectures, tribunus plebis.

trick, a peculiarity: every line and trick of his sweet favour, iii. 209; The trick of's frown, iii. 446; a trick of Cœur-de-lion's face, iv. 7; a villanous trick of thine eye, iv. 242; The trick of that voice, vii. 325. (This is properly an heraldic term, meaning a delineation of arms, in which the colours are distinguished by their technical marks, without any colour being laid on: see my Memoir of Shakespeare, p. 21, note 27.)

trick, a course, a manner, a habit: I spoke it but according to the trick, i. 520; It is our trick, vii. 192.

trick, "knack, faculty" (CALDECOTT): an we had the trick to see't, vii. 194.

trick, a toy, a puppet: a pinch'd thing; yea, a very trick For them to play at will, iii. 436: compare pinch'd thing—A.

trick up with new-tuned oaths, deck out, adorn with, &c. iv. 461: properly an heraldic term; see first trick.

trick'd With blood of fathers, &c.—Horridly, vii. 143: Here trick'd is equivalent to "painted, smeared:" properly an heraldic term; see first trick.

tricking, decoration, dresses, i. 403: see first trick.

tricksy, clever, adroit, dextrous: My tricksy spirit! i. 233.

tricksy, quaint, affected: a tricksy word, ii. 394.

trifle, a phantom: some enchanted trifle, i. 229.

trifle, to make trifling, of no importance: Hath trifled former knowings, vii. 29.

Trigon—The fiery, iv. 348: "Trigonum igneum is the astronomical [astrological] term when the [three] upper planets meet in a fiery sign" (STEEVENS): Trigon, triangle: "When the three superior planets met in Aries, Leo, or Sagittarius, they formed a fiery trigon." Nares's Gloss.

trill'd, trickled, vii. 318.

trip and go, ii. 196: Mr. Chappell remarks that this—the name of a favourite morris-dance—"seems to have become a proverbial expression. In Gosson's Schoole of Abuse, 1579, 'Trip and go, for I dare not tarry.' In The two angrie Women of Abington, 1599, 'Nay, then, trip and go.' In Ben Jonson's Case is altered, 'O delicate trip and go,' &c. Popular Music of the Olden Time, &c. vol. i. p. 131, sec. ed.

triple, third, one of three: a triple eye, iii. 225; The triple pillar of the world, vii. 497.

triple Hecate's team—The, ii. 322: An allusion to her triple character,—Luna in heaven, Diana on earth, and Hecate in the nether world.

triple-turn'd whore! vii. 574: "Cleopatra was first the mistress of Julius Cæsar, then of Cneius Pompey, and afterwards of Antony" (MALONE): "She first belonged to Julius Cæsar, then to Antony, and now, as he supposes, to Augustus. It is not likely that in recollecting her turnings, Antony should not have that in contemplation which gave him most offence" (MASON).

tristful, sad, sorrowful, iv. 242; vii. 168.

triumph, a general term for public exhibitions of various kinds: with pomp, with triumph, ii. 265; the triumph-day, iv. 170; a perpetual triumph, iv. 259; at a triumph, v. 80; this day of triumph, v. 404; Are the knights ready to begin the triumph? viii. 24; an honour'd triumph, viii. 26; With triumphs, mirth, and rare solemnity, i. 324; those justs and triumphs, iv. 170; those triumphs held at Oxford, iv. 173; With stately triumphs, v. 320; In honour of whose birth these triumphs are, viii. 25; honouring of Neptune's triumphs, viii. 63.

triumph—False-play'd my glory Unto an enemy's, vii. 576: "Shakespeare, I think, only intended to say, that Cleopatra, by collusion, played the great game they were engaged in falsely, so as to sacrifice Antony's fame to that of his enemy. The playing false to the adversary's trump card (as Dr. Warburton explains the words) conveys no distinct idea" (MALONE).

triumvir, a triumvirate, ii. 198.

Trojan, a cant term, used in various meanings, sometimes as a term of reproach, sometimes of commendation: Hector was but a Trojan in respect of this, ii. 229; unless you play the honest Trojan, ii. 230; Base Trojan, iv. 497 (twice); there are other Trojans, iv. 225.

troll, to sing with volubility, i. 213.

troll-my-dames, iii. 465: The game of Troll-madam was borrowed from the French (Trou-madame): an old English name for it was Pigeon-holes, "as the arches in the machine through which the balls are rolled resemble the cavities made for pigeons in a dove-house" (STEEVENS): "Troll Madame. The Game called Trunkes, or the Hole." Cotgrave's Fr. and Engl. Dict.

tropically, figuratively, vii. 159.

trot, an old woman, iii. 123.

true, honest (a true man formerly signifying an “honest man,” in opposition to a thief): Then say if they be true, i. 234; every true man's apparel fits your thief, i. 494; if you meet a thief, you may suspect him . . . to be no true man, ii. 110; A true man or a thief, ii. 202; that ever cried 'stand' to a true man, iv. 212; as I am a true man . . . as you are a false thief, iv. 226; to turn true man, ibid.; The thieves have bound the true men, iv. 228; the blood of true men, iv. 240; So true men yield, with robbers so o'ermatch'd, v. 248; there is no time so miserable but a man may be true, vi. 563; I am no true man, vi. 624; Which makes the true man kill'd, and saves the thief, vii. 662; Rich preys make true men thieves, viii. 263.

true-penny, vii. 126: Forby, in his Vocab. of East Anglia, gives “True-penny, generally ‘Old truepenny,’ as it occurs in SH. Hamlet [a mistake,—but “old True-penny” occurs in Marston's Malcontent] . . . Its present meaning is, hearty old fellow; staunch and trusty; true to his purpose or pledge.” (“It [‘true-penny’] is, as I learn from Mr. Pryme, Mr. Kennedy of Sheffield, and other authorities, a mining term, and signifies a particular indication in the soil of the direction in which ore is to be found,” COLLIER).

truncheon, to beat with a truncheon or club, iv. 344. *

truncheoners, persons armed with truncheons or clubs, v. 569.

trundle-tail, a curly-tailed dog, vii. 307.

trunk sleeve, a large, wide sleeve, iii. 163.

tuition, protection, ii. 81.

Tully's Orator, vi. 323: "Tully's Treatise on eloquence, addressed to Brutus, and entitled Orator" (MALONE).

tumbler's hoop—And wear his colours like a, ii. 187: "Tumblers' hoops are to this day bound round with ribbons of various colours" (HARRIS).

tun-dish, a wooden funnel, i. 488.

turbans on—Giants may jet through And keep their impious, vii. 676: "The idea of a giant was, among the readers of romances, who were almost all the readers of those times, always confounded with that of a Saracen" (JOHNSON).

Turk Gregory, iv. 282: "Meaning Gregory the Seventh, called Hildebrand. This furious friar surmounted almost invincible obstacles to deprive the Emperor of his right of investiture of bishops, which his predecessors had long attempted in vain. Fox, in his History, hath made Gregory so odious, that I don't doubt but the good Protestants of that time were well pleased to hear him thus characterized, as uniting the attributes of their two great enemies, the Turk and Pope, in one" (WARBURTON).

Turk, that two-and-fifty kingdoms hath, &c.—The, v. 65: "Alluding probably to the ostentatious letter of Sultan Solymán the Magnificent to the Emperor Ferdinand, 1562; in which all the Grand Seigneur's titles are enumerated. See Knolles's History of the Turks, 5th edit. p. 789" (GREY).

Turk—Turn, "a figurative expression for a change of condition or opinion" (Gifford's note on Massinger's Works, vol. ii. p. 222, ed. 1813): if the rest of my fortunes turn Turk with me, vii. 160; an you be not turned Turk, ii. 115.

Turlygood, vii. 283: see note 56, vii. 356.

turn—I owe you a good, i. 495: Here by turn Pompey, with a quibble, means "a turn off the ladder."

turn, to change, to alter: If you turn not, you will return the sooner, i. 278; turn so much the constitution Of any constant man, ii. 386.

turn, to return : turn thou no more To seek a living in our territory, iii. 86 ; Ere from this war thou turn a conqueror, v. 429 ; tarry with him till I turn again, vi. 846.

turn his girdle—He knows how to : see girdle—He knows, &c.

Turn-bull-street, iv. 362 : Properly Turnmill-street, near Clerk-enwell ; a street notorious as the residence of prostitutes. “Saint John's streete is on both sides replenished with buildings up to Clarkenwell ; on the left hand of which streete lyeth a lane called Cow-crosse of a crosse some time standing there, which lane turneth downe to another lane called Turnemill streete, which stretcheth up to the west side of Clarkenwell, and was called Turnemill streete for such cause as is afore declared.” Stow's Survey of London, 1618, p. 816. Stow here refers to a previous statement, to the effect that it had its name from a river or brook formerly there, whereon stood several mills” (HALLIWELL).

turquoise—It was my, ii. 379 : Shylock valued his turquoise, not only as being the gift of Leah, but on account of the imaginary virtues ascribed to the stone ; which was supposed to become pale or to brighten according as the health of the wearer was bad or good.

twelve score, twelve score yards (not feet) : as easy as a cannon will shoot point-blank twelve score, i. 379 ; his death will be a march of twelve-score (“It will kill him to march so far as twelve-score yards,” JOHNSON), iv. 246 ; 'a would have clapped i' the clout at twelve score (he would have hit the clout at twelve score yards ; see clout), iv. 356.

twiggen, made of, or cased in, twigs or wicker-work, vii. 407.

twink, a twinkling of the eye, i. 219 ; iii. 137.

twinn'd, like as twins : the twinn'd stones Upon the number'd beach, vii. 651.

twire, to peep out, to gleam or appear at intervals, viii. 363.

two of the first, like coats in heraldry, Due but to one, and crownèd with one crest, ii. 297 : “It may be doubted whether this passage has been rightly explained, and whether the commentators have not given Shakspeare credit for more skill in heraldry than he really possessed, or at least than he intended to exhibit on the present occasion. Helen says, ‘we had two seeming bodies, but only one heart.’ She then exemplifies her position by a simile—‘we had two of the first, i.e. bodies, like the double coats in heraldry that belong to man and wife as one person, but which, like our single heart, have but one crest’” (DOUCE) : “The plain heraldical allusion is to the simple impalements of two armorial ensigns, as they are marshalled side by side to represent a marriage ; and the expression, ‘Two of the first,’ is to that particular form of dividing the shield, being the first in order of the nine ordinary partitions of the Escutcheon. These principles were familiarly understood in the time of Shakespeare by all the readers of the many very popular heraldical works of the period, and an extract from one of these will probably render the meaning of the passage clear. In 'The Accedence of Armorie,' published by Gerard Leigh, in 1597, he says, 'Now will I declare to you of IX sundrie Partitions:—the First whereof is a partition from the highest part of the Escoccheon to the lowest. And though it must be blazed so, yet is it a joining together. It is also a marriage, that is to say, two cotes; the man's on the right side, and the woman's on the left: as it might be said that Argent had married with Gules.' In different words, this is nothing else than an amplification of Helena's own expression, 'seeming parted;

But yet a union in partition.'

The shield bearing the arms of two married persons would of course be surmounted by one crest only, as the text properly remarks, that of the husband. In Shakespeare's day, the only pleas for bearing two crests were ancient usage, or a special grant. The modern practice of introducing a second crest by an heiress has been most improperly adopted from the German heraldical system; for it should be remembered, that as a female cannot wear a helmet, so neither can she bear a crest" (STAUNTON).

two-and-thirty,—a pip out? iii. 121: An expression derived from the game of Bone-ace, or One-and-thirty: pip is a spot upon a card: "'To be two and thirty, a pip out,' was an old cant phrase applied to a person who was intoxicated" (HALLIWELL).

Tybalt? Mer. More than prince of cats—Why, what is, vi. 418; Tybalt, you rat-catcher, vi. 429; Good king of cats, ibid.: For some undiscovered reason a cat was called Tybert or Tybalt; in the admirable old romance, Thystorye of Reynard the Foze, we find "The complaynt of Curtoys the hound and of the catte Tybert, Capitulo iij.,"—"How the kynge sent Tybert the catte for the foxe, Capitulo x.;" and Nash, in his Haue with you to Saffron-Walden, 1596, has "Not Tybault or Isegrim [read "Isegrim or Tibault"] Prince of Cattes were euer endowed with the like Title." Sig. H 3.

type, a distinguishing mark: the type of King of Naples, v. 250; The high imperial type of this earth's glory, v. 431.

U.

umber, a sort of brown colour (a species of ochre, first obtained from Umbria), iii. 19.

umber'd, embrowned as if darkened with umber, iv. 468.

umbrage, a shadow, vii. 203.

unaccommodated, unfurnished with the conveniences of life, vii. 301.

unaccustom'd fight aside—And set this, v. 39: Here "unaccustom'd is unseemly, indecent" (JOHNSON).

unaccustom'd dram—An, "A dram which he is not used to" (JOHNSON), "such as is uncommon, not in familiar use" (STEEVENS), vi. 445.

unadvised wounds—Friend to friend gives, viii. 329: "Friends wound friends, not knowing each other. It should be remembered that Troy was sacked in the night" (MALONE).

unanel'd, vii. 124: see note 40, vii. 220.

unavoided, unavoidable, inevitable, iv. 129; v. 60, 418, 430.

unbarbed, unshorn, untrimmed, vi. 193.

unbated, unabated, undiminished: th' unbated fire, ii. 368.

unbated, unblunted, without a button on the point: A sword unbated, vii. 190; Unbated and envenom'd, vii. 209.

unbid, uninvited, unwelcome, unexpected: O unbid spite! v. 306.

unbolt, to open, to explain: I'll unbolt to you, vi. 508.

unbolted, unsifted, gross, utter, vii. 280.

unbonneted, &c.—My demerits May speak, vii. 381: "Bonnet (says Cotgrave) is to put off one's cap. Unbonneted may therefore signify, without taking the cap off [though unbonneted occurs in King Lear, act iii. sc. 1, with the directly contrary signification]" (STEEVENS): "Unbonneted is uncovered, revealed, made known" (A.C.): Fuseli's explanation of the passage is, "I am his equal or superior in rank; and were it not so, such are my demerits [i.e. merits], that, unbonneted, without the addition of patrician or senatorial dignity, they may speak to as proud a fortune," &c.,—the bonnet, as well as the toge, being at Venice a badge of aristocratic honours to this day.

unbookish, ignorant, vii. 439.

unbraided, iii. 472; see note 109, iii. 522.

unbreath'd, unexercised, unpractised, ii. 314.

uncape, i. 384 : Explained by Warburton, "dig out the fox when earthed;" by Capell, "turn the dogs off;" and by Steevens, "turn him out of the bag;" while Nares (in Gloss.) writes thus, "It seems to imply throwing off the dogs . . . Falstaff is the fox, and he is supposed to be hidden, or kennel'd, somewhere in the house; no expression, therefore, relative to a bag-fox can be applicable, because such a fox would be already in the hands of the hunters. The uncaping is decidedly to begin the hunt after him; when the holes for escape had been stopped."

uncharge the practice, "acquit the expedient [stratagem] pursued of blame" (CALDECOTT), vii. 188.

uncharged ports, unassaulted gates, vi. 575.

unclew, to unwind = to undo, vi. 512.

uncoined constancy, iv. 503 : "To coin is to stamp and to counterfeit. He [Shakespeare] uses it in both senses; uncoined constancy signifies real and true constancy, unrefined and unadorned" (JOHNSON) : "Uncoined constancy, resembling a plain piece of metal that has not yet received any impression. Katharine was the first woman that Henry had ever loved" (A. C.).

uncomprehensive, incomprehensible, mysterious, vi. 58.

unconfirmed, "unpractised in the ways of the world" (WARBURTON) : That shows thou art unconfirmed, ii. 112.

uncouth (meaning properly "unknown"), unusual, strange : an uncouth fear, vi. 307 ; What uncouth ill event, viii. 333.

uncouth, wild : this uncouth forest, iii. 29.

uncross'd—Keeps his book, vii. 677 : "The tradesman's book was crossed when the account was paid" (COLLIER).

unearned luck, better luck than we have deserved, ii. 323.

uneath, scarcely, hardly, v. 139.

uneffectual fire, vii. 124: Here, according to Warburton, uneffectual means "shining without heat;" according to Steevens, "that is no longer seen when the light of morning approaches:" The former explanation is, I apprehend, the true one. (Compare Nash; "The moral of the whole is this, that as the ostrich, the most burning-sighted bird of all others, insomuch as the female of them hatcheth not hir eggs by covering them, but by the effectual raies of hir eies," &c. The Vnfortunate Traveller, Or the Life of Jacke Wilton, 1594, sig. H 4.)

unequal, unjust: a heavy and unequal hand, iv. 366; To punish me for what you make me do Seems much unequal, vii. 528.

unexperient, inexperienced, viii. 448.

unexpressive, inexpressible, ineffable, iii. 86.

unfair, to deprive of fairness, of beauty, viii. 351.

unfather'd heirs, "equivocal births; animals that had no animal progenitors; productions not brought forth according to the stated laws of generation" (JOHNSON), iv. 380 (Mr. Staunton gives a strange interpretation of these words: he says, "the unfather'd heirs, whom Prince Humphrey is alarmed to see the people reverence, were certain so-called prophets, who pretended to have been conceived by miracle, like Merlin," &c.).

unfurnish, to deprive, to divest: that which may Unfurnish me of reason, iii. 493.

unfurnish'd—And leave itself, ii. 383: see note 53, ii. 423.

ungartered—For going, i. 275 : "This is enumerated by Rosalind in As you like it, act iii. sc. 2; as one of the undoubted marks of love; 'Then your hose should be ungartered, your bonnet unbanded,' &c." (MALONE).

unhack'd, iii. 373; iv. 19; vii. 529: see note 38, iii. 409.

unhair'd sauciness, unbearded sauciness, iv. 67.

unhappied, made unhappy, iv. 140.

unhappily, mischievously: I should judge now unhappily (wag-gishly), v. 503; Though nothing sure, yet much unhappily ("Though her meaning cannot be certainly collected, yet there is enough to put a mischievous interpretation to it," WARBURTON), vii. 180; And purest faith unhappily (wickedly) forsworn, viii. 382.

unhappiness, mischief: she hath often dreamed of unhappiness (some "wild, wanton, unlucky trick," WARBURTON), ii. 93; heir to his unhappiness ("a disposition to mischief," STEEVENS), v. 356.

unhappy, mischievous: O most unhappy (wicked) strumpet, ii. 41; a shrewd unhappy gallows, ii. 211; A shrewd knave and an unhappy, iii. 272 (in the two last passages "roguish, waggish").

unhatch'd practice, "treason that has not taken effect" (JOHNSON), or "not brought to light, undisclosed," vii. 434.

unhearts, discourages, vi. 221.

unhoused free condition—My, vii. 381: Here unhoused has been explained "free from domestic cares," "unmarried"—an Italianism ("Casare, to house, to marrie, to wed." Florio's Ital. and Engl. Dict.).

unhousell'd, vii. 124: see note 40, vii. 220.

unicorn, pride and wrath would confound thee, &c.—Wert thou the, vi. 559; That unicorns may be betray'd with trees, vi. 636: "The account given of the unicorn is this: that he and the lion being enemies by nature, as soon as the lion sees the unicorn he betakes himself to a tree; the unicorn in his fury, and with all the swiftness of his course, running at him, sticks his horn fast in the tree, and then the lion falls upon him and kills him. Gesner, Hist. Animal." (HAMMER): (Compare Spenser;

"Like as a lyon, whose imperiall powre
A proud rebellious unicorn defyeth,
T' avoide the rash assault and wrathful stowre
Of his fiers foe, him to a tree applyeth,
And when him running in full course he spyeth,
He slips aside: the whiles that furious beast
His precious horne, sought of his enimyes, Strikes in the stocke, ne thence can be releast,
But to the mighty victor yields a bounteous feast."

The Faerie Queene, B. ii. C. v. st. 10).

unimproved, unreprieved, uncensured, unimpeached, vii. 200 ;

"The commentators on Shakespeare do not understand this word . . . 'Of unimproved mettle' is interpreted [by Johnson] 'full of spirit not regulated by knowledge.' It means just the contrary."

Gifford's note on Jonson's Works, vol. i. p. 88.

union, a pearl of the finest kind (Lat. unio), vii. 207, 209.

unjust, dishonest : unjust serving-men, iv. 268.

unkind, not according to kind or nature, unnatural : Thou art not so unkind, iii. 35 ; unkind division, v. 55 ; Titus, unkind, and careless of thine own, vi. 285 ; Bid them farewell, Cordelia, though unkind, vii. 256 ; his unkind daughters, vii. 300 ; but died unkind (childless), viii. 246.

unking'd, deprived of kingship, of royalty, iv. 163, 178.

unlick'd bear-whelp, v. 279 : "It was an opinion which, in spite of its absurdity, prevailed long, that the bear brings forth only shapeless lumps of animated flesh, which she licks into the form of bears" (JOHNSON) : see, for instance, Pliny's Hist. Nat. L. viii. c. 54 (36).

unlike, unlikely : That which but seems unlike, i. 508 ; Not unlike, sir ; that may be, ii. 181 ; Not unlike, Each way, to better yours, vi. 181 ; more Unlike than this thou tell'st, vii. 731.

unowed interest—Th', The unowned interest ("the interest which is not at this moment legally possessed by any one, however rightfully entitled to it," MALONE), iv. 61.

unpeg the basket on the house's top, Let the birds fly, and, like the famous ape, &c. vii. 172 : "Sir John Suckling, in one of his letters, may possibly allude to the same story. 'It is the story of the jack-anapes and the partridges ; thou starest after a beauty till it be lost to thee, and then 'let'st out another, and starest after that till it is gone too'" (WARNER).

unpink'd, not pierced with eyelet-holes, iii. 152.

unpitied whipping—An, "An unmerciful one" (STEEVENS), i. 493.

unplausive, not applauding, not approving, vi. 54.

unpolicied—Call great Caesar ass, "an ass without more policy than to leave the means of death within my reach, and thereby deprive his triumph of its noblest decoration" (STEEVENS), vii. 596.

unpossessing, having no possessions, incapable of possessing or inheriting, vii. 276.

unpregnant, unready, inapt, unable : This deed unshapes me quite, makes me unpregnant, i. 504 : "In the first scene the Duke says that Escalus is pregnant, i.e. ready in the forms of law. Unpregnant, therefore, in the instance before us, is unready, unprepared" (STEEVENS) : The present passage is cited by Nares in his Gloss. under "Unpregnant. Dull, stupid ; the contrary to pregnant in its sense of acute, sagacious, &c."

unpregnant of my cause, vii. 146 : "Unpregnant for having no due sense of" (WARBURTON) : "Rather, 'not quickened with a new desire of vengeance, not teeming with revenge'" (JOHNSON) : "unpregnant of is not quickened with or [not] having a lively sense of" (CALDECOTT).

unprizable, not of estimation, of small account : For shallow draught and bulk unprizable, iii. 386.

unprizable, inestimable, priceless : your brace of unprizable estimations, vii. 646 (Coles may be cited as illustrating the double meaning of this word : "Unprisable, inestimabilis." "Inestimabilis, Inestimable, not to be valued, also [see the preceding article] of no value").

unpriz'd, not valued, vii. 256.

unprofited, profitless, iii. 334.

unproper, not peculiar to an individual, common, vii. 438.

unproportion'd, "irregular, disorderly" (CALDECOTT), vii. 117.

unprovide, "divest of resolution" (Johnson's Dict.), vii. 441.

unqualitied, unmanned, deprived of his faculties, vii. 554 (but Malone would understand it to mean "unsoldiered,"—quality being formerly common in the sense of "profession").

unquestionable spirit—An, A spirit averse to conversation, iii. 45 : compare first question and questionable.

unrak'd—Where fires thou find'st, "i.e. unmade up, by covering them with fuel, so that they may be found alight in the morning" (STEEVENS), i. 412.

unready, undressed, v. 23 (twice).

unrecalling crime—His, His unrecallable crime, viii. 315.

unreconciliable, irreconcilable, vii. 585.

unrecuring, incurable, vi. 314.

unrespected, unnoticed, unregarded, viii. 370.

unrespective, inconsiderate, unthinking, "devoid of cautions and prudential consideration" (MALONE): unrespective boys, v. 420.

unrespective, unregarded, unvalued: unrespective sieve, "a common vorder" (JOHNSON), or basket for carrying out the relics of a meal, vi. 32.

unrest, disquiet, uneasiness, unhappiness, iv. 140; v. 425, 452; vi. 302, 327, 407.

unrolled, iii. 465: see note 91, iii. 519.

unrough, unbearded, vii. 63.

unseasoned, unseasonable: this unseasoned intrusion, i. 369; these unseason'd hours, iv. 354.

unseason'd, "unformed, not qualified by use" (Johnson's Dict.): 'tis an Unseason'd courtier, iii. 208.

unseal'd, unratified, iii. 260: see note 149, iii. 309.

unseam'd, ripped, cut open, vii. 6.

unseeming, not seeming, ii. 179.

unseminar'd, deprived of virility, vii. 511.

unshak'd of motion: see motion—Unshak'd of.

unshapes, confounds, i. 504.

unshout the noise, retract the noise made by shouts, vi. 232.

unshunned, inevitable, i. 485.

unsifted, unwinnowed,—unried, inexperienced, vii. 118.

unsinew'd, nerveless, weak, vii. 187.

unsisting, never at rest, i. 496: see note 131, i. 539.

unsmirched, unsmutted, undefiled, vii. 182.

unsorted, not suitable, iv. 229.

unsquar'd—Terms, vi. 21: Here, says Steevens, unsquar'd is "unadapted to their subject, as stones are unfitted to the purposes of architecture while they are yet unsquared."

unstanch'd, urinæ incontinens: an unstanch'd wench, i. 176.

unstanch'd, insatiate: unstanch'd thirst, v. 271.

unstate, to deprive of state, to degrade: I would unstate myself, to be in a due resolution, vii. 260 (see resolution); Unstate his happiness (Descend from his high and prosperous condition), vii. 557.

unswear, to recant what is sworn, iv. 35; vii. 437.

untaught, rude, unmannerly: O thou untaught! what manners is in this, &c. vi. 471.

untent his person, bring his person out, come out, of his tent, vi. 40.

untented woundings, wounds not yet treated—or so severe and deep that they will not admit of being treated—by the insertion of the surgeon's tent (see first tent), vii. 271.

unthread the rude eye of rebellion, iv. 70 : see note 135, iv. 96.

untimeable, not in good time, iii. 71.

untraded oath, "a singular oath, not in common use" (MALONE), an unhackneyed oath, vi. 77.

untried Of that wide gap—And leave the growth, iii. 460 : "Our author attends more to his ideas than to his words. 'The growth of the wide gap' is somewhat irregular ; but he means, the growth, or progression of the time which filled up the gap of the story between Perdita's birth and her sixteenth year. 'To leave this growth untried' is 'to leave the passages of the intermediate years unnoted and unexamined'" (JOHNSON).

untrue—My most true mind thus maketh mine, viii. 405 : see note 60, viii. 433.

untrussing, untying the points or tagged laces which attached the hose or breeches to the doublet, i. 488 (So, on the contrary, to truss the points was the usual term for tying them).

untruth, disloyalty : So my untruth had not provok'd him, iv. 133.

untruth, unfaithfulness in love : Let all untruths stand by thy stained name, vi. 88.

unvalu'd, invaluable : unvalu'd jewels, v. 373.

unvalu'd, not prized, ordinary : unvalu'd persons, vii. 116.

unwapper'd, unworn, not debilitated, viii. 206.

unwashed hands—Do it with, iv. 262 : "Do it immediately, or the first thing in the morning, even without staying to wash your hands" (STEEVENS) : "It appears to me that Falstaff means to say do it without retracting or repenting of it" (MASON).

unweighed, not considerate, careless, i. 360.

unwish'd five thousand men—Thou hast, "Thou hast wished five thousand men away" (JOHNSON), iv. 481.

unwitted, deprived of understanding, vii. 408.

unyoke, to loose from the yoke, to have done working : tell me that, and unyoke ("unravel this, and your day's work is done, your team you may then unharness," CALDECOTT ; whose explanation is perhaps right), vii. 193.

up, shut up, in confinement : so the poor third is up, till death enlarge his confine, vii. 544.

up and down, exactly, for all the world : here's my mother's breath up and down, i. 279 ; Here's his dry hand up and down, ii. 88 ; up and down she doth resemble thee, vi. 345.

up-cast (a term at the game of bowls), a throw, a cast, vii. 657.

uproar, to throw into confusion, vii. 56.

up-spring reels—The swaggering, vii. 119: "It appears from the following passage in Alphonsus, Emperor of Germany, by Chapman, that the up-spring was a German dance;

'We Germans have no changes in our dances;
An almain and an up-spring, that is all' (STEEVENS):

Karl Elze, who has recently reprinted Chapman's Alphonsus at Leipzig, remarks that the word up-spring "is the 'Hüpfauft,' the last and consequently wildest dance at the old German merry-makings. See Ayrer's Dramen, ed. by Keller, iv. 2840 and 2846;

Ey, jztz geht erst der hüpfauft an.

Ey, Herr, jztz kummt erst der hüpfauft.

No epithet could therefore be more appropriate to this drunken dance than Shakespeare's 'swaggering.' I need hardly add, that 'upspring' is an almost literal translation of the German name."

up-staring—With hair: see hair to stare, &c. up-swarm'd, raised in swarms, iv. 370.

up-trimmed—New, Newly dressed-up, decorated, iv. 34.

upon the gad—Done: see gad—Done upon the.

upright, upwards: Would I not leap upright, vii. 322.

upward, the top: from th' extremest upward of thy head, vii. 340.

urchin, a hedgehog: Ten thousand swelling toads, as many urchins, vi. 304.

urchin, a particular sort of fairy: urchins Shall . . . All exercise on thee, i. 187; we'll dress Like urchins, i. 402.

urchin-shows, fairy-shows, i. 202.

urchin-snouted, with a snout like that of a hedgehog, viii. 276.

urn, used in the sense of "tomb:" the most noble corse that ever herald Did follow to his urn, vi. 237: and see, on the word "in-urn'd," note 32, vii. 219. (In a passage of Fortiguerra's Ricciardetto, the "avello" or "tomba" wherein Serpedonte shuts up Despina alive is called "urna;"

"S' empie lo Scricca tutto di stupori
A quelle voci, e faissi aprir la porta Dell' urna, ed alla figlia egli si porta."

C. xv. 50.)

Urswick—Sir Christopher, v. 439: This person—who was chaplain to the Countess of Richmond, and afterwards almoner to King Henry VII.—is called Sir as being a priest: see third sir.

usance, interest of money: ii. 354, 357; usances, ii. 356.

use, usance, interest of money: Both thanks and use, i. 446; I gave him use for it, ii. 92; being kept together and put to use, iii. 361; gold that's put to use, viii. 264; That use is not forbidden usury, viii. 352.

use, to render it, Upon his death, &c.—The other half in, ii. 404: "Antonio tells the duke, that if he will abate the fine for the state's half, he (Antonio) will be contented to take the other, in trust, after Shylock's death to render it to his daughter's husband. That is, it was, during Shylock's life, to remain at interest in Antonio's hands, and Shylock was to enjoy the produce of it" (RITSON): "That is, in trust for Shylock during his life, for the purpose of securing it at his death to Lorenzo. Some critics explain in use, upon interest—a sense which the phrase certainly sometimes bore; but that interpretation is altogether inconsistent, in the present passage, with the generosity of Antonio's character. In conveyances of land, where it is intended to give the estate to any person after the death of another, it is necessary that a third person should be possessed of the estate, and the use be declared to the one after the death of the other; or the estate to the future possessor would be rendered insecure. This is called a conveyance to uses, and the party is said to be possessed, or rather seised to the use of such an one, or to the use that he render or convey the land to such an one, which is expressed in law French by the terms seisic al use, and in Latin, seisitus in usum alicujus, viz. AB or CD. This latter phrase Shakespeare has rendered with all the strictness of a technical conveyancer, and has made Antonio desire to have one half of Shylock's goods in use,—to render it upon his, Shylock's, death, to Lorenzo" (ANON., apud HALLIWELL).

use, present possession: my full heart Remains in use with you, vii. 506 ("The poet seems to allude to the legal distinction between use and absolute possession," JOHNSON).

use, profit, benefit: lose the use of all deceit, iv. 70; make use now, v. 543.

use, custom, common occurrence: these things are beyond all use, vi. 640.

use, to continue, to make a practice of: If thou use to beat me, vi. 28.

usurer's chain, ii. 90: Gold chains were formerly worn by rich merchants; and merchants were the chief usurers of those days.

utis—Old, "Festivity in a great degree" (STEEVENS), "rare fun" (STAUNTON), iv. 341; see first old: "Utis, or rather Utas, quasi hui-tas; from huit, French. The eighth day, or the space of eight days, after any festival. It was a law-term, and occurs in some of our statutes: now more commonly called the octave, as the octave of St. Hilary, &c. 'Any day between the feast and the eighth day was said to be within the utas.' Cowell, &c. See Dr. Wordsworth's Eccles. Biogr. i. 62." Nares's Gloss.

utter, to sell ("To utter is a legal phrase often made use of in law-proceedings and Acts of Parliament, and signifies to vend by retail," REED): Money's a meddler, That doth utter all men's ware-a, iii. 475; but Mantua's law Is death to any he that utters them, vi. 463.

utter what thou dost not know—Thou wilt nat, iv. 232 : Ray gives "A woman conceals what she knows not." Proverbs, p. 46, ed. 1768.

utterance !—Come, fate, into the list, And champion me to th', vii.
 33 ; Which he to seek of me again, perforce, Behoves me keep at utter- ance, vii. 673 : Utterance is from the French,—combattre à outrance meaning "to fight to extremity, till one of the combatants was slain :" but in the second of the above passages, as Steevens observes, keep at utterance is equivalent to "keep at the extremity of defiance."

utter'd by base sale of chapmen's tongues—Beauty is bought by judg- ment of the eye, Not, ii. 176 : "The meaning is, that—the estimation of beauty depends not on the uttering or proclamation of the seller, but on the eye of the buyer" (JOHNSON) : Here Mr. Staunton explains utter'd "put forth :" it is perhaps intended to convey the double sense of proclaiming and vending : see first utter.

uttered—Till death be, ii. 141 : see note 33, ii. 156.

uttermost, Or else a breath—Either to the, vi. 74 : Here to the ut- termost has the same meaning as to the utterance : see utterance, &c.

vailing clouds ("letting those clouds which obscured their brightness sink from before them," JOHNSON), ii. 219 ; vails, viii. 249.

vail, a sinking, a setting : the vail and darkening of the sun, vi. 98.

'vailful, availful, i. 505.

vails, perquisites : certain vails, viii. 24.

vain, "light of tongue, not veracious" (JOHNSON) : 'Tis holy sport, to be a little vain, i. 26.

valanced, fringed (with a beard), vii. 142.

Valdes—The great pirate, viii. 48 : "The Spanish Armada, I believe, furnished our author with this name. Don Pedro de Valdes was an admiral in that fleet, and had the command of the great galleon of Andalusia. His ship being disabled, he was taken by Sir Francis Drake, on the twenty-second of July 1588, and sent to Dartmouth.
 This play therefore, we may conclude, was not written till after that period. The making one of this Spaniard's ancestors a pirate was probably relished by the audience in those days" (MALONE): "In Robert Greene's Spanish Masquerado, 1589, the curious reader may find a very particular account of this Valdes, who was commander of the Andalusian troops, and then prisoner in England" (STEEVENS).

Valentine is past—Saint, ii. 308: "Alluding to the old saying, that birds begin to couple on St. Valentine's day" (STEEVENS).

Valentine's day, &c.—To-morrow is Saint, vii. 181: "This song alludes to the custom of the first girl seen by a man on the morning of this day being considered his Valentine or true love. . . . The custom of the different sexes choosing themselves mates on St. Valentine's Day, February 14th, the names being selected either by lots or methods of divination, is of great antiquity in England. The name so drawn was the valentine of the drawer" (HALLIWELL).

validity, worth, value, iii. 282, 327; vi. 437; vii. 158, 251.

valu'd file—The: see first file.

Vanity the puppet's part—Take, vii. 279: The commentators may be right in seeing here an allusion to the character of Vanity in some of the early Moralities or Moral-plays: but we occasionally meet with similar passages where there does not appear to be any such allusion; e.g.

"Young Mistris Vanity is also sad, Because the parrot's dead she lately had," &c.

Withers's Abuses Stript and Whipt,—Joy, p. 141, ed. 1617:

In supposing that in the present passage Kent alludes to a puppet-show, Mr. Collier is perhaps mistaken: here, as in many other passages of our old writers, "puppet" may be nothing else than a term of contempt for a female.

vanity, a magical show or illusion: Some vanity of mine art, i. 219:

"So, in the romance of Emare [Ritson's Anc. Engl. Metrical Romances, vol. ii. p. 208];

'The emperour sayde on hygh, Sertes, thys ys a fawry,
Or ellys a vanyte'"

(STEEVENS).

vaunt-couriers, forerunners, precursors (Fr. avant-coureurs), vii. 294.

vaward, the forepart (properly, of an army,—“The Vaward, Prima acies.” Coles's Lat. and Engl. Dict.), ii. 307; iv. 324, 483; v. 8; vi. 152.

veal, quoth the Dutchman:—is not veal a calf? ii. 218: “I suppose by veal she means well, sounded as foreigners usually pronounce that word; and introduced merely for the sake of the subsequent question” (MALONE): “The same joke occurs in The Wisdome of Dr. Dodypoll; ‘Doctor. Hans, my very speciall friend; fait and trot, me be right glad for to [dele to] see you veale. Hans. What, do you make a calfe of me, M. Doctor?’ [sig. c 3, ed. 1600]” (BOSWELL): Dr. Wellesley has discovered that, in “this miserable skirmish of puns,” certain words “make up the syllables of Lord Longaville’s name, compounded of long calf veal, or langué half veal.” Stray Notes on the Text of Shakespeare, p. 17.

vegetives, vegetables, plants, viii. 40.

velure, velvet, iii. 144.

velvet-guards, iv. 253: By this expression is meant, as Malone observes, “the higher rank of female citizens,” whose gowns (at least their holiday ones) were guarded (i. e. faced, trimmed) with velvet: see guard and guards.

veneys: see venue.

venge, to avenge, iv. 111, 432; v. 50, 254; vi. 444; vii. 317, 653; viii. 335.

vengeance, mischief, harm: That could do no vengeance to me, iii. 62.

Venice, gave His body to that pleasant country's earth—At, iv. 159: “This is not historically true. The Duke of Norfolk’s death did not take place till [long] after Richard’s murder” (MALONE).

Venice—If Cupid have not spent all his quiver in, ii. 81 : Long before this comedy was produced, various writers had characterised Venice as the place where Cupid "reigns and revels:" and compare Greene; "Hearing that of all the citties in Europe, Venice hath most semblance of Venus vanities Because therefore this great city of Venice is holden Loues Paradise," &c. Newer too late, Part Second, sig. q 2 and q 2 verso, ed. 1611 : The publication of Coryat's Crudities, 1611, made the Venetian courtesans well known in England.

venom, where no venom else, &c. iv. 127 : According to the legend, St. Patrick banished all venomous reptiles from Ireland.

venomous wights, "venifici, those who practise nocturnal sorcery" (STEEVENS), vi. 64.

vent—Full of, vi. 212 : see note 193, vi. 267.

ventages, small holes or apertures, vii. 162.

venue or veney, (a fencing term) a thrust, "a coming on, an onset; a turn or bout; a hit. The commentators on Shakespeare have produced a great variety of instances; and differ in their explanations only because they mistake application for meaning" (Richardson's Dict.) : venue (used metaphorically), ii. 208 ; veney, i. 352 (Compare Jonson's Every Man in his Humour; "Mat. But one venue, sir. Bob. Venue! fie; most gross denomination as ever I heard : O, the stoccata, while you live, sir; note that." Works, vol. i. p. 39, ed. Gifford).

verbal, "verbose, full of talk" (JOHNSON), "plain-spoken" (KNIGHT) : By being so verbal, vii. 663.

versing, expressing in verse, ii. 276.

vestal throned by the west—A fair, ii. 278 : I have already noticed this charming compliment to Queen Elizabeth in the Memoir of Shakespeare, i. p. 78.

via, away! an interjection of exultation or encouragement ("Via, an aduerbe of encouraging much used by commanders, as also by riders to their horses, Goe on, forward, on, away, goe to, on quickly." Florio's Ital. and Engl. Dict.), i. 369 ; ii. 210, 214, 359 ; iv. 477 ; v. 256.

Vice . . . Who, with dagger of lath, &c.—Like to the old, iii. 383 ; that reverend vice, that gray iniquity, iv. 243 ; now is this Vice's dagger become a squire, iv. 362 ; like the formal Vice, Iniquity, v. 394 ; a vice of kings A king of shreds and patches, vii. 169 : These passages allude to an important character in the old Moral-plays, the Vice, so named doubtless from the vicious qualities attributed to him : "As the Devil," says Mr. Collier, "now and then appeared without the Vice, so the Vice sometimes appeared without the Devil. Malone tells us that 'the principal employment of the Vice was to belabour the Devil;' but although he was frequently so engaged, he had also higher duties. He figured now and then in the religious plays of a later date, and, as has been shewn, in The Life and Repentance of Mary Magdalen, 1567, he performed the part of her lover, before her conversion, under the name of Infidelity: in King Darius, 1565, he also acted a prominent part, by his own impulses to mischief, under the name of Iniquity, without any prompting from the representative of the principle of evil. Such was the general style of the Vice, and as Iniquity he is spoken of by Shakespeare (Richard III. Act iii. Sc. 1) and Ben Jonson (Staple of News, second Intermean). The Vice and Iniquity seem, however, sometimes to have been distinct persons; and he was not unfrequently called by the name of particular vices: thus, in Lusty Juventus, the Vice performs the part of Hypocrisy; in Common Conditions, he is called Conditions; in Like will to Like, he is named Nichol New-fangle; in The Trial of Treasure, his part is that of Inclination; in All for Money, he is called Sin; in Tom Tyler and his Wife, Desire; and in Appius and Virginia, Haphazard. Though Mr. Douce is unquestionably correct when he states that the Vice was 'generally dressed in a fool's habit' [hence the expression in Hamlet, 'A king of shreds and patches'], he did not by any means constantly wear the particular-coloured habiliments of a fool; he was sometimes required to act a gallant, and now and then to assume the disguise of virtues it suited his purpose to personate. . . . The Vice, like the fool, was sometimes furnished with a dagger of lath, and it was not unusual that it should be gilt. . . . Tattle [in Jonson's Staple of News] observes, 'but there [here] is never a fiend to carry him [the Vice] away;' and in the first Intermean of the same play, Mirth leads us to suppose that it was a very common termination of the adventures of the Vice for him to be carried off to hell on the back of the devil: 'he would carry away the Vice on his back, quick to hell, in every play where he came.' In The Longer thou livest the more Fool thou art, and in Like will to Like, the Vice is disposed of nearly in this summary manner: in the first, Confusion carries him to the devil, and in the last, Lucifer bears him off to the infernal regions on his shoulders. In King Darius, the Vice runs to hell of his own accord, to escape from Constancy, Equity, and Charity. According to Bishop Harnet (in a passage cited by Malone,—Shakespeare by Boswell, iii. 27), the Vice was in the habit of riding and beating the devil, at other times than when he was thus carried against his will to punishment." Hist. of English Dram. Poetry, &c. vol. ii. pp. 265-270.

vicious in my guess, &c.—Though I perchance am, vii. 420: "Vicious in my guess" does not mean that he is an ill guesser [Warburton's explanation], but that he is apt to put the worst construction on every thing he attempts to account for" (STEEVENS): "Iago, I apprehend, means only, 'though I perhaps am mistaken, led into an error by my natural disposition, which is apt to shape faults that have no existence'" (MALONE).

viol-de-gamboys, a base-viol or viol da gamba, iii. 331: "It appears, from numerous passages in our old plays, that a viol de gambo was an indispensable piece of furniture in every fashionable house, where it hung up in the best chamber, much as the guitar does in Spain, and the violin in Italy, to be played on at will, and to fill up the void of conversation. Whoever pretended to fashion affected an acquaintance with this instrument." Gifford's note on Jonson's Works, vol. ii. p. 125.

violenteth, becomes violent, acts with violence, rages, vi. 67.

virginalling, playing with her fingers as upon the virginals, iii. 424.

virginals—The, The more usual name for the musical instrument, the virginal, viii. 161: "The virginals (probably so called because chiefly played upon by young girls) resembled in shape the 'square' pianoforte of the present day, as the harpsichord did the 'grand.' The sound of the pianoforte is produced by a hammer striking the strings; but when the keys of the virginals or harpsichord were pressed, the 'jacks' (slender pieces of wood, armed at the upper ends with quills) were raised to the strings, and acted as plectra, by impinging or twitching them." Dict.*: "In those parts of the North with which I am best acquainted, persons are said to be wall-eyed when the white of the eye is very large, and to one side. On the borders 'sic folks' are considered unlucky. The term is also occasionally applied to horses with similar eyes, though its more general acceptation seems to be when the iris of the eye is white, or of a very pale colour. A wall-eyed horse sees perfectly well." Brockett's Glossary of North Country Words, &c.: "Hornes perfectly white, or cream-coloured, have the iris white and the pupil red. When horses of other colours, and that are usually pied, have a white iris and a black pupil, they are said to be wall-eyed. Vulgar opinion has decided that a wall-eyed horse is never subject to blindness; but this is altogether erroneous." The Horse, by Youatt, p. 131, ed. 1848: The author of The Dialect of Craven, &c., under "Wall-een, White or grey eyes," cites from the first of the passages of Shakespeare referred to in this article the words "wall-ey'd wrath," and observes, "It frequently happens that when a person is in an excessive passion, a large portion of the white of the eye is visible. This confirms the propriety and force of the above expression").

wappen'd, over-worn, vi. 551 (See Harman's Caueat or Warening for Common Cursetors, &c., 1573, last sentence of p. 69, reprint 1814; Dekker's English Villanies, &c. ed. 1632, 2 [3]^d stanza of the Canterers' Song, sig. o verso; and Grose's Class. Dict. of the Vulgar Tongue in v. "Wap").

ward—To whom [i. e. his majesty] I am now in, iii. 207: The heirs of great estates, by a feudal custom, were under the wardship of the sovereign, who had the power even of giving them in marriage.

ward, custody, confinement: ere they will have me go to ward, v. 190.

ward, a guard in fencing, a posture of defence (used metaphorically in some of the following passages): come from thy ward, i. 191; the ward of her purity, i. 371; beat from his best ward, iii. 421; Thou knowest my old ward, iv. 237; at what ward you lie, vi. 16; Omit a ward, viii. 203; what wards, what blows, iv. 214; at all these wards I lie, vi. 16.

ward, to defend, to protect: God will, in justice, ward you as his soldiers, v. 450; a hand that warded him From thousand dangers, vi. 317.

warden-pies, pies made of wardens, large baking-pears, iii. 464.

warder, a guard, a sentinel: memory, the warder of the brain, vii. 19; Where be these warders, v. 12; castles topple on their warders' heads, vii. 47.

warder, a sort of truncheon; the throwing down of which, as appears from the following passages (and from passages in other writers), was a solemn mode of prohibiting a combat: the king hath thrown his warder down, iv. 116; the king did throw his warder down, iv. 366.

Ware—The bed of, iii. 365: This celebrated bed, made of oak richly carved, is still preserved: it measures seven feet six inches in height, ten feet nine inches in length, and ten feet nine inches in width. At what inn in Ware it was kept during Shakespeare's days is uncertain: but, after being for many years at the Saracen's Head, it was sold there by auction in September 1864, and knocked down at a hundred guineas (the newspapers erroneously adding that Mr. Charles Dickens was the purchaser).

'ware pencils, ho! . . . My red dominical, my golden letter . . . so full of O's, ii. 212: "Rosaline says that Biron had drawn her picture in his letter; and afterwards, playing on the word letter, Katharine compares her to a text B. Rosaline in reply advises her to beware of pencils, that is, of drawing likenesses, lest she should retaliate; which she afterwards does by comparing her to a red dominical letter, and calling her marks of the small-pox oes" (MASON): It must be remembered that Rosaline was a darkish beauty, Katharine a fair one. (I may notice that our early writers are fond of alluding, in comparisons, to the Dominical Letter: e.g. "she swears a lookes for all the world like the Dominicall Letter, in his red coate." Cuptd's Whirligig, sig. c 2, ed. 1611: "Especially that at large, if you can, in red, like a Dominicall letter." Dekker's If it be not good, the Duel is in it, 1612, sig. c 3.)

warp—Though thou the waters, iii. 35: In this passage warp has been variously interpreted: the following explanation by Whiter is probably the right one; "The cold is said to warp the waters, when it contracts them into the solid substance of ice, and suffers them no longer to continue in a liquid or flowing state" (According to Johnson,—whom Steevens pronounces to be "certainly right,"—warp means here nothing more than "changed from their natural state:" and Nares would understand it as equivalent to "weave").

warrior—O my fair, vii. 400; unhandsome warrior ("unfair assailant," JOHNSON) as I am, vii. 434: "This phrase [warrior] was introduced by our copiers of the French Sonnetteers. Ronsard frequently calls his mistresses guerrieres; and Southern, his imi-tator, is not less prodigal of the same appellation. Thus, in his Fifth Sonnet;

'And, my warrior, my light shines in thy fayre eyes.'

Again, in his Sixth Sonnet;

'I am not, my cruell warrior, the Thebain,' &c.

Again, ibid.;

'I came not, my warrior, of the blood Lidian.'

Had not I met with the word thus fantastically applied, I should have concluded that Othello called his wife a warrior because she had embarked with him on a warlike expedition, and not in consequence of Ovid's observation—'Militat omnes amans, et habet sua castra Cupido'" (STEEVENS).

wash'd a tile, laboured in vain, viii. 164: a Latinism, Laterem lavare, to lose one's labour.

Washford—Earl of, v. 65: "It appears from Camden's Britannia and Holinshed's Chronicle of Ireland, that Wexford was anciently called Weyaford. In Crompton's Mansion of Magnanimitie it is written as here, Washford. This long list of titles is taken from the epitaph formerly fixed on Lord Talbot's tomb in Rothen in Normandy. Where this author found it, I have not been able to ascertain, for it is not in the common historians. The oldest book in which I have met with it is the tract above mentioned, which was printed in 1599, posterior to the date of this play. Numerous as this list is, the epitaph has one more, which, I suppose, was only rejected, because it would not easily fall into the verse, 'Lord Lovetoft of Worsop.' It concludes as here; 'Lord Falconbridge, Knight of the [most] noble order of St. George, St. Michael, and the Golden Fleece, Great Marshall to King Henry VI. of his realm in [of] France, who died in the battle of Bourdeaux [in the year of our Lord] 1453' [The Mansion of Magnanimitie, 1599, 4to, sig. E 4]" (MALONE): "Wexford was sometimes written Washford, even so late as the time of Sir William Temple; see my Memoirs of him, i. 384.—This enumeration of titles and honours is clearly conformable to a monumental inscription, said by Brooke the herald to have existed at Rouen; but this herald was imposed upon, and the enumeration is erroneous in the particulars which I have distinguished ["Lord Cromwell of Wingfield,"—"The thrice-victorious Lord of Falconbridge"].—I suppose that Brooke's work [no, Crompton's] is the tract printed after this play, in which Malone says he found the titles taken from the monumental plate at Rouen; but Talbot was buried at Whitechurch in Shropshire, where there is, or was, a correct description of him. See Vincent upon Brooke, p. 451-4, and Camden's Shropshire, i. 659." Courtenay's Comment. on the Historical Plays of Shakspeare, vol. i. pp. 234-6.

wassail, festivity, intemperance, drinking-bout (from the Saxon was hæl, "be in health,"—the form of health-drinking), vii. 19; vii. 119; wassails, ii. 220; vii. 509.

wassail-candle—A, &c. iv. 324: "A wassail-candle is a large candle lighted up at a feast. There is a poor quibble upon the word wax, which signifies increase as well as the matter of the honeycomb" (JOHNSON): see the preceding article.

waste—The night grows to, "The night is wasting apace" (MALONE), vii. 451.

wasteful cock—A, vi. 529: see note 69, vi. 586.

Wat, a familiar name for a hare, viii. 262.

watch—Give me a, v. 444: Steevens was, no doubt, right when he observed; "I believe that particular kind of candle is here meant which was anciently called a watch, because, being marked out into sections, each of which was a certain portion of time in burning, it supplied the place of the more modern instrument by which we measure the hours. I have seen these candles represented with great nicety in some of the pictures of Albert Durer."

watch her, as we watch these kites, &c.—That is, to, iii. 155; I'll watch him tame, vii. 417; you must be watched ere you be made tame, vi. 48: These passages allude to the method of taming hawks by keeping them from sleep; but I do not believe (with Mr. Staunton) that there is the same allusion either in I think we've watch'd you now, i. 413, or in Had that was well worth watching, vii. 667.

water—False as, "As water, that will support no weight, nor keep any impression" (JOHNSON), vii. 463.

water glideth by the mill Than wots the miller of—More, vi. 299: Ray gives, among English proverbs, "Much water goes by the mill the miller knows not of. Assai acqua passa per il molino che il molinaio non vede. Ital.;" and, among Scottish proverbs, "Meikle water runs where the miller sleeps." Proverbs, pp. 136, 299, ed. 1768.

water-galls, secondary rainbows, viii. 332 (This word, far from common even in our early writers, is several times used by Horace Walpole; "False good news are always produced by true good, like the watergall by the rainbow;" again, "Thank heaven it is complete, and did not remain imperfect like a watergall;" again, "But what signifies repeating the faint efforts of an old watergall opposed to its own old sun!" Letters, vol. i. p. 310, and vol. vi. pp. 1, 187, ed. Cunningham: In The Dialect of Craven we find "Weather-gall, A secondary or broken rainbow. Germ. wassergalle, repercussio Iridis").

WAX, to grow: to make his godhead wax (with a quibble), ii. 211; Old I do wax, iv. 498; a full eye will wax hollow, iv. 503; the elder I wax, iv. 504; waxed pale, i. 297; waxed shorter, vi. 537; waxen (increase) in their mirth (Farmer being wrong in supposing that here waxen is a corruption of the Saxon yexen, to hiccup), ii. 276; waxen deaf, v. 154.

WAX—A man of, A man as perfectly formed as if he had been modelled in wax, vi. 400 (In some of the provinces a man of wax means nowadays "a smart cleverish fellow;" vide Moor's Suffolk Words and The Dialect of Craven: but assuredly Shakespeare does not employ the expression in that sense): and see the next article.

WAX—A sea of, vi. 508: Since I remarked on this passage (note 4, vi. 577) that "if the text be right, there is, of course, an allusion to the practice of writing with a style on table-books covered with wax," Dr. Ingleby has put forth a brochure entitled The Still Lion, An Essay towards the restoration of Shakespeare's text. Being part of the Shakespeare-jahrbuch, ii.; wherein he gives, with astonishing confidence, entirely new glosses of "a sea of wax" and of "a man of wax,"—his attempt to show that Shakespeare employs a SUBSTANTIVE "wax," in the sense of "expandedness or growth," vying in absurdity with any of the misinterpretations that ignorance and conceit have ever tried to force upon the great dramatist. Lest an abridgment should do injustice to Dr. Ingleby's "discoveries," I subjoin them entire:—

"The pedantic poet in Timon of Athens, i. 1, addresses the painter in the following tumid and bombastic terms;

'You see this confluence, this great flood of visitors.
I have in this rough work [shewing his Ms.] shaped out a man Whom this beneath world doth embrace and hug
With amplest entertainment: my free drift Halts not particularly, but moves itself
In a wide sea of waxe: no levell'd malice Infects one comma of [in] the course I hold;
But flies an eagle's flight, bold and forth on,
Leaving no track behind.'

In this passage, my free drift, and a wide sea of wax, are contrasted with the notion of halting particularly, and levell'd malice. In other words, the poet is contrasting generality with particularity. The visitors who throng the ante-room and presence-chamber of Lord Timon, are compared by the poet to a sea at flood-time, and are therefore designated a confluence and a great flood. Timon is said to be embraced with amplest entertainment by this flood; and the poet, disclaiming personal censure, declares that his 'free drift moves itself in a wide sea of waxe.' What is the meaning of waxe? Every one knows that the verb to wax means to grow; and the old English writers employ it indifferently of increase and decrease; a thing, with them, may wax smaller or greater, weaker or stronger. To wax was to change condition simply. But more strictly it was and is used in opposition to wane. If anything changes its condition, it either waxes or wanes. In this restricted sense, Shakespeare in several places uses the verb to wax, of the sea:

‘Who marks the waxing sea grow wave by wave.’

Titus Andronicus, iii. 1.

‘His pupil age

Man-enter’d thus, he waxed like a sea.’ Coriolanus, ii. 1.

The old editors and commentators seem not to have had the faintest suspicion of the meaning of the expression, ‘a wide sea of wax.’ Hanmer and Steevens explain it as an allusion to the Roman and early English practice of writing with a style on tablets coated with wax, so that the poet in Timon must be supposed to have literally ‘shaped out’ his man in wax, as much so as if he had modelled him. All the editors have followed in this rut; even Messrs. Dyce and Staunton, of whom better things might have been expected. The only emendation that has been made on waxe is Mr. Collier’s verse, which Mr. Staunton rejects, though he still thinks waxe a misprint for something. Very strange indeed is all this speculation, in the face of the certain fact that waxe or wax occurs as a substantive, in the very sense of expandedness (or growth), in two other places in Shakespeare, and once in Ben Jonson. Here are the passages:

‘Chief Justice. What! you are as a candle, the better part burnt out.

Falstaff. A wassail candle, my lord; all tallow: if I did say of wax, my growth would approve the truth.’

2 Henry IV. i. 2.

‘Why, he’s a man of wax.’

Romeo and Juliet, i. 3.

‘A man of wax’ is a man of full growth. Of Falstaff it would mean, a man of ample dimensions; of Romeo it means, a man of puberty, ‘a proper man.’ Again in The Fall of Mortimer, a fragmentary drama by Ben Jonson, we read,

‘At what a divers price do divers men

Act the same thing[s]! another might have had,

Perhaps the hurdle, or at least the axe,

For what I have, this crownnet, robes, and waxe.’

Here waxe is ‘personal aggrandisement—the substantive accomplishment of the verb to wax great.’ (Collier, Coleridge, and Shakespeare, p. 129.) Let us hope that we have heard the last of ‘the waxen tables of the ancients!’ pp. 226-8.

1. The passage of Timon of Athens is unquestionably a very difficult one, and perhaps not altogether free from corruption: but what must be that critic’s idea of the proprieties of language who imagines that a sea of wax can mean “a sea of increase—a sea at flood-time”?

2. Who, except Dr. Ingleby, would ever have dreamed of quoting Falstaff's quibble, "A wassail candle, my lord; all tallow: if I did say of wax, my growth would approve the truth," as an evidence of the existence of a substantive "wax" in the sense of "expandedness or growth"?

3. Even if his own reading had not supplied him with some of the passages in various old authors that clearly show the true meaning of "a man of wax," it seems inconceivable that Dr. Ingleby should have so grossly misunderstood those words in Romeo and Juliet as to explain them "a man of puberty, a proper man," since he could hardly have overlooked the following notes in the Variorum Shakespeare, which are sufficiently to the purpose;
 "a man of wax"] So in Wily Beguiled,

'Why, he's a man as one should picture him in wax.'

[Sig. D 3 verso, ed. 1606]. STEEVENS: "

"a man of wax"] Well made, as if he had been modelled in wax, as Mr. Steevens by a happy quotation has explained it. 'When you, Lydia, praise the waxen arms of Telephus,' says Horace [Waxen, well-shaped, fine-turned], &c. S[tephen] W[eston]."

I add another passage which is decisive as to the true meaning of "a man of wax;"

"A sweet face, an exceeding daintie hand;

A body, were it framed of wax

By all the cunning artists of the world,

It could not better be proportioned."

A Pleasant Comedie of Faire Em, &c. sig. B, ed. 1631.

4. But Dr. Ingleby becomes almost an object of pity when he allows himself to be persuaded by a silly pamphleteer that in the line of the opening speech of Jonson's fragment, The Fall of Mortimer,

"For what I have, this crownet, robes, and waxe, the word "waxe" signifies "personal aggrandisement." Now, a little further on in the same speech we find

"To-day is Mortimer made Earl of March;"

and Jonson tells us in his Argument that "The First Act comprehends Mortimer's pride and security, raised to the degree of an earl, by the queen's favour and love," &c.; which, taken together with the words "crownet and robes," is quite enough to determine that "waxe" means some sort of waxen seal connected with a patent confirming Mortimer in his new dignity of earl.

like a waxen image 'gainst a fire, i. 285: Allusions to the alleged practice of witches in roasting before a fire images of the persons they wished to torment or destroy; whose bodies, it was supposed, wasted away as the images melted.

WAXEN coat, iv. 114: see note 14, iv. 184: In support of my explanation of waxen in this passage, I may cite the following lines from the ballad of Hardyknute (modern though it be);

"Tho' Britons tremble at his name,
I sune sall make him wail
That eir my sword was made sae sharp, Sae saft his coat of mail."

Waxen epitaph—Not worshipp'd with a, iv. 431: worshipp'd, i.e. honoured: "Steevens says that the allusion is 'to the ancient custom of writing on waxen tablets;' and Malone proves, at the expense of two pages, that his friend has mistaken the poet's meaning, and that he himself is—just as wide of it. In many parts of the continent it is customary, upon the decease of an eminent person, for his friends to compose short laudatory poems, epitaphs, &c., and affix them to the herse, or grave, with pins, wax, paste, &c. Of this practice, which was once prevalent here also, I had collected many notices . . . To this practice Shakespeare alludes. He had, at first, written 'paper' epitaph, which he judiciously changed to 'waxen,' as less ambiguous, and altogether as familiar to his audience. Henry's meaning therefore is, 'I will either have my full history recorded with glory, or lie in an undistinguished grave; not merely without an inscription sculptured in stone, but unworshipped (unhonoured) even by a waxen epitaph, i.e. by the short-lived compliment of a paper fastened on it.'" wild horses' heels—Present me Death on the wheel or at, vi. 190 : The punishment of the wheel was not known at Rome ; but we read of Mettius Tuffetius (miscalled Suffetius in Malone's note apud his Shakespeare, by Boswell, 1821) being torn asunder by quadrigæ driven in opposite directions : “However, as Shakspeare has coupled this species of punishment with another that certainly was unknown to ancient Rome, it is highly probable that he was not apprized of the story of Mettius Suffetius [sic], and that in this, as in various other instances, the practice of his own time was in his thoughts ; for in 1594 John Chastel had been thus executed in France for attempting to assassinate Henry the Fourth" (MALONE): "Shakespeare might have found mention of this punishment in our ancient romances. Thus, in The Sowdon of Babyloyn," &c. (STEEVENS): (Compare too,

"Zef ony Crystyn be so hardy his [i.e. Mahownde's] feyth to denye, wimpled, hooded, veiled, blindfolded, ii. 187.

Winchester-goose, v. 15: a cant term for a certain venereal sore, because the stews in Southwark were under the jurisdiction of the Bishop of Winchester; to whom, in the present passage, Gloster tauntingly applies the term ("Poulain . . . a botch in the groine, a Winchester Goose." Cotgrave's Fr. and Engl. Dict.: According to Mr. Collier, "there is no necessary reference to it in the text:" but, though various words of reproach—such as lurdan, ribald, &c. &c.—were formerly used without any reference to their original significations, Winchester-goose (even if it had not been applied to the Bishop of Winchester) was too peculiar an expression to be ever employed as a general term of abuse. Gloster means here to taunt Winchester with his licentious life; he afterwards, v. 37, tells him;

"Thou art a most pernicious usurer; Froward by nature, enemy to peace;
Lascivious, wanton, more than well beseems
A man of thy profession and degree").

Wincot, the usual corruption of Wilmecote, a village near Stratford-upon-Avon (where our poet's maternal grandfather, Robert Arden, lived: see Memoir of Shakespeare, i. 16*), iii. 110; iv. 388.

wind, to scent: if she wind you once, vi. 325.

windgalls, iii. 144: "In the neighbourhood of the fetlock there are occasionally found considerable enlargements, oftener on the hind-leg than the fore-one, which are denominated wind-galls. Between the tendons and other parts, and wherever the tendons are exposed to pressure or friction, and particularly about their extremities, little bags or sacs are placed, containing and suffering to ooze slowly from them a mucous fluid to lubricate the parts. From undue pressure, and that most frequently caused by violent action and straining of the tendons, or, often, from some predisposition about the horse, these little sacs are injured. They take on inflammation, and sometimes become large and indurated. There are few horses perfectly free from them. When they first appear, and until the inflammation subsides, they may be accompanied by some degree of lameness; but otherwise, except when they attain a great size, they do not interfere with the action of the animal, or cause any considerable unsoundness. The farriers used to suppose that they contained wind—hence their name, wind-galls; and hence the practice of opening them, by which dreadful inflammation was often produced, and many a valuable horse destroyed. It is not uncommon for wind-galls entirely to disappear in aged horses." The Horse, by Youatt, p. 344, ed. 1848.

windmill in Saint George's field—The, iv. 359: "It appears from the following passage in Churchyard's Dreame, a poem that makes part of the collection entitled his Chippes, 4to, 1578 [first ed., according to Ritson, 1565], that this windmill was a place of notoriety;

'And from the windmill this dreamd he,
Where hakney horses hired be.' (STEVENS):

"In Faithorne's Map of London, 1658; an engraving so rare, that only one perfect copy is known to exist, in the Royal Library at Paris; we see more of Southwark than in any of our early maps. It delineates the entire line of houses from London Bridge to their termination in St. George's fields, and shows the Windmill beyond them. Beyond St. George's Church; a single row of houses line the highway, with small gardens; bounded by a continuous ditch; a rail crosses the road where the houses end; and all is open land beyond; the roadway being marked by a line of palings on both sides. Judging from the apparent length of the houses here represented; and the present state of the same locality; they appear to have terminated about the spot where Suffolk and Trinity street[s] branch off Blackman street; and the Windmill must have stood between there and Horsemonger Lane; nearly opposite the present King's Bench Prison" (FAIRHOLT).

window—In at the, iv. 9: A proverbial expression applied to illegitimate children: compare hatch—O'er the.

window-bars—The, vi. 553: "the lattice of her chamber" (JOHNSON): "It is barely possible that Timon . . . might . . . mean by the window-bars the handkerchief which confined" the breasts (BOSWELL): "The cross-bars or lattice-work worn, as we see it in the Swiss women's dress, across the breasts. In modern times these bars have always a bodice of satin, muslin, or other material beneath them; at one period they crossed the nude bosom" (STAUNTON).

wine—He calls for, &c. iii. 147: "The fashion of introducing a bowl of wine into the church at a wedding, to be drunk by the bride and bridegroom and persons present, was very anciently a constant ceremony; and, as appears from this passage, not abolished in our author's age [It was, in fact, then very common]. We find it practised at the magnificent marriage of Queen Mary and Philip, in Winchester Cathedral, 1554: 'The trumpets sounded, and they both returned . . . to their traverses in the quire . . . and there remayned untill masse was done; at which tyme vyne and sopes were hallowed and delyvered to [unto] them both.' Leland's Collect. Append. vol. iv. p. 400, edit. 1770" (T. WARTON): Muscadel (called also Muscadine) and hippocras were the usual beverages: cakes, too, were sometimes introduced.

wine and sugar—Such, i. 367; to sweeten which name of Ned, I give thee this pennyworth of sugar, clapped even now into my hand by an under-skinker, iv. 233: In Shakespeare's time it was a common custom in England to mix sugar with wine (see p. 375 of the present Glossary): on the second of these passages Steevens observes; "It appears from the following passage in Look about You, 1600, and some others, that the drawers kept sugar folded up in papers, ready to be delivered to those who called for sack;

'but do you hear? [but heere ye, boy?]

Bring sugar in white paper, not in brown.' [Sig. F verso.]

Shakespeare might perhaps allude to a custom mentioned by Decker, in The Gul's Horn Book, 1609; 'Enquire what gallants sup in the next roome, and if they be any of your acquaintance, do not you (after the city fashion) send them in a pottle of wine, and your name sweetened in two pittiful papers of sugar, with some filthy apologie cram'd into the mouth of a drawer,' &c. [p. 159, reprint, 1812]."

winter-ground thy corse—To, vii. 702: "To winter-ground a plant is to protect it from the inclemency of the winter-season by straw, dung, &c. laid over it. This precaution is commonly taken in respect of tender trees or flowers, such as Arviragus, who loved Fidele, represents her to be" (STEEVENS). (In Sylvester's Du Bartas I find a similar compound to winter-ground; there the mower

"Cuts-cross the swathes to winter-feed his farm."

The Capitaines, p. 187, ed. 1641.)

winter's sisterhood—A nun of, iii. 49: By winter's sisterhood "Shakespeare meant an unfruitful sisterhood, which had devoted itself to chastity" (WARBURTON): "Shakespeare poetically feigns a new order of nuns, most appropriate to his subject" (DOUCE).

wise fellow and had good discretion, that, being bid to ask what he would of the king, desired he might know none of his secrets—A, viii. 15: "Who this wise fellow was, may be known from the following passage in Barnabie Riche's Souldier's Wishe to Briton's Welfare, or . . . Captaine Skill and Captaine Pill, 1604, p. 27; 'I will therefore commend the poet Philipides, who being demanded by King Lisimachus, what favour he might doe unto him for that he loved him, made this answer to the king, that your majesty would never impart unto me any of your secrets'" (STEEVENS).

wise gentleman, equivalent to wise-acre, witling: "Certain," said she, "a wise gentleman," ii. 133.

wise woman, was a term formerly applied to female impostors who dealt in fortune-telling, palmistry, the recovering of things lost, physic, &c.: the wise woman of Brentford, i. 404 (see Brentford, &c.); Carry his water to the wise woman, iii. 370.

wish, to recommend: To wish him wrestle with affection, ii. 104; I will wish him to her father, iii. 117; And wish thee to a shrewd ill-favour'd wife, iii. 122; When man was wish'd to love his enemies, vi. 563.

wishful sight, longing sight, v. 272.

wisp of straw were worth a thousand crowns, To make this shameless callet know herself—A, v. 261: "A wisp, or small twist, of straw or hay was often applied as a mark of opprobrium to an immodest woman, a scold, or similar offenders; even the showing it to a woman was, therefore, considered as a grievous affront. . . . Earle, in his character of a scold says, 'There's nothing mads or moves her more to outrage, then but the very naming of a wispe, or if you sing or whistle while she is scolding.' Microcosmog. p. 278, ed. Bliss.

woodbine, the bindweed, the convolvulus : So doth the woodbine the sweet honeysuckle Gently entwine ; the female ivy so Enrings the barked fingers of the elm, ii. 305 : On the words in Jonson's Vision of Delight,

" behold,
How the blue bindweed doth itself infold
With honeysuckle," &c.,

Gifford remarks ; " This passage settles the meaning of the speech of Titania in Midsummer-Night's Dream . . . The woodbine of Shakespeare is the blue bindweed of Jonson : in many of our counties the woodbine is still the name for the great convolvulus." Jonson's Works, vol. vii. p. 308 : My friend the late Rev. John Mitford, an excellent botanist, who at one time had maintained in print that Gifford's explanation of "woodbine" was wrong, acknowledged at last that it was the only true one. (What an odd notion of poetic composition must those interpreters have who maintain that here woodbine and honeysuckle are put in apposition as meaning the same plant—and who, of course, consider entwine to be an intransitive verb!—a notion which Mr. Beisly (Shakspeare's Garden, &c. p. 37) thus most ridiculously amplifies ; " The name ' woodbine ' denotes its character as a climbing plant ; ' honeysuckle ' the property of the flower, which contains a sweet juice " !)

woodcock, a cant term for a simpleton (the woodcock being proverbial as a foolish bird, perhaps because it is easily caught in springs or in nets), ii. 133 ; iii. 125, 259, 357 ; woodcocks, ii. 199 ; vii. 118.

wooden O : see second O. wrongs, and chase them to the bay—To rouse his, iv. 138 : see note 142, ii. 254.

wroth—Patiently to bear my, ii. 376 : "The old editions read 'to bear my wroath.' Wroath is used in some of the old books for misfortune ; and is often spelt like ruth, which at present signifies only pity, or sorrow for the miseries of another. Caxton's Recuyell of the Historyes of Troye, &c. 1471, has frequent instances of wroth. Thus, also, in Chapman's version of the 22nd Iliad,

'born to all the wroth
Of woe and labour'

(STEEVENS):

Qy. have we not here only a various spelling of wrath for the sake of the rhyme ? and does it not mean "angry vexation" ("torturing anger," Richardson's Dict. sub "wrath") ?
